They were not in fear and there was nothing physical so they did not wish to seek a restraining order.

Police gave the teen a ride to his job in town.

Broken bottles

Police were unable to locate youths who had reportedly pulled up to the corner of Surry Drive and Forest Avenue around 9 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 6) and smashed a bunch of bottles before getting back into the car and fleeing toward N. Main Street. A concerned citizen who described the car as a dark-colored Nissan hatchback or Volvo called in the incident.

Checked out

Police said Scituate police tracked down a 70-year-old former resident of their town who now lives in Cohasset outside Wilbur's in North Scituate after Cohasset police received a report that she appeared confused and was trying to pay her bills at Curtis Liquors. Previously, she had been inside CVS where it was reported she was loud and argumentative, police said.

Scituate police who are familiar with the woman said she checked out fine.

House party

Police interrupted a loud house party near North Main Street and Forest Avenue around 11 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 8). There was evidence that alcohol was being consumed and the partygoers were underage, police said. All the parents were called and the teens were driven home. The 18-year-old party host said her parents were away and she was not supposed to have anyone over.

Hit and run

A 76-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last week that her 2005 Honda Civic was damaged in an apparent hit and run accident in the parking lot by St. Stephen's Church. Police said the front right bumper and front right headlight were damaged. She reported the incident on Monday (Aug. 5) three days after it occurred and wanted an incident report.

Police said there were no witnesses and encourage people to report incidents as soon as they know even if that involves just making a phone call to police so they can log it in.

RECITAL SERIES

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series continues at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above. Parking is ample and free.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

AROUND TOWN

Liam Placek earns book award from Saint Michael's

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Heartfelt

Hi there, Cohasset. Hoping that everyone is doing OK this week and are able to enjoy some beautiful summer weather! As a community, I know that we were all very saddened and shocked to learn earlier this week of the tragic death of 9-year-old Dylan Gold and the injuries that his brother Wyatt and mom Allison sustained while away in Maine on vacation. Our hearts are heavy and as a community, whether we know the Gold family or not, we offer our prayers and heartfelt condolences.

I know that Dylan left so many people with amazing and beautiful memories of who he was in his 9 years and those are the "mind paintings" that you grasp onto when it seems overwhelming and the question of "why?" comes into play. We do know that Dylan would want to be remembered for all his good...the fun times, his smarts, his curiosity and the love of his family.

Saint Michael's

Here is some wonderful news about Liam Placek of Cohasset, a student at Cohasset Jr. Sr. High School, who was named the 2013 recipient of the Saint Michael's College Book Award for Academic Achievement with a Social Conscience.

The award recognizes students who demonstrate a commitment to leadership in volunteer service and academic achievement. Saint Michael's, Burlington, Vt., was founded on the belief that serving others is part of its Catholic tradition, and through the award seeks to honor those who demonstrate the true spirit of volunteerism.

Award recipients, named at schools throughout the country, are high school juniors who are inductees of the National Honor Society or an equivalent school-sponsored honors organization. They must demonstrate a commitment to service activities in high school or community organizations, taking leadership roles in these activities.

Liam was presented the book "First They Killed My Father: A Daughter of Cambodia Remembers" by Loung Ung, a 1993 Saint Michael's College graduate.

RPI grads

Congratulations to the Cohasset students who earned degrees from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in May 2013: Jonathan Choi earned a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering and a master's degree in electrical engineering; Daniel Martin earned a bachelor of science degree in business and management; and Timothy Treese earned a bachelor of science degree in mathematics.

Union College

The following Cohasset residents were awarded dean's list honors from Union College for the 2012-13 academic year: William Craven, Class of 2016, a graduate of Bridgton Academy; Danielle Frederick, Class of 2016, a 2012 graduate of Milton Academy; and Aisling Kearns, Class of 2013, a 2009 graduate of Cohasset Middle High School.

To make dean's list, students must receive a 3.5 grade point average for the entire academic year. They also must meet several other requirements to be awarded the honor.

Great work, congratulations!

Rochester

Here are the latest honors from the University of Rochester:

David Patrick Toomey, a senior majoring in molecular genetics at the University of Rochester, has been named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2013 spring semester. Toomey, a resident of Cohasset is the son of Mark D. and Sheila Toomey, and a graduate of Cohasset Middle/High School.

Danielle Lauren Sookiasian, a sophomore majoring in molecular genetics at the University of Rochester, has been named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2013 spring semester. She is the daughter of Susan Sookiasian and Art Sookiasian, and a graduate of Cohasset Middle/High School.

Farmers markets

I do want to remind you of the weekly Cohasset Farmers Market on the Common in Thursday afternoons at 2 p.m. and on Saturdays, beginning at 11 a.m. the farmers market at Holly Hill Farm on Jerusalem Road. Both have a wonderful assortment of produce, flowers, meats and other foods with the Thursday market having entertainment and the Saturday market at Holly Hill having the animals and open trails. Shop fresh, shop local, shop healthy!

Abbey concert

Here is a wonderful event for the family and end of the weekend. The Sunset at the Abbey Concert with Atlantic Symphony Chamber Players and acoustic rock band Border Road, featuring works by Bach, Copland, Arlen, Liszt, Chuck Mangione and the Beatles.

This takes place this Sunday, August 18, at 4 pm, on the lawn at Glastonbury Abbey, Hull Street and is a great family show for everyone. Tickets are $15 at the gate or available online at: atlanticsymphony.org

Great job!

Huge congratulations to the staff of the Summer Cohasset Recreation Camp Program! Once again, Ted Carroll and his staff put together a program for children in this community that was top-notch and parents thank you, great job Cohasset Rec!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

Jasmine is one of a kind!

PAULA J. FATERSIK

If you have always wanted a great companion who will spend time with you and who needs and loves you as much as you love them, Jasmine may be your precious kitty. COURTESY PHOTO

She is stunning, friendly, full of eager energy and loves attention. Purry, chatty and loving, it is hard to imagine that a beauty like Jasmine had to come to a shelter. Her previous family was unable to keep her and we are hoping for the most special forever home for Jasmine. We love her and it is obvious that she is used to, and needs, lots of affection, playtime, love and companionship.

At just two years old, this fabulous tiger feline has luxurious fur that is a unique coppery orange and white mix. When she rolls over you see her pretty white belly. And her paws? Well, they are all doubles! She could wear little mittens! When she gets comfy with you, she will let you rub them and it is a joy to get closer and closer with her and share moments like that. One of Jasmine's obvious physical traits is her pretty face with wide golden eyes. There is so much to love about this girl and she deserves the best and most loving family or person ever.

If you have always wanted a great companion who will spend time with you and who needs and loves you as much as you love them, Jasmine may be your precious kitty.

To learn more about this absolute beauty please call Judy at 781-534-4902. She is waiting to meet you and a really loving forever home will be purrfect... so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

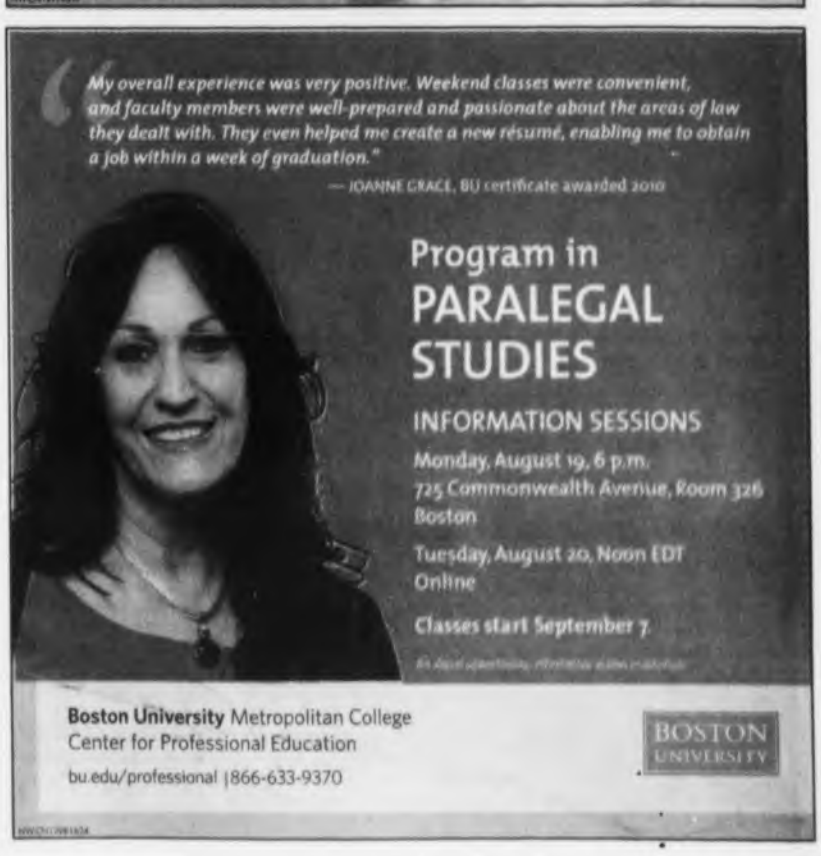
You can see more of our wonderful adult cats who are waiting for the best homes by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

Just a quick reminder that the Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin' will be at our shelter on Wednesday, August 28th. There has been an explosion of litters this season and we are continuing to receive calls to take in more kittens. We want to help them all, but space is limited so having adult cats spayed and neutered is essential. If you or someone you know has a cat who needs to be altered please call us at 781-925-3121 for an appointment. Leave a detailed message and your call will be returned. Drop off is at 8 a.m. and your pet can be picked up later in the day.

We still have quite a few kittens coming in and some will be available for adoption soon. They are little bundles of fun and full of energy and silly antics. If you have time to raise a new pair of frisky family members, please call or come to see them. They are simply irresistible.

With the influx of babies we are still in need of wet kitten food. If you are planning on donating to a shelter, please consider ours or another 501(c)(3) non profit. We survive on grants, gifts and donations and our incoming cats and kittens rely on all of us to keep them safe and healthy.

Laundry detergent and cleaning supplies are also needed to keep a clean environment for them. We appreciate your help in this area.



As many of our volunteers who have children are beginning the countdown and gearing up for first days back to school, they still manage to come to the shelter to help with shifts, socializing, and spending time working on projects for the shelter. Our sincere thanks and gratitude go out to them, and all of the people who make Hull Seaside Animal Rescue a part of their week. The dedication, love and care shown for all of our animals keeps us moving forward and doing the most good for abandoned, needy and rescued cats and kittens.

To all of our supporters, thank you for everything you have done and continue to do.

Paula J. Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Farmers market news

Here's what's happening at the Cohasset Farmers Market next week.

All things tomato

British journalist Miles Kington famously said, "Knowledge is knowing a tomato is a fruit; wisdom is not putting it into a fruit salad."

You could put your tomato is a fruit salad, but the farmers market has an even more fun suggestion. Get ready to enter your tomatoes in the Cohasset Farmers Market Annual Tomato Contest, next Thursday, August 22. Categories include biggest, most unusual, and most beautiful. The contest is open to all, with prizes awarded for each category.

Did you know?

- Tomatoes are an excellent source of vitamin C and vitamin A.
- The antioxidant lycopene, abundant in tomatoes, may reduce the risk of prostate, lung and stomach cancer.
- Tomatoes should be stored in a single layer in a cool, dry place (not in the refrigerator).
- Tomatoes are really a fruit!

Easy tomato recipe

Coarsely chop some locally-grown tomatoes.

Add chopped sweet onion, fresh corn kernels, basil and shredded cheese of your choice.

Salt lightly and drizzle with olive oil and vinegar.

Coming up at the market

The market features musical entertainment on the town green every week. Come hear the vibrant and eclectic sound of Ramshackle on August 22.

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday, 2 to 6:30 p.m. through October 17. For more information, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

DON'T MISS THIS

Anthony Everett of Cohasset visits with John Hornstra of Hornstra Farms. A Chronicle episode highlighting local farms and discussing the trend of the farm to table movement aired Wednesday night and will be shown again on Sunday, Aug. 18 (11:30am-12 pm) on WCVB-TV Channel 5. COURTESY PHOTO

Hornstra Farms is on Chronicle

A Chronicle episode highlighting local farms and discussing the trend of the farm to table movement will air again Sunday, Aug. 18, from 11:30 a.m. to noon on WCVB-TV Channel 5.

Chronicle celebrates the people who make eating local a delight, as they visit a fruit farm that is a favorite among Boston chefs; meet a self-professed tomato snob who's making very popular pastas and sauces; see a unique program in action that introduces city kids to the joys of farming; and discover that the milkman is not just a thing of the past.

During the episode Cohasset's Anthony Everett visits Hornstra Farms of Hingham and Norwell. Anthony uncovers this local farm's roots, founded by Dutch immigrants in 1915 and has yet to miss a delivery throughout their 98-years in business. This South Shore favorite now has seven refrigerated delivery trucks serving more than 3,000 customers about 2,600 gallons of milk each week, plus ice cream juices and other products.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Holly Hill 5k trail race and fun run

Save the date for the sixth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail race and 1 mile fun run / walk on Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset.

The 5k race begins at 9 a.m. and the 1 mile fun run will be at 10:30 a.m. The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 4 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers, and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook, and a pond. Online sign ups will begin on Sept. 6.

Sign up early and get a super cool reusable organic cotton produce bag. Proceeds from the races benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

SUMMER FUN

Bicycle ride

Rentals available at Cohasset store

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Summer is breezing on by, but you can still breeze around Cohasset — in a beach cruiser, no less.

Cohasset's outdoor athletic store, Outside In, has been offering bicycle rentals this summer and will continue to do so through October.

Shop owner Tracy Cameron thinks it's a different way to see the sights.

"It's a neat way to see the area, and gives you a chance to go to the beach and enjoy this coastal town," said Cameron of Cohasset. The seven-speed Schwinn bikes she is renting are comfortable to ride and lightweight, she added, "perfect for a leisure cruise around town."

Bike rentals

Outside In offers bicycle rentals at the following rates:

- $20 for half a day
- $25 for full day
- $30 for two days
- $45 for three days
- $60 for four days
- $100 for a week

Outside In has been part of the Cohasset Village for just over two years. The store specializes in athletic and lifestyle apparel for men and women, and recently won South Shore Living's "Best of the South Shore" award for men's apparel.

Cameron opened up shop with her mother, Maria Monaco, who relocated from New Jersey to the South Shore to be closer to her daughter and grandchildren. The mother-and-daughter team decided to start a business together.

The two women value a healthy, active lifestyle; Monaco is an avid golfer while Cameron enjoys skiing and mountain climbing (she was featured in the Mariner last year after scaling the Grand Teton).

Of course, she enjoys biking, too.

Perhaps soon, Cohasset will be in line with bigger cities like Boston and New York, which offer bicycle-sharing programs for tourists or residents who want to find alternate ways to get around. In addition to offering good exercise, biking also reduces the amount of environmental pollutants.

Neighboring town Hull offers a similar bike renting service with Nantasket Beach Bikes, although Cameron said that her customers can bike from Cohasset to Hull as well.

"We're an active store, and have some fun ideas to make the community more active," said Cameron.

Cycling also helps travelers and locals alike to slow down, take a breath, and appreciate the scenery, she added.

The bikes are especially popular with "weekend warriors," the shop owner said — people who are in town for weddings or just want to spend a few days on the coast. Having bikes available not only provides a service to weekend visitors, but helps bring more business to Cohasset, said Cameron.

"I thought it would make the town feel like a great place to visit, to get out of the city," Cameron said. "A lot of people don't really stay in Cohasset; they just drive through it. Now, they can rent a bike and make a day of it."

Currently, only adult-sized bikes are available, but Cameron said that she would eventually like to expand to include children's bikes.

Bikes are rented on an hourly or multi-day basis (see sidebar). The longer one rents a bike, "the less and less expensive" it gets, said Cameron. "I try to keep rates reasonable."

Outside In offers bike delivery; Cameron said that she delivered a bike to a customer vacationing in Hull. At the end of the season, this year's bikes will be available for purchase at a reduced rate, and new bikes will be ordered for next year.

"I've had a lot of interest in buying them," said Cameron. "People really like the beach cruisers."

Tracy Cameron unlocks bikes that you can rent at her store Outside In on South Main Street. The store specializes in athletic and lifestyle apparel for men and women.

OUR VIEW

Revisit the policy, again

What may have seemed like a "no-brainer" in terms of selectmen setting a sensible policy turned into a small controversy recently when selectmen (in a majority vote) rescinded their year-old policy of having requests for records and information that fall outside of the town employee's normal scope of work go through the Town Manager's office.

We think the policy that the board enacted unanimously in July 2012 made sense for the most part and deserves another look perhaps with some clarification. Clearly, the intent of the policy was to streamline requests; it was not to prevent an employee from even talking to a selectman or anyone else for that matter.

We agree with Selectman Steve Gaumer who was the sole vote against recision, that selectmen's role is not as overseers of town employees but as overseers of one employee, the Town Manager. Therefore, selectmen ought to let him manage.

There is certainly nothing wrong with revisiting and clarifying a policy. After all, it is the selectmen's role to set policy.

In a letter to the editor last week, Paul Carlson who was selectmen chairman when the policy on information requests was enacted by a unanimous vote, pointed out that the policy provided town employees with a layer of protection from requests for extra work, particularly in departments that are understaffed and during periods of heavy workloads.

Carlson said he was unaware of any problems with promptly obtaining town information during the year the policy was in place – rather the only complaint was that some selectmen recently complained they were not able to make direct requests to employees.

There is certainly nothing wrong with revisiting and clarifying a policy. After all, it is the selectmen's role to set policy. However, we wonder if they acted in haste by tossing this policy out altogether.

Selectman Diane Kennedy suggested allowing the town employees to decide if they would like to bring forward a suggested policy of their own. While it would be good to hear what town employees and department heads think about the issue, the Town Manager should be allowed to weigh in and be listened to. After all, it is his job – not the selectmen's — to manage the town as efficiently as possible.

It should also be made clear and it bears repeating that the policy was for requests outside the normal scope of work and was not meant to govern routine requests.

PLANNING MATTERS

A lifetime of care for adults with developmental disabilities

If the parents can put this team together ahead of time, so that everyone can get to know each other, it will make the transition that much easier.

LEANNA HAMILL

I recently spoke with a group of parents at the Friendship Home in Norwell, which is a day program and respite home for adults with developmental disabilities. While every parent needs to make provisions for their young children to make sure someone would be able to care for them if the parents can't, parents of children with special needs must keep this consideration in mind their whole life. Their children face the possibility of needing someone to assist them long after they have reached the age of majority, and long after the parents are no longer around.

Parents of children with special needs often put off planning simply because they feel overwhelmed trying to find the right person to replace them – someone who will love their child, advocate for them, handle finances, accompany them to medical appointments, shop for clothing with or for them, and see that their educational and social needs are met. They may want to name a sibling or other family member to be guardian but wonder if it is fair to burden them with all that needs to be done.

One of the things I talked about with the parents at the Friendship Home was assembling a team that could take over these duties, rather than trying to find one person to play so many roles. Some of them shared that the key was making sure they have the right people in the appropriate roles. While there may be an attorney involved already helping with the estate planning, you wouldn't want this person taking over shopping duties. Likewise, if there is a nurse helping out with medical appointments, they wouldn't also take over money management.

Most people will choose a family member to serve as guardian. This person would have primary responsibility over the person with disabilities but would be able to hire a team to assist him or her with their duties. If the parents can put this team together ahead of time, so that everyone can get to know each other, it will make the transition that much easier.

A separate trustee could be named to oversee any funds left to the child, and make distributions in consultation with the rest of the team. This would relieve the guardian of that responsibility and allow them to have a second set of eyes on the funds. The trustee of course could hire an attorney to help them with their duties, and use a financial advisor to help them best invest the funds.

On the medical side of things, a nurse could be hired attend doctor's appointments, provide assistance when medical decisions need to be made and serve as the overseer of medical issues, reporting to the guardian. This professional could be brought in while the parents are still around, so they can get to know the new potential guardian and person they would be working with. Again, this will provide for a smoother transition when the parents are no longer able to serve, and can be a valuable resource even when the parents are still serving as guardian.

If the guardian does not live nearby, or is busy with other responsibilities in their own life, they may find it helpful to bring on a team member who can do errands for the individual. Picking up some groceries, taking someone shopping for shoes or couriering papers back and forth in a bind are all things that can be done by a personal shopper or errand service, rather than a more expensive option. Again, having this person meet the individual with whom they will be working while the parents

State budget funds for Cohasset school security

GARRETT BRADLEY

Cohasset will be receiving $49,800 in funds in this year's budget for the implementation of increased safety measures in the public schools.

As a parent in the Town of Hingham, I was deeply saddened by the senseless mass shootings at Sandy Hook Elementary School. As a public official, I asked myself what more should government provide toward a safe learning environment for our young people.

Following Sandy Hook, I explored ways that I could be helpful in addressing security issues within our local schools. My mission was to take an honest look at what our schools are doing now to ensure school safety and what we should be doing to enhance it. To this end, I contacted local municipal and school leaders in Cohasset and asked for their help on the issue of improving school safety. We discussed implementing more safety measures and the cost of providing enhanced security.

As expected, I received tremendous assistance from my local partners. The Town of Cohasset will be receiving $49,800 in funds in this year's budget for the implementation of increased safety measures in the public schools. The funding represents Cohasset officials' request based on the costs associated with their plans.

A House-Senate conference committee reached agreement on the budget on June 30. The full House passed the conference report on July 1, 2013, by a vote of 122 to 29. Although the Governor vetoed sections of the budget, including sections on local aid and education monies that encompassed Cohasset's security upgrades, the Legislature overwhelmingly overrode the Governor's veto on July 24, 2013.

The legislative process by design is a very deliberative one. It is beneficial to take the time to study an issue and when the moment comes for a decision, we want to get it right. I cannot say enough about the positive spirit of collaboration that exists among our local, state and school officials. Thanks to a cooperative effort, this money will enhance security within our school system. This is how government is supposed to work. Public officials coming together, analyzing a problem and working cooperatively to a common solution. I thank all the local officials for their time and effort.

Garrett J. Bradley is the representative in the Massachusetts House of Representatives for the 3rd Plymouth district, which consists of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Saturday's plant sale is well worth a visit

JON BELBER

Basil, kale, chard, spinach and herbs of all kinds are just a few of the seedlings waiting for healthy soil and fall growth.

Though it may be time to sharpen pencils, look for a new sturdy backpack, consider the onslaught of chrysanthemums and spend late nights finishing off assigned summer reading books, it is not time to say goodbye to all the joys of summer.

In fact, the Atlantic waters are at their warmest for swimming and there are plenty of warm days left until summer officially bids farewell on the 21st of September. But as folks prepare for a virtual change of season, the farmers at Holly Hill are planning a plant sale, in hopes of continuing the notion of seed sowing, transplanting and harvesting crops well into October and November.

This Saturday, Aug. 17th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., they are encouraging many to come to the farm to tilt against logic and purchase plants for the fall.

Some late summer gardens and even some farm fields are complete with persistent weeds, while many are also filled with returning rows of arugula, ripening tomatoes, tops of hidden carrots, hidden zucchini under their spiky vines and complete beets, roots, stems and leaves, all set for the harvest and the table.

Plenty of flowers are showing their color and ready for a crisp cut and a new life in a thoughtfully created bouquet. As these vegetables, fruits and flowers come to fruition and enjoyment, it is a good time to think about the coming days and weeks when these vegetables will give way.

Trays and trays of seedlings are set to begin anew in a soon to be vacant garden or in a section of the garden where weeds have had their way.

Basil, kale, chard, spinach and herbs of all kinds are just a few of the seedlings waiting for healthy soil and fall growth. There are also seeds to sow directly in the ground before the frost hits here on the South Shore. I will try and bring plants and seeds for the local school farm gardens, so the autumn participants (students and teachers) can also share in the harvest.

There will be plenty of help at the plant sale, if needed, as this effort to find crops that can co-exist with the warm days, but cooler nights and fewer hours of sunlight, could be tricky. Any seed sowing and transplanting needs to be done carefully, as we ask a lot of our soil and plants, to keep up their production as we continue to try and grow well into a New England fall.

This plant sale can serve as an inspiration to grow more food and perhaps even more, as a dear New Englander always says and tries, "How terrific it is to have something fresh from the garden (or farm) for the Thanksgiving table."

Plant and grow on, as we all still need to eat.

SENIOR SCENE

Here's hoping for more good weather

LOUISE SMULLEN

First all that rain, then an extended period of record-breaking heat and high humidity. I'm hoping this weather will continue at least until this is published.

What a beautiful summer day! Warm enough for going to the beach but cool enough for gardening and household tasks. Never in all my years do I remember a summer like this has been so far. First all that rain, then an extended period of record-breaking heat and high humidity. I'm hoping this weather will continue at least until this is published.

On a hot day in July, we traveled by van to the Allerton House, where we enjoyed a delicious barbeque. We sat outdoors under an awning and there was a delightful breeze keeping us cool.

The next day, Cohasset Seniors were guests at a brunch served at Fairing Way, which is in part of the old Naval Air Base in South Weymouth. A hearty brunch of bacon, eggs, fresh fruit and more was served. I hear that the chocolate dipped strawberries were especially tasty. Fairing Way will be a new facility for seniors. After the brunch, guests were shown a model of what the place will be like.

Also in July, a group joined people from surrounding towns for the annual lunch at Glastonbury Abbey. Hot dogs, hamburgers and salads were enjoyed by all, with tasty homemade cookies for dessert. At the end of July, we were treated to another barbeque at Golden Living.

On Aug. 15, Mike Filby, a Cohasset resident, was at the Center to discuss a way to sell your unnecessary furniture and equipment while helping a worthwhile cause.

Enjoy the rest of the summer everyone. Time is fleeting and it will be September before we know it.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Do you make it a great day?

GLENN MANGURIAN

We can choose to just get through the day, or we can choose to make today count.

"The tragedy of life is not that it ends so soon, but that we wait so long to begin it." – W.M. Lewis.

A few months ago my daughter Laura and her husband returned to Hingham after two years of living in Fairbanks, Alaska, where Dan was stationed as an Army officer. A few weeks ago I noticed that when I talk to Laura she ends each conversation with the expression, "Make it a great day." I usually respond, "You have a good day too." The other day we went through the "make it a great day" routine but Laura replied, "Don't have a good day, Dad, make it great."

Have a great day. Make it a great day. What's the difference? I finally got it. We can actually influence what happens and how we relate to those things. One shows that you have power over your circumstances and the other implies that your circumstances have power over you. We can choose to just get through the day, or we can choose to make today count. Sometimes great days happen but most of the time, great days happen because we make them happen (and we don't do that enough). If we wait for others to "make our day," we may be waiting a long time.

Each day we have an opportunity to enrich our lives and the lives of others around us. I guess the place to start is by appreciating the abundance in our lives. Be thankful for the experiences we've had, and the things we have learned. Then, look for ways to make a difference – in our work, in our family, with our friends, and with perfect strangers. We can make the world better one person at a time.

By the way grab a happy attitude. Look for opportunities to laugh. Don't take yourself too seriously. Instead choose to have a little fun (and don't feel guilty). How we relate to the circumstances in our lives is a choice. It can all start today. So, make it a great one (or not). It's your choice.

Glenn Mangurian is a Hingham resident of 25 years. He spends his time consulting, teaching leadership and making each day great. He welcomes your comments and can be reached at gmangurian@frontierworks.com.

GREGORY MATHIS

If you've ever seen "Jerry Maguire," you know mission statements go beyond spelling out policies. It's a concept or an idea that directs and guides all other decisions.

The mother on the other end of the phone line was upset that more couldn't be done regarding the publication of a story detailing the arrest of her daughter. A somewhat civil conversation became contentious and nasty when she didn't receive the answer she was seeking. She raised her voice and began launching verbal barbs against the newspaper, the company and me personally, as if I had anything to do with her daughter's incident. These types of calls happen more frequently than you might imagine, but during her tirade she posed a somewhat simple question that during less tense times would make for a thoughtful discussion.

The question lingered long after the conversation wrapped up and the day's remaining tasks were dealt with.

"What's your mission statement?"

In the heat of the moment the answer didn't roll quickly and easily off the tip of my tongue and focused more on policy rather than mission. We get numerous calls weekly regarding police-related issues and spend a great deal of time reciting company policies and guidelines. But policies and guidelines aren't a mission statement.

If you've ever seen "Jerry Maguire," you know mission statements go beyond spelling out policies. It's a concept or an idea that directs and guides all other decisions. We have many policies – from reporting on police/court news, to local, state and national election coverage, to letters to the editor, and more. A mission statement, however, should be a clear and succinct idea that helps tie all those policies together in one neat bow.

Once the phone call with the mother ended and I had a chance later during the weekend to reflect on the discussion, I came up with what I think our mission statement is: To be a dependable and accurate source of information for the community – in print and online.

We've talked about maintaining those standards in our newsrooms for years, even if it wasn't written on a chalkboard or inscribed on the first page of the company handbook. There is a lot encapsulated in that one sentence that needs to be expanded to get a true sense of what it means.

My first newspaper publisher, the late Phyllis Hughes, said it was our mission at the former MPG Newspapers to cover people's lives in the community from birth to death, and everything in between. That sentiment has stuck with me throughout my career and has been a guiding force in the way I view community journalism.

It means we cover and provide space for a lot of personal news – birth announcements, school achievements, youth and high school sports accomplishments, graduations, engagements, weddings, anniversaries, business/career recognitions, even obituaries – pretty much every milestone a person living in the community encounters during a lifetime.

But beyond milestones and life achievements, there are other things happening in the community that fall under the label of bad news – tragic car accidents, controversial town government stories, drunk driving arrests, neighborhood disputes, domestic abuse, murder.

We're sometimes accused of only reporting on the bad news, but hopefully you'll consistently find a mix of all the above mentioned examples in your community newspaper and on your Wicked Local website.

That's our mission, anyway.

MARSHFIELD FAIR

STARTS TODAY

Fair combines old with new

10-day event has something for everyone

Marshfield resident Richard Ingham creates a display for Agi Hall.

By Mary Jane Hanron
mhanron@wickedlocal.com

A blending of new and old, tradition and trend, fun and learning – that is what the 2013 Marshfield Fair offers visitors during 10 days in August.

Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society President Leonard LaForest said more than 160,000 fairgoers are expected to pass through the gates beginning Friday, Aug. 16 at noon through Sunday, August 25 at 10 p.m.

"It's the best bang for the buck around for family entertainment," LaForest said of the extravaganza offering casual entertainment, endless displays, carnival atmospherics, live music and an abundance of experiences and opportunities unmatched on the South Shore. Traditional fair displays and exhibits return as farmers' products, crafts, and activities flourish throughout the grounds.

Entertainment for children is everywhere from a petting zoo to a kiddie ride section to a Lego contest. A kid's station passport guides youngsters through the fair to discover new information while obtaining stamps at each stop. Upon completion, children may select a prize at a designated shop on the fairgrounds.

"Families enjoy (the passport)," said LaForest. "It is a way for people of all ages to experience what we offer together."

Special theme days are scheduled throughout the 10-day event. Among them are senior day, kids day, and blues festival day. New this year is country western day on Wednesday, Aug 21. LaForest said many fairgoers plan their visit around a selected theme, and others enjoy what they discover upon arrival at the grounds.

Demolition Derby, tractor pulls, live music shows and countless contests and animal demonstrations are scheduled. The midway will feature the always popular games and rides.

Food selections will offer traditional "fair fare," along with several spots to sit, relax and enjoy the setting.

LaForest suggests families consider the day as two-part adventure.

"We have many families that come in the day with kids and enjoy the activities," he said. "They can get their hand stamped when they leave, go home and put the kids to bed and return for an evening of food, music and entertainment. We really have it all here!"

Agi Hall has a little bit of everything

Check out best of region in flowers, crafts, and more

By Mary Jane Hanron
mhanron@wickedlocal.com

A week before the Marshfield Fair was to open its gates for the 146th time; horticulture director Roni Lahage was busy on the lower floor of Agi Hall overseeing space preparation for flower and plant entries that would arrive within days.

A monumental task, groundwork and set up for the 10-day annual event had been underway for some time. Volunteers and staff hammered, swept, painted and organized shelves, displays, walls and tables as the premier building of the fairgrounds was transformed and freshened to welcome guests come this Friday.

"There is nothing like experiencing the Marshfield Fair," said Lahage. "Where else can you pat a cow or watch a sheep sheering, see fancy chickens and watch eggs hatch? And how many of us just want to sit and hold a bunny?"

Lahage enumerated other favorite opportunities offered at the Fair including watching farm tractors, ox and pony pulls, listening to a variety of music, observing butterflies, starting Christmas shopping and falling in love with something new that could become a lifelong a hobby.

Agi Hall in particular is a hub for the traditional fair exhibits but features new and innovative ideas applied to horticulture, agriculture and home crafts.

Lahage described the simple traditions and opportunities of the Fair as similar to those experienced by farmers and their families who gathered more than 100 years ago in August to share stories, products, amusement and information.

"So much of what we do is about education and entertainment," she said. "Showing flowers and vegetables that grow in our area, helping people to understand where the food they eat comes from and finding answers to questions or solutions to problems happens all day every day as it did many years ago when farmers first gathered here."

Some of what occurs in the Hall and surrounding grounds has an air of sophistication to rival cosmopolitan events anywhere.

"Our floor displays may remind people of the Boston Flower Show," she said.

The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts presents its 14th annual standard flower show, "The Best of Boston," which attracts entrants from far and wide.

Numerous activities and programs surround the floral theme over the course of the 10-day event, including a "Wine and Roses" tour of all garden exhibits (August 23). There will be themed displays – flower arrangements interpreting "A Midsummer Night's Dream," books in bloom, holiday mantels and container gardens – to check out. Opportunities for gardeners of all ages abound including some team categories like grandparent/grandchild arrangements.

The Agricultural Hall and the Memorial Garden are being prepared for the upcoming fair Saturday, August 10, at the Marshfield Fairgrounds. PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD

Lahage urges visitors to check the schedule on the Marshfield Fair website for daily happenings and presentations.

The Dahlia show (Sunday, Aug. 18) and sunflower show (Tuesday, Aug. 20) are two popular events. Demonstrations will occur throughout the Fair's duration including horticulturalist Paul Split cooking with garden herbs (Sunday, Aug. 18) and curb appeal walkways both Saturdays of the fair where attendees can glean tips for increasing property value with simple alterations to the outdoors.

Just the approach to Agi Hall offers the splendor of local flora as outdoor boxes cultivated through the season include a water garden and bird garden.

Arts & crafts

The upper floor of Agi Hall will feature an artist's corner, gift shop with unique handmade items, a quilting display, model boats, cars and airplanes, multiple forms of artwork, photography, pottery, basketry, doll clothes, pillowcases and hand carvings.

Many of the crafts on display on the upper floor of Agi Hall were derived from household chores and activities done by farm families over a century ago, according to arts and crafts manager Deidre Thurber.

"We have a super collection of items this year," she said. "Agi Hall offers a wonderful and diverse experience for everyone."

Thurber is most excited about the presence of painters who will be in the Hall at work on their creations. "It adds a lovely dimension to the event," she said. "It is fun and different and an opportunity for the fairgoers to see our artists doing what they do."

In the grandstand

A few steps away on the grounds visitors will be able to view vegetables, fruits and farm products on display in the grandstand. From numerous varieties of cabbage, squash and tomatoes, to cantaloupe, garlic and peaches, farmers and growers will showcase their goods in mouthwatering and meaningful ways.

Canned goods, honey, eggs and cranberries are among the edibles to be viewed. Ever popular, the largest pumpkin contest makes its home in the grandstand, too.

Members of local 4-H Club chapters care for animals on display in the barns. Visitors can learn about the animals and, in some cases, get up close and personal. Throughout the fair, members participate in shows and demonstrations during which spectators can see features and qualities of each entry. The 4-H Club participants use skills and knowledge they have gained throughout the summer preparing and caring for the animals and are responsible for the animal's well being during the Fair.

"Inspiring, fun and educational, all at the same time," was how Lahage summarized the Fair.

"It completes the summer for so many," she said. "I can't imagine anyone coming here of any age who would not be fascinated by something. In addition to understanding what connects us to our past, what people learn here can guide them into the future. They know about what is available locally and may even become interested in a new hobby. It is an experience like no other!"

The Cohasset Recreation Concert Series Summer 2013 is underway and next up on Thursday (Aug. 22) is local favorite, New City Cowboys which include: Jim and Gerard Armstrong, Bill Holbrook, PJ Justice, and Ian Campbell. All the guys have honed their craft as part of other South Shore bands including: The Fat City Band, the Armstrong Brothers Band, The Infractions, The Keepers, and the list goes on. Now, with The New City Cowboys, the band plays country music from the likes of Kenny Chesney, Jason Aldean, Eric Church, and others, as well as some original country songs.

The entire series, which also included performances by the Rusty Skippers, Trooper Dan Clark, Souled Out, Matt Browne, and Mark and Wendy, is funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is also supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

All concerts begin at 6 p.m. on Cohasset Common and end at approximately 7:45 p.m.

Make an evening of it. Concerts are held after the Cohasset Farmer's Market. All performances are free, open to the public and handicap accessible, rain or shine (If it rains, concerts are held indoors at Town Hall). Bring a blanket or folding chairs. AWARDS

Two Cohasset men win top '40 under 40'

Two Cohasset businessmen will receive a special honor this September — the South Shore Stars' "40 Under 40" award, which recognizes emerging leaders for their professional accomplishments, civic engagement, and demonstrated leadership potential. South Shore Stars is a non-profit early childhood and youth development organization for communities south of Boston.

Benjamin Langis and Joseph Pannozzo have both been selected to receive this award.

Langis, Vice President of State Street Corporations, was selected by a panel of local judges to receive this award. Langis served as a US Navy Officer for five years and is currently working within State Street to find better ways to leverage veteran talents within the corporation.

Joseph Pannozzo, Chief Development Officer at Rhode Island Hospital and Hasbro Children's Hospital, was also selected. He has been working in the fundraising discipline in and across higher education and medical institutions in the greater Boston area since 19. He has also worked with local organization My Brother's Keeper and has served as a board member of South Shore Habitat for humanity since 2008.

The honorees will receive their awards at a gala tented reception and awards ceremony on Friday, September 27 at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy. FOX25 Anchor Sorboni Banerjee will emcee the festivities.

Proceeds from the reception will benefit Stars' early education and youth development programs for children across the South Shore.

Tickets for the 40 Under 40 Awards ceremony are available now. To purchase tickets or view the complete list of 40 Under 40 Award recipients, visit www.southshorestars.org.

Stars provides comprehensive early education and youth programs that help children across the South Shore reach their full developmental potential. From Early Head Start and preschool to K-12 and summer camp programs, Stars works collaboratively with families to foster positive youth development.

PLANNING

are still around can be helpful when it is time to make the transition. It can also help relieve some of the responsibility from the parents as they age.

The bottom line is, it truly does take a village to raise a child, and in some cases to keep helping to raise that child even when they are 30 or 50 or 60. Expecting one person to do it all is just asking for burn out and exhaustion, even when that person is the parent.

What are Public/Legal Notices?

Public notices are announcements from all levels and branches of government, as well as from individuals and businesses that inform you about government actions, environmental conditions and economic changes. They alert you when your interests, your family or your community is affected by what others do, and they invite you to participate in the democratic process or in business opportunities.

Watch this newspaper for public notices that inform you about things like:

- the restaurant at the end of the block that applied for a liquor license
- a proposed tax increase on the school board's agenda
- the neighbor that applied for a permit to enlarge her house
- the sewer authority that is issuing bonds to finance a new plant

Home debut on tap

Coastal Chiefs set for home slate at Hanover HS

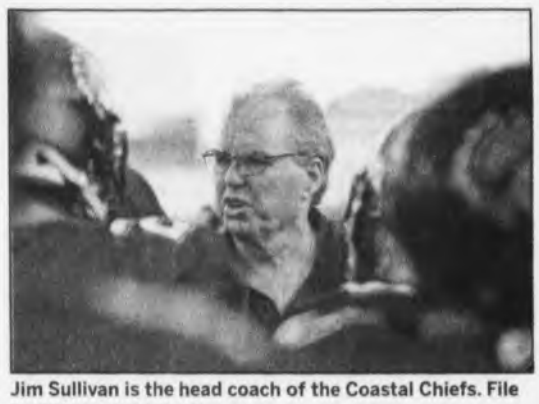
By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

There have been three things that the Coastal Chiefs have tried to do in their brief history, according their coach Jim Sullivan, the former long-time Norwell High School coach who was also on the coaching staff at Cohasset at one time.

"The first thing we wanted to do is to go out and compete," said Sullivan. "We wanted to go out and have our offense be productive and our defense play very well. The next goal for us it to win. We are going in a positive direction. We feel that we can win some games."

The Chiefs will play four of their remaining five regular season games at home.

They will start with their home opener at Hanover High on Saturday at 5 p.m. against the Mid-Coast Falcons. The Chiefs lost a 34-13 decision to the Falcons at Knox, Maine earlier this year.



Sullivan knows that even though his team will have home games they will face some tough competition.

"The four teams that we face (both home and away) on our schedule have a great combined record between them," said Sullivan. "We are going against tough competition. We will have the Falcons at home. The Falcons this time will have to make the four or five hour trip to Hanover."

The Chiefs are getting better each week according to the coach.

The game that they had with the undefeated East Coast Ducks went down to the final minutes. The Ducks held off the Chiefs 20-6.

"The game was 12-6 with just under five minutes left," Sullivan said. "For us, it was a coming out game. We were very competitive with them. They scored 66 points in their first couple of games and we held them to 12 with just under five minutes left and 20 overall. We are putting some things together. Our offensive line is jelling. They are starting to come together. We have the ability to replace someone if they get hurt."

The touchdown for the Chiefs was scored by Jason Gracia on a 65-yard quarterback draw.

There were plenty of players who played well for the Chiefs in the game according to the coach.

He was pleased the running back/linebacker John Lane of Abington, defensive end Brendan Ruggman of Hanover and the Tamborella brothers from Rockland.

Sailfish second in League

Local swimmers contribute to cause

The Cohasset Mariner

This past weekend the Sailfish Swim Team, who swim out of the Scituate Racquet and Fitness Club, finished 2nd in the South Shore Swim League Championships. There were 10 local teams competing, so this was quite an accomplishment for a new team just completing its first year!

Local swimmers from Cohasset who helped the team achieve this outstanding finish were: Isabella Richter, Caroline Brinzey, Holiday Host, Mason Joyce, Emma Watts, Del DiBona, Bradley Albanese, Caden Carvette, Carlo Fricano, Dylan Gold, Chase Hansen, Brian Hixson, Jack McSweeney, Sam Rogers and Max Stevens.

Sailfish Coaches Barb Toohey and Julie Margolis were very proud of how well

TALKING GOLF

A labor of love

PAUL HARBER

When I'm scrolling through channels on the TV remote at night, looking for some visual comfort food, once in a white I catch, "Golf Destinations" on NESN.

And when I do, it brings back wonderful memories.

If you're a golfer, you'll like the 30-minute show.

It's probably the longest running sports show on local television. It's won NE Emmys and it has faithfully shown up every summer for the last 20 years.

Today, the show takes you to courses around the world as well as close to home. Not only is it viewed in the New England region on NESN, it's broadcast in New York, Florida and in Arizona as well.

I remember the birth of the show years ago and it has been a joyride for me.

Three local guys, who had just discovered the fun of banging errant shots at Pembroke Country Club, thought what fun it would be to produce a golf television show.

There was Norwell native Steve Aicardi, then a recent graduated from the University of Hartford, Marshfield's Lou Leta and Jim Gabriel of Duxbury. Gabriel wasn't a 20-something like Aicardi and Leta. The University of Notre Dame grad and former Cardinal Spellman basketball player graduated from high school in the 1960s.

But the three worked together on Cape Cod at a loosely run independent television station that no longer exists today.

When the station went bust, they continued their careers in television and video. Aicardi went to work at Channel 6 in Rhode Island, Leta and Gabriel had their own production companies, creating commercials and videos for local companies.

Since they were novices when it came to golf, they came to me for some suggestions.

We met and talked over a golf show and I produced a script for a pilot show.

I always liked Channel 5's 'Chronicle,' with its people stories and trips to the back roads of New England and I emulated that feeling in the script.

We called the show, Golf New England, but since it has gone national, the name changed to "Golf Destination."

We visited Montaup Country Club in Portsmouth, R.I., where there is a cemetery between the 17th tee and the fairway. We went to Jaffrey, N.H., to shoot the most difficult golf course in New England, the Shattack Inn. Of course, we included a visit to The Country Club, site of this week's US Amateur Golf Championship. Chip Johnson, currently the head pro at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate, but then the head professional at Pembroke CC, gave a lesson. And we talked to a 14-year-old club champion at Charles River Country Club, a Brookline kid named James Driscoll, who is now on the PGA Tour.

Putting the script on paper took me only a couple of days, but I really had it done it just a few hours.

That was July.

Because we all worked and had other responsibilities, we didn't finish shooting all the scenes until November, at the Shattack, thankfully we got it done before the snow fell. I'll never forget the host of the pilot, TV personality Gene Lavanchy, working with the club's head pro, Lyman Doane, who now runs River Bend Golf Course in West Bridgewater.

For the final scene, we needed Lavanchy to hit a wedge shot 100 yards on to the green. And every take, he shanked the ball right. It was hilarious.

I can remember after that long day shooting at the Shattack, trying to get out of there. But Jim Gabriel kept stopping the cart. He wanted to shoot this green or a shot looking back at that fairway.

It was late afternoon, what

videographers' like to call golden time, but I ignorantly wished we could have just bolted out of there.

These were, finally, the last shots of the show. We had hours and hours of film and I couldn't understand why he wanted this scenes.

During the winter we edited the show, putting it together, scene by scene, story by story with a process called linear editing, a painstakingly procedure. To save expenses, we were able to get into the edit suite at Channel 6 on Sunday mornings when it wasn't being use. We also used other facilities, such as Marshfield's cable television studio and some others around the area. It was a real gypsy production.

But when it was finished, it was a gem, something to be proud to say was yours. And what made the show sing were those beauty shots by Gabriel. I learned my lesson.

Now, the funny thing about the entire project was making the 30-minute pilot was the easy part.

Getting sponsors of the show was the problem. But we did.

It began on Channel 5 and moved around to other stations over the years.

And there have been many hosts over the years. Mike Lynch and Mike Dowling were so professional at Channel 5. John Dennis of WEEI served as host and he was the best. Rarely did he ever flub a line. So many hosts did so well: Bob Halloran, Mike Ratte and Butch Stearns to name a few.

There were so many magic moments for me. Nothing beats watching the sun rise out of the ocean at Samoset Resort golf course. And I've never seen a more dramatic sun set ever at the Bethel Inn. The best interview ever was a summer afternoon with the late and great Herbert Warren Wind in his backyard in Weston.

As time passed, we all parted ways.

Jim Gabriel had some important film projects and left the show. Lou Leta's video company kept him busy and he didn't want to miss watching his two young daughters growing up. Because the show became more golf course sponsor-oriented, I stepped out of the picture because I did not want it to be a conflict of interest with my golf writing.

And for the last 15 years, Steve Aicardi has carried the ball and done well.

And somebody, I hope he is recognized for his devotion to New England golf.

Scituate's Mulcahys capture fourth State Father & Daughter championship

By Paul Harber
Pharberwickedlocal.com

A few weeks ago in The Clubhouse golf notebook we mentioned that John and Mary Mulcahy of Hatherly Country Club would be chasing a fourth consecutive Massachusetts Golf Association's Father & Daughtery Championship.

It might have lit a fire under the two.

The Mulcahys captured their fourth title last week at the Golf Club of Cape Cod in Falmouth. The two posted a score of 3-over par 75 to capture the senior division by three strokes.

"A few weeks ago, there was a newspaper article about us winning, so I felt like there was pressure and there would be disappointment if we didn't win," said John Mulcahy. "I knew that there were a lot of good teams playing this year, and I didn't know when scores were coming in if it would be good enough. I thought that it would be close, but I wouldn't have been surprised if someone came in at one or two over."

As it turned out, the concern was unfounded as no one could catch the Mulcahy team.

Playing on a challenging and often penal course in East Falmouth with a wind that picked up as the day went along, the Mulcahys were able to stay out of trouble and avoid the big numbers that plagued so many others.

After making the turn at 3-over par 39, the Mulcahys made what turned out to be their final bogey of the day on the 309-yard, par 4 14th hole. They picked a perfect time to card their first birdie of the day – on the 360-yard, par 4 17th hole – to allow them to post an even par 36 on the back nine.

Before they turned in their scorecards, however, they had a moment where they thought that the championship just might slip away. After a solid drive by Mary, John sent his second shot into the bushes. Mary was able to locate the ball and chipped onto the green. John left Mary a 6-foot putt for par, which she calmly drained.

"On 18 I figured that if we bogeyed right after we birdied we might be in trouble," said Mary, who is entering her sophomore year at the University of Central Florida. "So when he hit into the bushes on the second shot, I knew that we had to get it on the green and then two putt. I made sure that I made that last putt.

"Sometimes I think that we take it too seriously," said Mary. "I was getting a little mad at myself when I missed birdie putts because it was frustrating, but I really just like playing with him a lot."

Richard Dubois and Aimee Dubois (Black Rock CC in Hingham) ended in a tie for fourth.

In the junior division, Robert Cutting and Christine Cutting of Scituate CC, finished second, four shots out of first place. Tony Messina Jr. and Tori Messina of Cohasset GC finished tied for ninth.

(Golf) Life of (Ryan) Riley

This is a big week for the Ryan Riley of Easton. Riley, who has won his share of local and regional championship, takes his game to the national level this week when he tees it up at The Country Club in Brookline for the 113th US Amateur. His journey begins on Monday afternoon. He tees it up at 2:15 p.m. on the toughest stretch of holes at The Country Club in Brookline. One word of wisdom: Patience.

You aren't playing your father's golf course. Ryan starts on the ninth hole. That's the beginning of the hardest stretch of holes known in golf. Here are the yardages of each hole from No. 9 to No. 15: 505, 476, 443, 623, 438, 508 and 491. Problem is, only one of them is a par-5, the 623-yard 12th. That stretch isn't golf; it is the Bataan Death March. Riley is one of 312 who must play this awful stretch of holes. His second day of play will be at Charles River Country Club. The low 64 scores will advance to the match play phase of the championship that will culminate with a 36-hole championship match on Sunday.

The Boston College grad, who serves as golf coach for Norton High School in the fall, earned a berth in the prestigious national championship on July 21 when he fashioned rounds of 67 and 69 at Metacomet Country Club in East Providence, R.I., to finish among the top three of 97 candidates. His 4-under par score for 36 holes featured three birdies on the final nine holes and enabled the 32-year-old Riley to claim the second of three qualifying spots.

"It's still sinking in and it's an absolute dream come true," Riley told reporters after he qualified. "I've been playing pretty well and I'm hopeful of giving it a good run and making it to match play." Riley hasn't even tried to qualify for the US Amateur before. The only reason is it's close to home so he won't be far away from his wife and two young children. But he does have a golfing resume. He won the Southeastern Amateur in 2007 and the Massachusetts Publinx two years later. Riley captured the 2011 State Amateur and three consecutive state Four-Ball titles (2009-11) with partner Herbie Aikens of Kingston . . . David Pope of East Bridgewater recorded a hole-in-one on the seventh hole at White Pines Country Club. His playing partners were David Reid, Scott Anderson and Jim Stagnitta. Pope used a hybrid seven-iron on the 127yard par-3

Khang ousted in sudden death

Rockland High School junior-to-be Megan Khang forced extra holes by making dramatic birdies at Nos. 17 ad 18, but lost her match in the first round of match play at the US Women's Amateur last week when Grace Na of Oakland, Calif., made a birdie on No. 1 at the Country Club of Charleston, S.C. Khang, 15, never led in the match, and fell 2 down when Na won the 16th hole with a par. But Khang birdied the par-3 17th, then birdied the par-4 18th to extend the match. Na answered with a birdie at the par-4 first hole to move into the round of 32...After winning the Brockton Four-Ball, advancing deep into the State Amateur and winning the Ouimet Memorial in sudden death, Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea GC made his first visit to South Shore Country Club in Hingham and picked up another title. He and partner Jay Clary won the Dolph Aimola South Shore CC Four-Ball Championship. They never saw the course and fashioned a 5-under 67 their first round. The following day in the final round, with a little bit of course knowledge, they shot a 9-under 63 for a two-day 14-under 130 aggregate and a one-stroke victory over US Amateur qualifier Ryan Riley and Jamison Randall. The D.W. Field team of Kevin Carrozza and Rich McGovern captured the senior division at 141 and the team of Deb DelToro and Sarah Coughlin took first net in the ladies division at 138. This year's tournament was dedicated to Aimola, the longtime starter at South Shore CC. Unfortunately, Aimola passed away a week ago at age 87, but the show went on as scheduled.

"I never played South Shore in my life," Parziale told Bob DiCesare of the Enterprise. "Of all the courses I've played in the area, Saturday was my first time here, and it was awesome. It's a hidden gem. There's a lot of good holes. I'll remember this win because we just found out about the guy (Aimola). That's crazy."

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

Locals compete at NE Kids Triathlon

Three girls from Cohasset, including two sisters, participated in the New England Kids Triathlon this summer: Ava Doherty, Emi Mills, and Kalea Mills. Over 900 children from five states completed the race at M.I.T. making it the largest Kids Tri in the Northeast. Children aged 5-10 participated in the Junior division and swam 100 meters, biked 3 miles and then ran 1/2 mile to complete the race. The Senior division consisted of children aged 11-15 and their distances were double the Jr. division.

Among the many distinctions of the current class of high school seniors in Cohasset's Boy Scout Troop 28 is that of having the most Eagle Scouts of any class in the nearly 100 year history of the troop. Seven graduating scouts achieved the highest rank in scouting. Only two other classes – 1971 and 1963 – can boast the same distinction. As a group, these scouts provided hundreds of hours of community service as well as leadership to their peers.

To earn the rank of Eagle, a scout is required to progress through six lower ranks by a combination of mastering outdoor skills, leadership, service and civic life. Many of the requirements are exactly what you would expect from a Boy Scout – camping, first aid, emergency preparedness and outdoor cooking. Other requirements include civics, both local and national, money management, fitness and a wide range of elective skills, from chess to welding, engineering to land navigation.

Each of the seven scouts completed all of these requirements and then each completed an Eagle service project. The project is the capstone – a demonstration of the leadership skills that the scout developed during his preliminary work. Every Eagle project has three requirements – that it benefit an appropriate organization or individuals, that the scout demonstrates organizational skills and that, in executing the project, the scout demonstrates leadership skills.

The seven Eagle scouts in the Class of 2013 show the various ways these requirements can be met and the variety of benefits they can provide to the community.

• Evan Ackley – Built a set of signs for use in town to post times for Town Meeting and other civic events. The signs are already in use around town. Evan graduated from CHS and will attend Salem State University in the fall.

• Greg Berube – Constructed a set of bat houses and installed them on the property of Holly Hill Farm. The houses provide habitat for bats, which, in turn, provide natural pest control. Greg graduated from CHS and will attend Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI) in the fall.

• Thomas Fogarty – Built a set of cargo containers to fit in the trunks of the Cohasset Police Department's cruisers. The containers were delivered and installed and are currently in use. Thomas graduated from the Marine Military Academy in Harlingen, Texas, and will take a gap year next year and attend college the following year.

• Rob Hillman – Built a raised trail through marshes into George Ingram Park. He graduated from Boston College High School and will attend Lehigh University in the fall.

• Andrew Leighton – Researched the needs of active duty servicemen in Afghanistan, raised money and assembled packages to be shipped to a specific unit. Andrew graduated from Boston College High School and will attend Emmanuel College in the fall.

• Kevin Mack – Constructed a long trail into George Ingram Park to a scenic overlook, cleared the overlook and installed a bench. Kevin, who graduated from Cohasset High School, will attend UMass-Amherst, this fall.

• Jack Thomae – Constructed a new floating dock for the CSCT replacing an old rotted-out dock moored in the harbor. Jack graduated from CHS and will attend the University of Vermont in the fall.

500 witness blessing of new abbot at Glastonbury Abbey

On a perfect summer day, witnessed by 500 people, a significant moment in the history of Glastonbury Abbey occurred.

Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley, Archbishop of Boston, performed the formal "Blessing of the Abbot" upon Father Thomas O'Connor on August 11th. This event occurred during a special outdoor Mass at on the Great Lawn of Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham, followed by a reception.

Father Thomas O'Connor (left) and Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley pray during Sunday's Mass. People of all faiths come to Glastonbury Abbey.

One guest, Desiree Connolly, summed up the moving ceremony and beautiful morning: "The Abbatial Blessing was the most uplifting and spiritual event I have ever attended, complete with trumpets and violins! I could really feel the presence of the Holy Spirit and God's love."

Father Thomas has been a monk at Glastonbury Abbey for 45 years. He is just the third abbot in the Abbey's 60-year history, having been elected by his Benedictine brothers in June. An abbot is the leader of the monastery who gives a living guide of the ancient Rule of St. Benedict for the monks to follow in this modern time. Electing a new abbot signifies that the Abbey is moving forward, and setting a course for the community that is hope-filled and God-seeking.

"I believe that this Benedictine Monastery is truly meant for this time," remarked Abbot Thomas. "There are questions, fears, doubts, mystery. But there are also gifts: a community who prays, who is willing to be 'church' when it isn't a popular notion. This community has something important to say to the world at this particular moment – that Christ is with us always."

Glastonbury Abbey was founded in 1954 when Cardinal Cushing desired a Benedictine presence in the Archdiocese of Boston. During his homily, Cardinal O'Malley remarked, "We are certainly very blessed to have this Benedictine community in our archdiocese as an extraordinary spiritual resource and a constant witness to the primacy of the quest of faith in the life of faithful discipleship."

Over the past 60 years, the Abbey has been a vibrant spiritual center on the South Shore of Boston. It provides a place of welcome for people who seek spiritual sustenance. The monks welcome everyone to share in their daily prayer (5 times each day), in the silence of reflection, in the natural beauty of the wooded acres. People of all faiths come to Glastonbury for prayer, spiritual counseling, education, retreats, interfaith dialogue, social and cultural events, and for a respite from the stress and pressures of daily demands

Diane E. Williams

HULL – Diane E. Williams, age 61, of Hull, formerly of Cohasset, passed away peacefully on Aug. 7, 2013 after a long illness.

Diane was the beloved daughter of the late Warren H. and Margaret C. Williams. She was the loving sister of W. Martin Williams and wife, Peggy of Holbrook, Susan M. Cox and husband Ted of Hull, and Cindy A. Williams of Lake Tahoe, NV. Diane was the adoring and devoted "Auntie" of Dawn Williams, Danielle Smoot, Erin Palladino, and Megan Cox, as well as many great-nieces and great-nephews. Diane is also survived by her goddaughter, extended family and many friends.

Diane was born and raised in Cohasset and was a graduate of Cohasset High School, Class of 1969. She graduated from Mass. College of Pharmacy and Allied Sciences. She worked for many years in retail pharmacy before going to work for South Shore Hospital as a pharmacist, where she worked for over 27 years. Diane was very proud of her profession, but nothing gave her more joy than spoiling her nieces and nephews; she was deeply devoted to her beloved family.

Funeral was from the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset on Tuesday, Aug. 13, 2013 at 8:30 a.m., followed by a Mass of Christian Burial at 9:30 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours were on Monday, Aug. 12, 2013 from 4 - 8 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Diane's memory may be made to her great-nephews memorial charity, Cole's Warriors, 468 N. Dayton Lakeview Rd., New Carlisle, OH. 45344.

Boost your career

Regis College graduate certificate programs provide the edge needed in today's job market

Looking for a new job? Trying to advance in your present company? Maybe you're looking to change careers? It is a tough job market! What you need is something that will set you apart from everyone else. Regis College offers an array of graduate certificate programs designed to make you more knowledgeable in your field and more marketable in this competitive environment.

At Regis, we understand that committing to an entire master's degree program can be daunting. Graduate certificates can be completed quickly and efficiently, and can be an affordable way to boost your education, your resume and your career. Regis College offers many certificate programs for health professionals:

The Certificate in Health Informatics introduces health-care providers to the informatics industry. An integration of health care, computer science and information technology, Health Informatics is a growing field. Students will learn the essential skills needed to analyze, develop and implement information systems for health-care industry.

As the U. S. health-care system undergoes unprecedented changes, the demand for skilled health administration professions will grow. Regis' six-course Health Administration Certificate introduces students to critical legal, ethical, social and management issues and prepares them to participate in the business of health care.

The Certificate in Gerontology program is designed for students who wish to work with older adults. The program provides a solid background in gerontology — the physical, emotional, social, political and economic issues related to the care of the elderly.

Public Health looks at the health and well being of society as a whole. For those interested in pursuing health care at the big-picture level, the Regis Certificate in Public Health explores elements such as epidemiology, biostatistics and health policy.

The Integrative Health Certificate provides health-care professionals an opportunity to develop their knowledge and skill in holistic health practices. This four-course program explores theories, methods and scientific foundation behind holistic treatments. A mentorship provides hands-on experience.

Graduate certificates can be completed quickly and efficiently, and can be an affordable way to boost your education, your resume and your career. Regis College offers many certificate programs for health professionals. COURTESY/REGIS COLLEGE

There are no faster growing areas than the biomedical and pharmaceutical industries. With a Certificate in Clinical Research Management or a Certificate in Regulatory Management, students with a science background will gain the knowledge and skills needed to start or advance their careers within these booming fields

The four-course Certificate in Communication for Health Care Professionals provides comprehensive training for those who currently work in or wish join the public relations, marketing communications, human resources and event management areas of the health-care industry.

Regis College graduate certificates can be completed independently or can be applied toward one of our master's degrees. New student discounts are available for the first two courses taken toward any certificate, and up to two courses may be taken prior to applying.

Student Civic Engagement initiatives have become increasingly popular across college campuses nationwide. The goal is to enhance students' leadership development and engage students on campus and within the wider community.

Massasoit Community College's Center for Experiential Learning is designed to advance the goal of preparing students to be active, engaged, and informed citizens. The center is a resource for students, faculty, employers and community partners who wish to receive and/or provide experiential learning opportunities that enhance student learning, integrate theory and practice, and promote active citizenship. In conjunction with other college departments, the center develops and coordinates experiential learning opportunities, including internships and civic engagement activities.

The Center for Experiential Learning and the Student Life Office partnered to introduce the Alternative Break program, which provides students with an opportunity to work with community agencies in a weeklong service and immersion experience. The program is designed to connect Massasoit Community College students to shared experiences that foster personal growth, mutual awareness and civic engagement. In spring 2013, two staff members and 10 students traveled to Washington, D.C., during the semester break to volunteer in areas where homelessness and hunger are persistent problems. The students were so deeply affected by their service experiences that they established an on-campus food pantry upon their return to the college. Students have embraced the civic engagement initiative on campus in a variety of ways. Student organizations and clubs such as Phi Theta Kappa (an international honor society) and the International Touch Club participate in food drives, walks for hunger and many other community activities as part of their mission. New in fall 2013 is the student-run Leadership Academy. Current student leaders recruit new students to participate in community-based volunteer activities and expose them to campus leadership opportunities.

In its inaugural year, the center initiated several projects to incorporate civic engagement and experiential learning into the curriculum. Through the Sustainability Across the Curriculum project, faculty members are working to integrate sustainability topics and concepts into courses throughout the curriculum. The long-term goal is to ensure that education for sustainability becomes a part of the educational experience for all Massasoit students. The center is providing professional development in civic education and has established a faculty team to develop sample syllabuses and resources for incorporating civic engagement into existing courses. Massasoit has joined the Democracy Commitment, a national organization with the goal of ensuring that all community college graduates receive an education in democracy.

Whether through formal classroom learning, extracurricular activities, volunteerism, or internships, students at Massasoit Community College have many opportunities to gain a better understanding of the value of civic engagement and its benefit to both their education and their life experiences. At Massasoit students have the advantage of a quality education that fosters good citizenship.

First-day-of-school jitters

5 books to help young students – and their parents – with the transition

By Brooke McDonough
Westwinds Bookshop

It's almost time to trade in the beach bag for the backpack! The school year is fast approaching, and young children starting school for the first time will be excited, and maybe a bit nervous. The staff at Westwinds Bookshop in Duxbury has put together this list of books to help you and your child get ready for the big day.

1. "The Kissing Hand," by Audrey Penn, is the classic answer to first-day-of-school jitters or any separation issues. Chester the raccoon is afraid to start school in the forest. To ease his mind, Mother Raccoon gives him a kiss on the hand that Chester can hold on to all day and until he sees his mother again. The kiss gives him the courage to face the day. It's a sweet and loving story, and gives families a solution to what can be stressful for some little ones. This book has been a favorite of teachers and parents for years, and continues to be a best seller.

2. Fancy Nancy fans will enjoy the fun Nancy has helping her brother Jojo prepare for pre-school in "Fancy Nancy: JoJo's First Day Jitters," by Jane O'Connor. Nancy helps her little brother be brave and overcome his jitters in a big-sisterly way. If you know anything about Fancy Nancy, you'll know that she has her own adorable way of doing things that makes reading her books a delight.

BOOKS

3. To build excitement for the first day of school, meet Miss Bindergarten, from the classic story "Miss Bindergarten Gets Ready for Kindergarten," by Joseph Slate. Kids love to hear about the animal friends getting ready for school while the teacher, Miss Bindergarten, is setting up her bookcases, art tables, blocks and name tags to start the school year off. Told in a friendly rhyme with illustrations that are bright and well detailed, the book is one the kids want to hear over and over. The animal friends are named alphabetically from A to Z and have the same mixed feelings (and humorous mishaps) while getting ready for school that many kids have.

4. For a groovy good time when preparing kids for school, turn to the coolest cat in town. "Pete the Cat: Rocking in My School Shoes," by James Dean, is a fun, finger-snapping, toe-tapping trip to school with Pete, who discovers (and sings about) all the neat things about school, the library, the lunchroom and books! Through it all, Pete stays cool in his new school shoes.

5. It's not always just the kids who have the jitters. Sometimes it's hard for mom and dad to take the leap of faith and let the schools take over. That's why local author M.L. Nichols wrote "The Parent Backpack for Kindergarten through Grade 5" – to give parents the information they need to guide their kids through elementary school. "The Parent Backpack" offers information on a changing educational system, with tips on how to connect with your child's teachers, build confidence, and support learning at home. "The Parent Backpack" is a must-read resource for every parent sending a young one to school.

Kids and homework

How you can help

To help your children focus on homework, pick a place in the house where there's plenty of light and no distractions.

There are many things you can do to help your kids start the school year on the right track, like replacing an old backpack or getting them the school supplies they need. But there's something more meaningful you can do that may not cost money: help them with their homework.

Students who do their homework consistently tend to have better grades. It's not always easy to get them to do their homework, especially after a busy day, but these tips can help:

* Talk to your children about their homework. It's important that your kids understand why it's important to do their homework and the positive impact it has on grades. Homework helps them practice what they've learned as well as prepare them for upcoming classes. Plus, by doing their homework they develop the discipline and skills they need to be successful throughout their school years.

* Talk to the teachers. Different teachers might expect different things from parents, so be sure to talk to them to figure out your role. For example, some teachers prefer parents review their kids' homework; others prefer parents make sure kids do their homework. Teachers can also tell you how much time your child should spend doing homework and what to do if the homework is too easy or too difficult.

* Select a fixed time to do homework. The best time to do homework is the one that works best for your child and you. It can be before or after playing, watching television or dinnertime. What's important is that homework time is consistent. Avoid leaving it for the end of the day, when your child is tired and sleepy.

* Pick a quiet area and eliminate distractions. To help your children focus on homework, pick a place in the house where there's plenty of light and no distractions. It doesn't have to be fancy. It can be the kitchen table or a desk. Make sure the TV is off and put away electronic devices, unless they're essential to doing homework.

* Get them the resources they need. You don't have to be an expert in all subjects to help your kids with homework. However, you need to make sure they have the tools they need to succeed. If you need expert help, you can always take them to the library or help them with their search online. You can also visit kids.gov to find information on homework topics. The Department of Education also has several resources to help your child with homework in different areas, including math, reading and writing.

Campus and beyond

Bed Bath & Beyond – college-style

By Maryclare Himmel

Believe it or not, August is upon us, and with its start, so begins the inevitable back-to-school rush. Parents with children heading off to college for the first time can feel overwhelmed by the prospect of shopping and packing the seemingly insurmountable amount of "stuff" that needs to accompany their newly independent offspring to campus. To help make the new digs feel like home, and ease some of the stress of this life-changing event, Bed Bath & Beyond has come to the rescue.

Bed Bath & Beyond's "Destination Campus" campaign offers a wealth of useful information for college-bound students and their parents and is a lifesaver for harried shoppers. Students simply log onto the website, destinationcampus.com, and browse the virtual lookbook for products and suggestions on how to make a dorm room look and feel just right.

Colorful, well organized and easy to navigate, the site allows the shopper to create a personalized checklist of favorite items that can be stored and printed from a computer or saved to a mobile device for easy, on-the-go shopping. Practical tips, suggestions and videos are sure to appeal to the anxious new freshman. The "College Insider" tab also offers handy and helpful insider tips for both students and parents.

The company's school information service also offers individual school checklists for more than 2,000 schools with their specific rules on what to bring and what not to bring to the dorm – and if the item is in stock at Bed Bath & Beyond. Accessed in-store by an associate or online at bedbathandbeyond.com/shop for college under the "Find My College" tab, the service also shows the nearest Bed Bath & Beyond store to campus. If the school is not on the list, an associate will contact the school for a specific list.

"Bed Bath & Beyond has a great free service, 'Shop Here, Pick up There,' to help students and parents easily get their

Cradles to Crayons accepting donations

Help 30,000 kids get ready to learn

Cradles to Crayons provides children birth through age 12 who are living in homeless or low-income situations with the essential items they need to thrive – at home, at school and at play. These items are supplied free of charge by engaging and connecting communities that have with communities that need.

WHAT

It can cost upward of $600 to send a child back to school with all the essentials he or she needs to be ready for school. As such, Cradles to Crayons Ready for School program aims to provide 30,000 children with the essentials they need to arrive at school ready and excited to learn. Many families are forced to choose between necessities – buying groceries or purchasing notebooks for their child to take to school, paying for rent or buying their children shoes that fit. Cradles to Crayons helps alleviate this problem by providing children, up to age 12, with a brand-new backpack full of high-quality, age-appropriate school supplies as well as clothing, shoes, books and other basic essentials.

You can help local children get ready to learn by making a donation of your own – like new school supplies or new and gently used children's clothing and footwear – at one of Cradles to Crayons drop-off sites.

stuff to college. The service is especially beneficial for students going to school far away from home, by plane, train or automobile. Students can shop for all their dorm room essentials at a store near home and have everything ready to pick up for purchase at our store near campus," Leah Drill, public relations assistant at Bed Bath & Beyond, said.

The customer is equipped with a handheld scanner to scan items they choose as they browse the store. Their items are packaged together for pickup at the store nearest their school, where the customer pays for the order.

In addition, for a limited time through Aug. 30, Bed Bath & Beyond offers a shop online and ship later option where the customer can shop on the site's "Shop for College" tab and choose a shipping date at checkout. Items will be shipped to the address specified, so when the student arrives at school, the order will be waiting.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Become familiar with your car's interior controls and instruments before driving. Trying to find controls while driving takes your focus off the road. This vehicle rolled over after the driver looked down to shift the standard transmission and struck a parked vehicle on a residential street. COURTESY PHOTO

How to go Greek

Twice the protein, half the carbs, 20 percent of your daily calcium requirement and probiotic cultures that help keep digestive tracts happy. What's not to love about Greek yogurt?

For some who resist making the switch from regular to Greek, it boils down to taste. Here are ways to incorporate that strong flavor into everyday meals anyone can enjoy:

Appetizers: Store-bought dips are often loaded with preservatives, sugar, salt and/or fatty ingredients. Making your own is a great way to reduce fat and calories, amp up nutritional value and ensure fresh, organic flavor. Dips made with Greek yogurt add zest to vegetable platters, and can be a healthier complement to more decadent treats like chips and pretzels.

Entrees and sides: Think of all the dishes that call for sour cream, milk, heavy cream or regular plain yogurt. From mashed potatoes and chicken salad to soups and marinades for meats, Greek yogurt can replace those less healthful ingredients, allowing you to reap its health benefits while making the flavor subtle (or even undetectable).

Desserts: Cakes, bread puddings, pies, cookies — practically any dessert can work with Greek yogurt as an ingredient. Vegetarians and vegans have been replacing eggs with regular yogurt for years, and Greek yogurt is an even healthier substitution. Generally, if your recipe calls for a cup of creme fraiche, sour cream, mayonnaise or cream cheese, you can substitute a cup of Greek yogurt.

Garden variety

Color and creativity abound in heirloom vegetables

By Linda Bassett
More Content Now

On any given weekend, I might spend a little time in a farmers market. A fast utilitarian spin for basics at a market I know. Or a leisurely fun stroll enjoying the produce under the tents or piled on the truck beds.

I like them everywhere they pop up — in front of important buildings or subway stops in big cities or on school playgrounds or town squares in the suburbs.

Over the last few summers, as farmers discover and plant more heirloom vegetables, I've found a treasure trove of new things to try, like celery root, ramps and tomatoes in all sizes and shapes, from pearls to large lumpy baseballs in a rainbow ranging from sunshine yellow to burgundy as well as stripes in shades of green, claret and cream.

Then, there's kale, kale, kale, everywhere, that leafy vegetable of the nutritionists. It's their fault that the prices have skyrocketed on this one.

Every summer brings something new. And some of them look downright weird when they first appear. It's always amazing how vegetables seem so bizarre one summer only to become commonplace the next.

Garlic scapes

You might not recognize garlic scapes when you see them. Long, thin, twirly, green things that look like scallions gone awry in the growing process. If you've only bought garlic in the supermarket, you won't have seen these giddy garlic tops that let a farmer know that what's under the soil is nearly ready for picking.

The flavor is gentle, perfect for anyone who doesn't like their garlic to screech in their food. They're good fresh, sliced thinly on the diagonal into green salads. They take well to scrambled eggs or omelets, tossed in during the last few seconds of cooking. Try them in omelets, either as part of a filling or whisked into the egg mixture. And they do a tuna salad or egg salad proud. Snap them up while you can, as when summer disappears, garlic scapes go with it.

More than just heirloom tomatoes (above) can be found at farmer markets. Carrots and cauliflower in shades of purple and other goodies await discovery. WIKIMEDIACOMMONS.ORG

Purple vegetables

While purple potatoes have been around for a few years and are now a supermarket staple packaged with red and white potatoes in net bags, some cooks and consumers are still timid about trying them. But once they take that first bite, they fall in love with the intense potato flavor.

Now, carrots and cauliflower are starting to rock the market in shades of violet. Over the last few seasons, cauliflower appeared in surprising chartreuse. Now you can find it in all three - white, green and purple.

When I first saw all three together, I thought it would be fun to do a tricolor cauliflower dish, but purple cauliflower, disappointingly, fades to green during cooking, although it still makes a lovely lilac addition to salads.

(The recipe (at right) was created specifically for purple cauliflower. Yes, it's just as good with the more familiar colors. I often add a handful or two of fresh breadcrumbs before the cheese topping to give it a nice blanket of extra crunch.)

Zucchini blossoms

You can find zucchini blossoms with the Asian vegetables. At first glance, they look like a pile of wilted lilies. But intrigued shoppers gather around trading ideas about what to do with them.

The first impulse is to add them to a stir fry. But lots of other ideas crop up in the give and take of the market. My favorite is stuffed with cheeses and fried to golden perfection, with a dipping sauce or plain.

Stuffed Zucchini Blossoms

Makes 12 stuffed blossoms.

- 12 large zucchini flowers
- 10 oz whole milk ricotta (or 5 oz ricotta and 5 oz plain goat cheese, mashed together)
- 1 large egg
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 T chopped flat Italian parsley
- 1 T chopped chives
- Salt, pepper, to taste
- Flour
- 1 egg whisked with 1 t water
- Seasoned bread crumbs
- Olive oil

Wash and drain the zucchini blossoms. Gently pinch out the stamens from inside the petals.

Combine ricotta, egg, grated cheese, parsley, chives, salt and pepper. Spoon into a plastic refrigerator bag, cutting a 1/2-inch hole in one corner. Gently squeeze the cheese mixture into the center of each blossom, securing with a toothpick.

Place flour, egg mixture and bread crumbs in three separate plates or bowls. Gently dredge blossoms first in flour, then egg, then bread crumbs, shaking off the excess between each coating.

Heat olive oil in a large skillet over medium to medium-high heat. Add the stuffed blossoms, cooking and turning until golden on all sides. Drain on paper towels, keeping hot until all are cooked. Serve right away.

(Some cooks like to serve this with a light marinara sauce. I like them without.)

WIKIMEDIACOMMONS.ORG

Baked Purple Cauliflower

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

- 5 quarts water
- 2 pounds purple cauliflower
- 1 T salt
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled
- 2 T chopped parsley
- 3 T olive oil
- Fresh ground black pepper
- 3/4 to 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Lightly oil a shallow baking dish. Bring the water to a rolling boil in a large pot.

Break the cauliflower into florets; add to the boiling water and salt. Cook 5 minutes, or until al dente, testing for tenderness at 3 minutes. Drain; cool quickly in a bowl of cold water. Drain again; set aside.

Warm the garlic and parsley together with the olive oil in a small skillet over medium heat, just until the garlic colors lightly golden. Remove the garlic with a slotted spoon; discard.

Transfer cauliflower to the baking dish. Top with the warm oil and parsley. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and the grated cheese. Bake, 15 to 20 minutes, until cheese is golden and crusty. Serve right away.

This relish loaf makes the ultimate sandwich bread

For those of you who have not gotten enough of summery sandwiches, our relish bread should be on your weekend to-do list.

This yeast bread, flavored with sweet pickle relish, negates the need for the condiment in sandwiches. It toasts or grills especially well, especially for paninis.

It may become your favorite for grilled Swiss cheese and ham sandwiches, clubs and reubens.

JIM HILLIBISH

It's also a surprising landing pad for creamed cheese, cold cucumber and smoked salmon finger sandwiches.

Pickle Relish Loaf

Makes 1-pound loaf.

- 1 t dry yeast
- 1 1/2 T sugar
- 2 T water, warmed
- 2 cups bread flour
- 1 t salt
- 4 T sweet pickle relish, drained
- 1 T butter, melted
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 T relish juice
- 1 t malt flour (optional, see note below)

Whisk yeast, 1 teaspoon sugar and warm water. Allow yeast to double, about 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, mix remaining ingredients. Add yeast and knead to a smooth, non-sticky dough. Cover with oiled wax paper and a towel.

Allow to rise until doubled. Punch down, knead for another five minutes and load into a loaf pan. Brush top with milk and bake 30 minutes at 400 degrees or until brown. The loaf is done when it sounds hollow when tapped. Cool before serving.

Note: Malt flour improves rising, softness and browning. It is available in some health-foods stores or on Amazon.com. You may need to add more flour to the dough.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 26, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty might upset some people, but you inevitably win more admirers for having the courage to tell the truth when others are more likely to scramble for cover.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your efforts to defend your project begin to show favorable results. You should soon be able to win over even the most determined detractors who had lined up against it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You win praise for your selfless efforts in a very difficult situation. But be careful not to allow your generous nature to be exploited by those who have their own agenda.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A trusted colleague sheds light on a recent spate of puzzling workplace situations. This should give you the information you need to bring to your superior's attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in workplace management could be helpful for talented Leos and Leonas who have been waiting to have their accomplishments rewarded by receptive leadership.

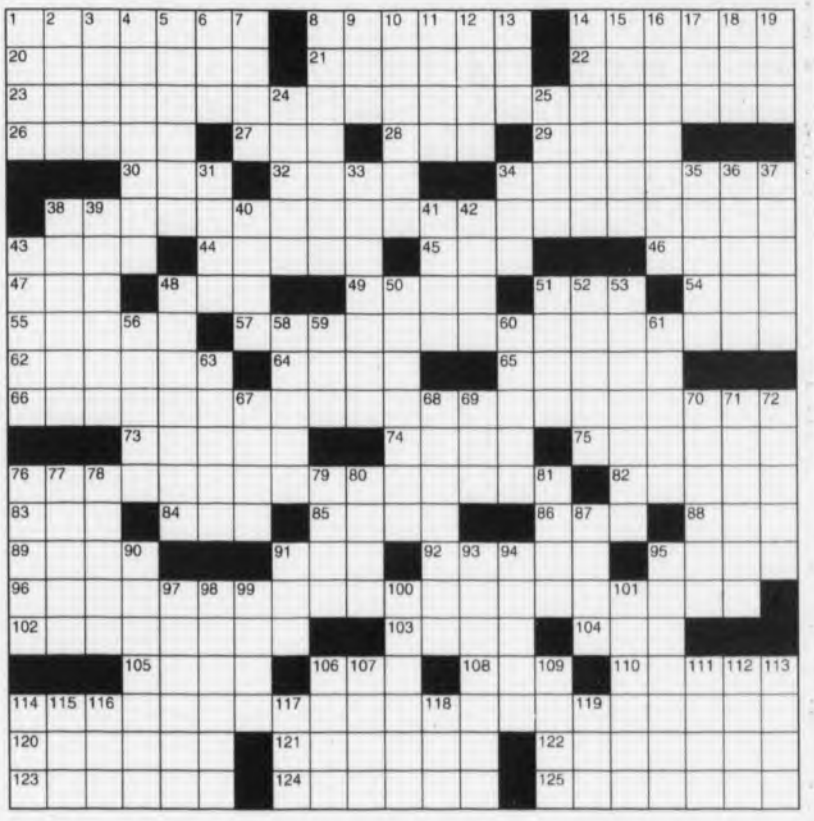
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding between you and someone you care for should be corrected immediately. This relationship is too important to lose over a bruised ego.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A welcome piece of good news helps clear the air in a family situation. A job-related incident also eases as more information provides a clearer focus on the problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Quick action to heal bruised feelings pays off in a big way. Now you'll be able to move forward with your plans without that problem holding you back.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your creativity combined with a positive attitude should give you a considerable edge in finding a way to get around the negativity you've run into.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That sudden streak of stubbornness could cause some problems. Try to be more open to helpful suggestions and more flexible in making needed changes.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Now that that special relationship appears to be well and truly restored, you can spend more time dealing with those long-needed workplace changes.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new opportunity sounds promising. But watch out for any conditions that might be attached. Before making a decision, ask that each one be explained in detail.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ENROLLMENT UPDATE

Osgood adds kindergarten class

Now six full-day classes, one half-day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Families appear to be clamoring to get their children into Cohasset schools — if the kindergarten enrollment numbers are any indication.

Due to an enrollment spike, school officials have decided to add a sixth full-day kindergarten class to Osgood School, leading to hiring a new teacher. It was decided last week that the current half-day kindergarten teacher would teach a full-day class, and a new half-day position was advertised.

"I want every student to have the right opportunity, and this seems to be the right decision."
Barbara Cataldo, Supt. of Schools

Osgood principal Bob LeCount said that the school is moving swiftly in hiring the new teacher. The decision will be finalized this week.

The first day of school for teachers is Wednesday, August 28.

The jump in enrollment was discussed at the August 7 School Committee meeting. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said at the time that it was too late in the summer to add a new kindergarten classroom. The decision was reversed over the following week, as enrollment numbers continued to mount.

Cataldo explained the decision in an August 15 letter to Osgood parents, stating

Cable board

Carlson bumped then reappointed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In a shocking move, two members of the Board of Selectmen voted not to reappoint the Cable Advisory Board and Cohasset Community Television (CCTV) treasurer, Paul Carlson, to continue serving on the dual-purpose committee, when it came time to vote during their Tuesday, August 20 meeting.

The unseating happened during a routine vote on committee appointments and reappointments. The cable board has three members, chairwoman Pat Martin, treasurer Carlson, and new member Rick Schiffmann. The selectmen voted on each member individually, voting unanimously (4-0) to approve Martin and Schiffmann. Schiffmann was nominated to serve and wrote an email to the selectmen's office on August 18 seeking appointment to the CCTV Board of Directors. Schiffmann replaces former member Jim Morrison, who opted not to return to the board when his appointment was up in June.

When it came time to vote on Carlson's membership, selectmen Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby both voted against him. Selectmen chair Fred Koed and co-chair Diane Kennedy both voted to reappoint Carlson. Selectman Steve Gaumer was absent.

Since the motion was to reappoint Carlson and the two negative votes caused the motion to fail, Carlson was not reappointed to the board. There was no discussion on the matter and the selectmen moved on to other business on the agenda.

The "nay" vote took the cable board chair aback.

"It makes no sense at all; I'm completely shocked and aghast," Martin said in a Milanoski announces plan to appoint police chief

Tells selectmen Bill Quigley is right man for the job

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Acting Town Manager gave a ringing endorsement of the Acting Police Chief this week.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced during the Tuesday, August 20 Board of Selectmen meeting that he intends to appoint Acting Police Chief William Quigley as the town's permanent police chief. However, the appointment is not yet official.

"Bottom line from his peers, is he is a perfect fit for Cohasset, has the right temperament for the residents of the town, he is engaged in the community and it would be in the best interest of Cohasset to have Bill Quigley as the town's next chief."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Milanoski read from a prepare statement explaining his intentions and why he thinks Acting Chief Quigley is a good fit for the police chief position.

The town manager has appointment authority for department head positions, including the police and fire chiefs. The selectmen have veto power, however, and have 15 days to accept or reject an appointment, according to Cohasset's Town Manager Act. Earlier in the night the board voted on the new treasurer collector Milanoski appointed, Paula Harris, voting 2-2 to waive the 15-day period and to reject the appointment. The motion failed so Harris's appointment stands.

The board was clearly not expecting Milanoski's announcement Tuesday night. The selectmen sat quietly and took in the news, some looking shell-shocked and some keeping their eyes down at the table. The board voted earlier this summer to halt the town's police chief search, which had been launched in February. At first they approved the town manager's search process; the board later reconsidered the vote and decided to wait until a permanent town manager is hired to have that person make the appointment. The town recently started a town manager search. Milanoski has been acting town manager since March 2012.

Cohasset has been without a chief since May 2012,

Alleged scrap metal thieves arrested

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal

Two men are facing larceny charges after allegedly stealing large, stainless steel freezer doors likely for their scrap metal from a restaurant undergoing renovation on Hull Street.

Police were alerted last Friday around 10 p.m. about a pickup truck at the former DiNero's restaurant that was in the back of the building where it appeared to be picking up appliances.

While en route, police put out a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) for the truck; a Hingham cruiser stopped the vehicle that was headed up Hull Street toward Route 3A. In the back of the truck were four large, commercial grade freezer doors valued at $1,000, police said.

The landlord of the new restaurant, the Corner Stop Eatery, who is from Hingham, said no one was permitted on the property at that hour.

Arrested and charged with larceny over $250 and receiving stolen property were: John Buckley, 57, of 20 Elmlawn Road, Braintree and Thomas Zubricki, 42, of 10 Aquavia Road, Medford.

OUI arrest

Police have charged a 55-year-old Scituate man with drunken driving after receiving a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) from Scituate police about an erratic driver last week.

A Cohasset officer was on patrol at 2:30 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 13) Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Stop & Shop when he heard the radio call about the white van. He saw the van approach and turn into the Stop & Shop parking lot where it drove in a circle and came back out onto Route 3A toward Hingham.

The officer pulled behind the van and observed it being driven all over the road. He pulled the vehicle over and in conversation with the driver, John J. Charrier, of 21 Minot Light Ave., detected the strong odor of an alcohol beverage.

Charrier failed field sobriety tests and was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol and failure to stay in marked lanes.

Police said the man's wife called Scituate police when her husband drove off after having been drinking for several hours to let them know he should not be driving.

Threats

A 25-year-old Plymouth man was arrested for domestic assault following an argument with his girlfriend following a show at the South Shore Music Circus last Friday.

Detail officers at the scene approached the couple who were arguing. The boyfriend allegedly made threats to kill his 29-year-old girlfriend.

They were causing a disturbance and drawing attention, police said. Arrested was Kevin M Dowling, 25, of 6 Chapel Hill Dr., Plymouth, on charges of domestic assault, disorderly conduct and threats to commit a crime. He was held without bail overnight at the police station and was bailed the next day, police said.

ATM receipts

Police looked into a report from a concerned caller who reported that witnessing a woman taking ATM receipts from the trash at the ATM at the Rockland Trust last week. The caller described the car and said it left toward Scituate.

Police talked to the bank and determined that no personal identifying information can really be gleaned from ATM receipts. Police said there was no crime committed.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident on Atlantic Avenue near the north gate at the Sandy Beach parking lot at 7:30 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 12). Police said a 27-yar-old Scituate man in a 2007 Nissan Frontier pulled out of the gate area and collided with a 2001 Porsche Boxster, operated by a 50-year-old Manchester, Vt., man. The Porsche was traveling on Atlantic Avenue in the direction of Hull.

There was damage to the right side of the Porsche and to the left side of the Nissan, police said. The Nissan was towed and the Scituate man was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Car keyed

A 57-year-old Scituate woman reported to police last Saturday (Aug. 17) that her 2005 Ford Explorer had been keyed while parked outside Shaw's. Police said the key marks when the length of the driver's side. She said she arrived had parked around 10 a.m. and returned to her car around 10:35 a.m. The surveillance cameras do not extend to that part of the parking lot, police said. The incident remains under investigation.

Housebreak

A Cedar Street resident reported to police at around 11 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 17) that he believed his house had been broken into through a sliding glass door, which was off its track.

His wife reported that two bracelets and ring valued at around $3000 were missing. They said no one has had access to the house and filed a report with their insurance company.

MVA

A 17-year-old Cohasset teen walked into the station on Sunday around 12:26 a.m. to report he had just been involved in a car accident. Police said the teen, who was driving a 2003 Jeep, was distracted and hit a legally parked 2002 Nissan sedan on Elm Street. He was not injured and the Nissan, which was unoccupied, had to be towed, police said.

Goats

The Animal Control Officer responded to a call about four goats on the loose on Cedar Street by the Cohasset Golf Club on Sunday (Aug. 18) around 11 p.m. and was able to corral them and got them squared away with the golf club.

Police said the golf club rents the goats and a movable 100-foot by 100-foot electric pen. The goats are employed to eat weeds and get rid of unwanted vegetation.

However, Sunday night the fence failed and the goats got out where they were able to eat a smorgasbord of flowers.

Police said the goats rent for $10 per goat per day and provide an environmentally friendly way to get rid of undesirable plants.

Moving out

A Cohasset officer stopped to check on a young man walking on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) around 3:20 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 13) because he was carrying a couple of duffel bags and a backpack. The man explained that his girlfriend, who the Avalon apartment is leased to, had kicked him out. He was walking with all his belongings to the train station, police said.

MVC

Police responded to a two-car crash at 4 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 15) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by Crocker Lane. Police said a 2005 Nissan sedan, operated by a 17-year-old Weymouth girl, was headed south when she slowed down to let a vehicle out of Crocker Lane. The Nissan was then struck from behind by a 2004 Chevrolet SUV, operated by a 49-year-old Marshfield woman, police said. The Chevrolet was towed and the Marshfield woman was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

Custody dispute

Police alerted Pembroke police about concerns aired by Cohasset grandparents who want to attain custody of their 7-year-old grandson. They are concerned for the boy's welfare and he is living with his mother in Pembroke. Pembroke police were already aware of the situation and the issue was referred to the state Department of Children and Families, police said.

Taxi called

Police called the taxi back for an elderly woman who was sitting on a bench on Nichols Road last Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 14). She was apparently left off in Cohasset but wanted to go to Scituate. The taxi was still in the area and returned when notified.

Skateboard

A 47-year-old Cohasset father reported to police on Friday (Aug. 16) that his 12-year-old son's $350 skateboard had been stolen from the Border Street bridge when his son jumped into the water.

The boy had left the skateboard, which is described as 39 inches long, with purple wheels and a triangular design on it, on the side of the road. When he returned after jumping, it was gone.

Large orders

Feng Shui has reported to police that they have been getting crank calls including calls for large orders that are never picked up and calls making fun of them. Police advised them to call people back who place an overly large order before processing it to make sure it is not a prank.

Car located

Police received a call from the Cohasset Harbor Inn last Friday reporting that a guest believed their Toyota Corolla had been stolen. As it turned out, the guest forgot where the car was parked and located it just before police arrived.

Abandoned car

Police explained to a local landlord that an abandoned car could be towed from private commercial property if the lot is posted "no trespassing" and "no overnight parking." The landlord is trying to have a car removed that has been in his lot for three weeks, police said. Once the parking lot has the proper signage, the landlord can tow the vehicle at the owner's expense after 72 hours.

Harassed

The mother of a 17-year-old Cohasset girl reported to police last week that her daughter is being harassed by a 19-year-old girl over a boyfriend. The mother wanted the complaint logged, police said.

Noise issue

Police have been fielding complaints from the Beechwood Street-Norman Todd Road area about noise from construction vehicles coming and going from the Toll Bros. subdivision project.

Truck rollover at construction site

A 61-year-old Plymouth man was transported to the hospital today following a truck rollover accident at a large construction site at 12:20 p.m. Tuesday afternoon.

Police said a dump truck owned by P.A. Landers was dumping a load of gravel at the Toll Brothers site of Beechwood Street when the load apparently shifted causing the dump truck to roll over onto the passenger side.

A heavy-duty tow truck was called to right the truck that was not drivable, police said.

The driver's injuries were not life threatening, police said.

This truck rolled over when dumping a load of gravel.

HEALTH BOARD

Private well regs to be updated

Public hearing next Tuesday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Board of Health is in the process of updating its Private Well regulations. There are at least 132 houses in Cohasset that have private wells, according to Board of Health Agent Felix Zemel, who said that the last time the board updated its well regulations was 2009.

Zemel sent a letter to all of the homeowners in town who have private wells, inviting them to the public hearing scheduled for Tuesday, August 27. He also sent out notices to all of the engineers he knows of that work in town, and have done work for the Board of Health and Conservation Commission.

It's all in an effort to keep the public informed through a transparent process, said Zemel.

"We're trying to make [the process] as transparent as possible and get the most community feedback," the Board of Health Agent said.

According to Zemel, the current private well regulations were first publicized in January 1995 and have not been updated since. The proposed new regulations will include several changes in order to better protect the public health, safety and the environment. Some of the changes include:

- Establishing setbacks for new wells, in order to reduce contamination;
- Requiring periodic Water Quality Testing, in order to ensure that the water is safe to drink;
- Requiring a Water Supply Certificate, in order to certify that the Private Well is constructed and/or maintained in accordance with the local regulations;
- Creating construction standards for safe construction of the well, in order to minimize potential contamination;
- Requiring a Water Quantity and Pumping Test, in order to determine if the flow generated by the well is sufficient for the population being served; and
- Decommissioning standards / requirements, in order to take a well out-of-service safely.

A hard copy of the proposed regulations is on file at the Cohasset Town Clerk's office, and will be available for public viewing during normal Cohasset Town Hall business hours.

The Board of Health will be holding a public hearing on these regulations on Tuesday, August 27 at 8:30 p.m. in the downstairs meeting room in Cohasset Town Hall.

Members of the public are invited to participate in the hearing and/or submit your comments and concerns to this office in advance of the hearing. Comments and concerns can be submitted by sending an email to boh@cohassetma.org, leaving a voicemail at 781-383-4116 x. 199, or sending a letter to: Cohasset Board of Health, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025.

GRIDLOCK

Board split over appointment

Treasurer collector to start in September

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A new employee appointment in Town Hall was just another example of gridlock between the Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager this week.

Cohasset has a new treasurer collector starting in September. Paula Harris, who is currently treasurer collector in Bridgewater, will start her new position on Sept. 4. Cohasset's most recent treasurer collector, Jane Lepardo, resigned her position this summer.

Two members of the Board of Selectmen, however, essentially voted against the appointment. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski appointed Harris; department head appointments, including the Finance Director and Police and Fire chiefs, fall under his purview, according to Cohasset's Town Manager Act. The selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject an appointment.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed stated at the Tuesday, August 20 selectmen meeting that the 15 days were already up, so the board did not have a chance to accept or reject. Milanoski had notified the selectmen of the appointment in an email two weeks prior to the meeting. Milanoski said that the selectmen were scheduled to meet during that timeframe, but the meeting was canceled, so there would have been more time to consider the appointment. Koed stated that it didn't matter whether they voted for the position or not.

Selectman Karen Quigley said that she was going to vote against the appointment out of principle. Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who also voted against the appointment, concurred with Quigley, adding that the "new town manager" should get to select the new treasurer collector for his team.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy, along with Koed, both voted in favor. Selectman Steve Gaumer was absent.

Failed motion

The vote was split 2-2. The original vote was to waive the 15-day approval period; the selectmen then took a vote to reject the appointment, and the board again voted 2-2 with Gjesteby and Quigley in the negative.

Since the motion was split it failed, thus the appointment became official anyway, Milanoski explained.

Quigley said her decision was not personal against the new treasurer collector, further stating that she spoke to Jerry Perry of the state's Dept. of Revenue who told her the town is in a "good financial situation right now" and "did not indicate a problem in waiting to hire a new treasurer collector."

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore and Capital Budget chair Jack Keniley said that the position is needed to complete financial work in Cohasset.

"The treasurer collector is an important function of the town," said Keniley, adding that the position reports to the finance director (Mary Gallagher), not the town manager. "It's not a political position; it's a technical position."

Without a treasurer collector, Keniley continued, the town could not get its financial reporting done in time. Pescatore added that there is no reporting now.

"There's a problem already," said Keniley.

Pescatore chided the board for failing to support the new position. "You have the opportunity to hire a professional... to lose this one is a mistake."

Quigley countered that her decision was not a political one.

Gjesteby chimed in that she had issues with Harris's references, however, and wanted a "stronger" candidate. "They seem weak to me," she said of the references. "We need a stronger person than this."

Pescatore responded, "You couldn't get anyone stronger." The Advisory chair, who participated in the interviewing process, said that he called Harris's references himself, and they "couldn't say enough how responsive, intelligent, and motivated this person is."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, who was in the audience, asked chairman Koed for a point of order, stating, "The tenure of this discussion is aggressive."

Koed said that "a board member is entitled to make a policy decision," and pointed out that Quigley and Gjesteby "think this appointment should wait."

The chairman did, however, caution his fellow board members on their comments once the votes had been taken. "We now have a town employee," said Koed. "Let's move forward."

Kennedy said the board needed to go ahead and get this done. "We have to keep the town moving forward," said Kennedy, adding that she found Harris's resume to be "impressive" and that the appointment was Milanoski's to make.

The process, said Kennedy, only allows the board to vote to reject the appointment. "We don't have to approve it."

Milanoski took issue with Gjesteby's comment that the "new town manager" should make this decision. The insinuation was that he would not be considered to be a candidate for the permanent town manager position, he said. Koed said that remark was out of order.

Milanoski stated for the record that he intends to apply for the job.

POLICE CHIEF

when former chief Mark DeLuca was suspended with pay; his contract expired in January 2013.

Quigley has been working in the Cohasset Police Department since 1995 and was appointed as acting chief last May.

Milanoski said that Quigley has been running the department successfully. The acting town manager said many of Quigley's peers "noted how morale has turned around" in the Cohasset police department since he was appointed as acting chief.

The acting town manager said that he conducted a "360 review" of Quigley and had an evaluation done by retired police chief William Sampson, a public safety consultant who gave the selectmen guidance earlier this year on how to start a police chief search. Sampson recommended the town only look for an outside hire if they were unhappy with the way the department is running.

"If you cannot articulate what it is you do not like about how the department is being run then why fix it?" asked Milanoski.

He went on to say that Quigley is respected not only by his fellow Cohasset officers, but also among his peers in neighboring communities.

"There was a unanimous ringing endorsement of Acting Chief William Quigley from our District Attorney Michel Morrissey, to Chief Peraino of Hingham, Chief Billing of Hull, Chief Ross of Norwell, Chief Stewart of Scituate, Chief Keenan of Quincy, and Chief Grimes of Weymouth," Milanoski said. "Bottom line from his peers, is he is a perfect fit for Cohasset, has the right temperament for the residents of the town, he is engaged in the community and it would be in the best interest of Cohasset to have Bill Quigley as the town's next chief."

Milanoski included his letter in a packet for the selectmen, along with two letters of recommendation and a copy of Sampson's evaluation of Quigley. Cohasset Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon and Boston Police Lieutenant Detective Robert Harrington, a Cohasset resident, both recommended Quigley for the job.

Lennon said in his letter, "If I had the slightest bit of apprehension about Acting Chief Quigley's ability to lead, I would have applied for the job myself or simply would not have endorsed him."

Harrington said that he has become acquainted with several members of the Cohasset P.D. and that "they are unanimous in their respect for Deputy Chief Quigley and for his stewardship of the CPD for the last year and a half."

Harrington also said that his "admiration and respect for Bill Quigley is not new."

"I was pleased to provide a recommendation for then Lieutenant Quigley back in 2009 when he sought the open position of Chief of Police," said Harrington. "What is new is the compelling need to continue the current stable and steadfast stewardship of the Cohasset Police Department by Deputy Chief Quigley."

Sampson's evaluation went over Quigley's work history and qualifications. He holds an Associates Degree in Criminal Justice and expects to complete his Bachelor's in December. He has also attended the FBI Law Enforcement Executive Development (LEEDA) program and is registered for the Municipal Police Institutes Executive Development Certificate Program.

Sampson noted that Quigley has been directly involved in the review and development of updated policies and procedures in the public safety department and has also served as the department's liaison to the South Shore Regional Emergency Communication Center (SSRECC) in Hingham, helping ease the department's transition when Cohasset's dispatchers moved there last year.

Overall, said Sampson, Quigley "has the skill, knowledge, and abilities to be a Chief of Police."

The selectmen wanted time to absorb Milanoski's plan to appoint Quigley. Milanoski said that he wanted to give them the document containing his letter, the recommendations and evaluation, to discuss at a September meeting.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed noted that the issue was not on the evening's agenda but told his fellow board members that since it had come up, he had heard Milanoski's plans earlier that day at breakfast. Koed said it wasn't proper to notify the rest of the board because he did not know what would happen that night.

He said that the agenda could be amended to discuss the matter under items not reasonably anticipated by the chair within 48 hours of the meeting. When the topic was raised again later in the meeting, selectman Karen Quigley said she felt "blindsided" by Milanoski's plan.

"You read this epistle tonight," said selectman Quigley (who is not related to the Acting Chief). "The board of selectmen was constrained on what we can say on personnel."

Koed said the board was in an awkward position. Selectman Quigley nevertheless made a motion to amend the agenda to discuss the issue. By then only three selectmen – Koed, Quigley, and selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy – were in attendance (Steve Gaumer was traveling and Martha Gjesteby left the meeting at 11 p.m.). Koed asked if there was a second for Quigley's motion.

"Not from me," said Kennedy. "I feel skittish adding an executive session out of order."

The motion was for a public discussion, said Koed. Still, Kennedy said she would like to discuss the matter another time.

"I don't want to be here till midnight," said Kennedy, adding that she had a 7 a.m. flight. "This should be a substantive discussion with the participation of a full board. There's not a lot to say without absorbing it. I feel very conflicted on what I would say."

Koed said he thought it was "wisest to take it under advisement."

The selectmen chair said in a phone call Wednesday that he feels the police chief position should undergo a public search process.

"These are public jobs — they deserve to be advertised publicly and open to the public. It's not the private sector," said Koed. "This is the way it is. I'm standing for principle."

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

CABLE

phone call Wednesday. She caught part of the selectmen's meeting on TV Tuesday but missed the moment the selectmen axed her fellow board member.

"I don't understand why," Martin continued. "There was no discussion; nobody called me."

Earlier in the evening the selectmen voted to appoint Ed Wadsworth to the Stormwater Advisory Committee with no discussion, other than Kennedy stating that she knew Wadsworth and that he would be "a tremendous asset" to that board.

The selectmen also voted to appoint and reappoint several members to Elder Affairs with little discussion. New members Harry St. Onge, Jim Mensching, and Sue Reagan were appointed while Ed Mulvey, Kelly Gildea, and Cindy Swartwood were reappointed. All six members were voted at once, and all appointments were unanimous. The Elders board currently has nine voting members and three associate (non-voting) members.

Carlson, Martin and Schiffmann were the only people to express interest in joining the cable board; no other requests were received by Town Hall. Carlson and Martin have served on the board since its inception in 2006.

Ironically, around a half hour after the votes on the cable board were taken, the selectmen's meeting broadcast ended abruptly. The board asked Carlson, who saw the vote on TV and drove to the meeting at 10:30 p.m., if he knew why the broadcast stopped. Carlson said that the cable studio director, Don Roine, had timed the broadcast to end around 10:30 p.m., estimating that the meeting would be over by then. The meeting was slated to end at 9 p.m., according to the selectmen's agenda, but Roine had budgeted for an extra hour and a half in case the meeting ran over. The meeting ended up stretching until nearly 11:30.

Carlson later spoke up during the public comment period and explained that as treasurer, he is in charge of playing CCTV's bills, and without him the committee – and therefore CCTV – would be unable to function unless someone else could step in to fulfill that role.

When it came time to vote on Carlson's membership, selectmen Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby both voted against him. Selectmen chair Fred Koed and co-chair Diane Kennedy both voted to reappoint Carlson. Selectman Steve Gaumer was absent.

CCTV is more than just an advisory board, Carlson explained; it is a non-profit corporation that was created in order to receive franchise fees and have contracts with cable providers. The town bylaws state that the board is to have five members, but they have only ever had three at a time, said Carlson.

"We've never been able to get five members on the board," Carlson said. "As a result of your vote tonight, we only have two members. Right now, the board can't act... Your action basically cripples CCTV," the entity that broadcasts the selectmen meetings and all other town meetings.

Martin said Wednesday, "We've been looking for five members forever; every time reappointments come up, we look for interest... Not only was there no competition [this year], but we went from having two empty seats to bumping someone off and having three empty seats."

Martin said that Carlson is an essential part of the cable board and would not be easily replaced.

"Removing Paul renders our board completely unable to function, and Paul has the skills that none of us have. I certainly don't have bookkeeping and financial skills that Paul has," said Martin, adding that without a third member, "we wouldn't have been able to move forward or vote as a board."

Carlson asked the selectmen to reconsider his appointment until a replacement can be found. "I've been on this board for seven to eight years now; I don't need to be on it." He asked for a six-month appointment to help the board transition and continue paying bills. "Otherwise, I just got an invoice today that I can't pay."

Kennedy motioned to reconsider Carlson's appointment, but Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski pointed out that only someone who had voted in the negative could ask the board to reconsider. Gjesteby had left the meeting at that point; Quigley then made the motion.

The three selectmen then voted unanimously to reappoint Carlson for six months.

Kennedy apologized to Carlson, who is also a former selectman (he opted not to run again in the May 2013 election, when his term ended).

"I'm sorry this happened," said Kennedy. "It's politics at its worst. I'm absolutely disgusted at this meeting tonight."

Neither Quigley nor Gjesteby stated during the meeting why they voted against reappointing Carlson. Quigley could not be reached for comment before press time. Gjesteby declined to comment during a phone call Wednesday.

Koed said Wednesday that he did not know why his fellow board members decided to vote the way they did, and said that they had not discussed the matter with him ahead of time.

Koed further stated that voting for the cable board members individually was not unusual; neither is voting for several positions simultaneously.

"Obviously the implication is if you're fine with 100 people, you vote them at the same time, but obviously they had an issue there," Koed said of Gjesteby and Quigley. "It's not an unreasonable request to split a vote."

Martin said that she was glad Carlson was reappointed in the end, but still confused as to why he was "kicked off" the cable board in the first place.

"I'm still wondering where it came from and why it happened at all," said Martin, adding that the move made little sense "when [the selectmen] haven't even appointed a selectmen liaison to take his place."

Carlson was also the selectmen liaison to the cable board.

Carlson wrote in a statement issued Wednesday that he believed the negative vote to be politically motivated, chiming with Kennedy's apology from the night before.

"Karen Quigley's vote on Tuesday night not to reappoint me to the Board of Cohasset Community Television was clearly based on petty political considerations. If she had done her homework, if she had checked in with CCTV Chairman Pat Martin before her vote, she would have readily discovered the practical problems her actions would cause."

Carlson also questioned statements made by Quigley at other recent selectmen meetings, stating that the selectman's "propensity for uninformed decision-making was also exposed in her offensive statement about former Police Chief Brian Noonan and in her proposed hiring freeze which would have closed down the Department of Elder Affairs in the midst of a Town Meeting mandated reorganization."

Martin said that if the move was a political one, why would the selectmen attack the entity that broadcasts the selectmen meetings to the public?

"They render the cable advisory committee and CCTV unable to operate just to make a point? It really bothers me, because CCTV is the network that brings [local news show] 'Our Town' to the viewers, and our whole focus is to provide both sides of the story, stay neutral, educate folks and help them get involved and know the issues. But we get blindsided," said Martin. "We're not a political group. We are a non-profit corporation that does business; we have bills and rent to pay."

Further, Martin said that she has worked with Carlson for a number of years and has "no complaints" about his time on the cable board.

"Paul has done yeoman's work for us and has gone above and beyond," said Martin.

Cohasset carillon celebrates MLK

On Wednesday, August 28, at 3 pm, the bells of St. Stephen's Church will ring in honor of Martin Luther King and his stirring speech "heard 'round the world" on that hot August day 50 years ago. Some 250,000 had followed King in that 1963 march on Washington for jobs and freedom and to end racial injustice. In front of the Lincoln Memorial, he spoke from a prepared text for seven minutes, the time agreed upon with the other speakers. The story goes, however, that when his good friend in the audience, gospel singer Mahalia Jackson, called out "Tell them about your dream, Martin," he did just that. And history was made.

Save the date for the sixth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail race and 1 mile fun run / walk on Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset.

The 5k race begins at 9 a.m. and the 1 mile fun run will be at 10:30 a.m. The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 4 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers, and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook, and a pond. Online sign ups will begin on Sept. 6.

Sign up early and get a super cool reusable organic cotton produce bag. Proceeds from the races benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

U-Mass Amherst grads announced

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Off to college

Hello there Cohasset, how are you doing this week? As the summer begins its journey toward the start of school for the many children in our lives, the one age group that started last week in some cases, are the college-aged students. It has been hard to watch, hear and talk about the emotional drop-offs and good-byes for this year's college freshmen, as my youngest is one of them, too! This Class of 2013 cannot possibly be the ones that are causing all the tears and emotions...yet they are 18 years old and more than ready for this next big journey in life. It is the parents who are so not ready! As our young adults roll their eyes at us, we wipe ours in an effort to not cry before walking away and taking that deep breath. Yes, it definitely "takes a village to raise a child!" Thank you to the friends, families, schools and community of Cohasset in the help in raising all our great kids. Time for them to fly solo as it is with the rest of this awesome class!

Best of luck to everyone in the college Class of 2013, as well as to all those starting the new school year. And to all the parents, who are wiping their eyes like me, we raised some awesome kiddos, cheers to a year of having them turn into young ladies and men.

UMass Lowell

Myles Collins-Wooley of Cohasset was recently recognized for achieving academic distinction at the University of Massachusetts Lowell.

Myles, majoring in music studies, was named to the dean's list at UMass Lowell for the Spring 2013 semester.

To qualify for the dean's list at UMass Lowell, a student must have completed no fewer than 12 graded credits for the semester and earned at least a 3.25 grade point average with no grade lower than C and without any incompletes.

BC High Awards

William J. Kemeza, president of Boston College High School, announces that the following Cohasset students received special awards at an end of the year assembly to honor BC High undergraduates.

Zachary James Coggins, Class of 2014, won an Academic Excellence award in Spanish III.

William Tanner Gildea, Class of 2015, won Academic Excellence awards in Algebra II Honors, Architectural Drawing, Chemistry I Honors and US History.

Matthew Hui Paul Montefusco, Class of 2016, won an Academic Excellence award in Chinese I.

Congratulations, all!

UMass Amherst

Approximately 5,500 students received undergraduate degrees from the University of Massachusetts Amherst this spring. Commencement ceremonies were held May 10, at the Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Congratulations to the following Cohasset students who earned a bachelor's degree:

Alicia Elizabeth Asnault, Adam Wade Berger, Luke Kenneth Brewer, Johanna Elizabeth Brophy, Margaret Christine Goodwin, Lauren Elizabeth Mack, Conor James Murphy, Carly McCall Salerno and Carley Elizabeth Zappolo.

Cookout

The Cohasset Elder Affairs' End of the Season Cookout takes place Thursday, Sept. 5, from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Cohasset Lightkeepers. Celebrate the end of summer, Cohasset style with chowder, burgers, and seasonal fare. Enjoy the entertainment of Paul Gookin and his New Orleans Jazz Trio. Transportation to this event will be available. Call and reserve your spot no later than Friday, Aug. 30 at 781-383-9112.

Art classes

The South Shore Art Center announces its Fall Courses & Workshops which begin on Monday, Sept. 16. New this fall, are 14 courses and workshops ranging from basket making to an advanced encaustic master workshop. Children's classes are offered daily for all age groups and include ceramics, drawing, painting, and mixed media. Classes in drawing and painting are offered in Hingham at the Hingham Community Center on South Street.

For a full schedule of Art Center courses and workshops, visit: ssac.org. Registration is available online, in person at the Art Center, or by calling 781-383-2787.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

ENGAGEMENT

Garber — Dymond

Helene Garber and Donald Bookstein, of Cohasset, announce the upcoming wedding of their daughter Rachel Garber to Gabriel Dymond, son of Donna and Lee Dymond of Potomac, Md.

The bride-to-be is a 2005 Cohasset High School graduate, follows in the footsteps of her mother Helene and her deceased father, Gary Garber, as a professional in the field of medicine. After graduating from Connecticut College in 2009, Rachel went on to receive her masters of medical science at Wake Forest University and is currently working as a dermatology physician assistant in New York City.

Her fiancé, Gabe, graduated from the University of Maryland in 2007 with a major in economics. After graduation, Gabe moved to New York City where he began his career in finance with Morgan Stanley & Company. He currently works as an international equity trader for a private investment company on Wall Street.

Rachel and Gabe reside in New York City and will be married in Boston this fall.

THE LOCAL 'BEET'

Check out potato salad recipe!

The days of August may be numbered and fall is almost in the air, but the abundance and variety of fresh produce at the Cohasset farmers market is at its peak.

Sweet corn, summer squash, new potatoes, eggplant, tomatoes, beans, carrots, cauliflower, cucumbers, lettuce, kale, onions, and radishes make for delicious cooking, healthy salads, and just plain snacking.

You can use many of these vegetables in the Farmers Market Potato Salad recipe, below. Not your usual potato salad, this recipe, cooked by Linda Storm at the market last week, combines fresh vegetables, all available at the market, with herbs and a mustard vinaigrette dressing. If you missed a taste last week, now you can prepare it yourself. It's easy and delicious!

John Farren of Cohasset samples some of the potato salad freshly made at the Cohasset Farmers Market.

Linda Storm flips onions, corn, summer squash, Japanese eggplant and zucchini in her frying pan while making a healthy potato salad at the Cohasset Farmers Market.

Linda Storm cuts up Japanese eggplant for her potato salad; the ingredients include fingerling potatoes, new potatoes, zucchini, summer squash, herbs, corn and onion.

More than just food

The market specializes not only in locally grown vegetables, fruit and herbs, but also in homemade foods and handmade articles. With over 20 vendors offering specialty foods and beverages, along with jewelry, headbands, baby clothes, quilts, bags, placemats, soaps, lotions, fresh flowers and more, it's a great place to pick up a birthday present, hostess gift, or even some early Christmas shopping. And don't forget to bring the kids down for face painting and a pony ride!

Music will be provided by Ray Papile during the August 29 market.

Coming soon: Pet Parade

Thursday, Sept. 26 marks the return of the annual Pet Parade. Start thinking about creative costumes for your pets. Professional dog trainer Terry Haskins will again judge the contest. Prizes will be awarded.

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. through October 17. For more information, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

Recipe: Farmers Market Potato Salad

Serves approximately six one-cup servings.

1 cup of fresh corn kernels (about 2 ears)
2 pounds of small new potatoes or fingerling potatoes, cut into 1 inch pieces
2 1/2 tablespoons of extra virgin olive oil, divided
2 tablespoons of chopped fresh herbs (basil, parsley, tarragon)
2 tablespoons of cider vinegar
2 tablespoons of whole-grain Dijon mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
Cooking spray
3/4 cup vertically sliced red or yellow onion
1 small zucchini (and/or summer squash and/or eggplant), cut into ½-inch pieces
1 cup of grape or cherry tomatoes, halved

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.*
Place corn and potatoes on a jelly-roll pan. Drizzle vegetables with one tablespoon of oil; toss to coat. Bake at 425 degrees for 30 minutes or until potatoes are tender.
Place mixture in a large bowl. Combine herbs through pepper in a small bowl, stirring with whisk. Gradually add the remaining olive oil, stirring constantly with a whisk. Drizzle potato mixture with dressing to gently coat. Make sure to do this while potatoes are still warm.
Heat large skillet over medium heat. Coat pan with cooking spray.
Add onion and zucchini/eggplant to pan; cook four minutes or until lightly browned, stirring occasionally. Add zucchini mixture and tomatoes to potato mixture; toss gently to combine.

This recipe can be served warm or cold.
*The potatoes may be boiled instead of roasted. This is a good option on a hot summer day when you don't want to use the oven.

GIMME SHELTER

Brothers want to stay together

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Let's hear it for the boys! We've got them, and they are precious. These sweet little guys want you to make a date to see them soon. Jack and Daniel are two of the most adorable little kids and are very playful. Cute antics and silly capers abound with kittens, and Jack and Daniel are little entertainers. They also have a loving and gentle side and are just waiting for someone to shower them with gentle petting, love and affection so that they can top off all of their play with cozy purr sessions and cat naps.

Jack is just adorable with a funny little freckle on his nose. That, along with his white cape of fur which transitions to black, gives him a unique, two-toned look. And little Daniel, well, he is the Mama's boy of this pair and has beautiful blue/grey eyes, a little white flame going up his nose and a classy tuxedo pattern down his chest. They are great little boys right now and will certainly be handsome young men as they grow up.

This pair of brothers are very bonded with each other, and they have been very attached to their momma cat, Summer, since birth. Living in a wonderful foster home, Jack and Daniel have had the opportunity to have her attention and love all the way along. This makes for well adjusted and happy kittens and they will be looking to transfer all that affection and bonding to their new family.

Summer, their beautiful tiger and white mom is also looking for a home and she can be seen with her baby boys. Do you have plans for new little footprints on your heart? These kittens, or their mom, or all three may be just the right ones to pitter pat into your life and home bringing love, laughter and warmth.

To learn more about these sweet brothers please call Judy at 781-534-4902. They are waiting to meet you! A really loving forever home to feel safe in and explore will be great for them so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

You can see more of our wonderful adult cats who are waiting for the best homes by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

The Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin' is booked for next week but you can call to check on the September date and reserve an appointment. There has been an explosion of litters this season and we are continuing to receive calls to take in more kittens. We want to help them all, but space is limited so having adult cats spayed and neutered is essential. If you or someone you know has a cat who needs to be altered please call us at 781-925-3121 for the upcoming spay date.

Since we still have quite a few kittens coming in, 5 more this week, please consider adopting from HSAR. They are little bundles of fun and full of energy guaranteed to bring smiles and love. If you have time to raise a new pair of frisky family members, please call or come to see them. They are simply irresistible.

Like many shelters, we are still in need of wet kitten food. If you are planning on donating to a shelter, please consider ours or another 501(c)(3) non profit. We survive on grants, gifts and donations and our incoming cats and kittens rely on all of us to keep them safe and healthy. Laundry detergent and cleaning supplies are also needed to keep clean living quarters for them. We appreciate your help in this area.

There are many events coming up that we will be participating in and we are hoping to see our loyal supporters and others who are interested in learning about and helping our shelter. The Hull Stem to Stern yard sale is happening on September 7th from 9-3. HSAR volunteers will be on the block diagonally across from our shelter on Nantasket Ave. at L St. Please look for us and help our kittens and cats while finding fabulous treasures!

Endless Summer is on our schedule as well. On September 21st, please join us at our booth on Nantasket Ave. for fabulous raffle baskets, Kittendale's Calendars, T shirts and other items. Visit our Facebook page for more updates and information.

To all of our volunteers, gratitude and thanks for working so hard through this busy summer. The shelter is full and important work is getting done thanks to all of you. The spirit of giving is abundant and we appreciate the time commitment made and the dedication to helping our animals who are in need of special care, safe handling and a loving environment.

Stacey Peasley to perform in Cohasset

Children's musician Stacey Peasley will perform in a private concert with her band at Playdipity from 11 a.m. to noon, on Friday, Aug. 30, followed at 12:30 p.m. by an UrbanSitter information session. The concert is sponsored by UrbanSitter.com, an online resource that utilizes social networks for parents to find and book babysitters recommended by people they know.

Peasley has won numerous awards including the Creative Child magazine 2012 Top CD of the Year Award, Nickelodeon Parents Connect Parents Pick Award for Best Party Entertainer, and her music has been heard on radio programs nationwide, including "Kids Place Live."

General admission is full. For more information, visit info@playdipity.com.

CLASS

that this is the highest enrollment number in the past six years.

"As the enrollment continued to climb this week, we felt it was best now to add a sixth full-day classroom," Cataldo stated. "We believe this will improve the learning environment of the classroom."

Cataldo elaborated in a phone call Wednesday, "The numbers were really growing, we were very concerned... I want every student to have the right opportunity, and this seems to be the right decision."

Each classroom will have 18 to 19 students, depending on whether more are enrolled before the end of August. Originally, when there were only five full-day classes, each class was to have 22 to 23 students.

The school will continue to have four full-time education support professionals (ESPs) assisting in the kindergarten classrooms.

LeCount said that he and Cataldo had gone back and forth on the enrollment numbers throughout the summer, but it was difficult to plan for this sudden spike.

"During the summer, we still don't know how many students will come through the door," said LeCount.

It was ultimately the superintendent's decision to add the sixth class, LeCount said.

"I really have to give the credit to the superintendent; she saw those class sizes and thought, even though we were going to have those classrooms supported with education support professionals, she was still concerned about the amount of students," the principal explained. "She really advocated for reducing those class sizes. I didn't object; to me, that was the right thing to do. When she approached me on it, I jumped right on board."

LeCount said that he thinks the enrollment spike reflects well on the Cohasset school system.

"It just speaks to the quality of education in Cohasset," the principal said.

Budget talk

The cost of full-day kindergarten was also discussed at the most recent School Committee meeting. This year the cost increased from $2500 for the year to $3000. Cataldo explained previously that the cost is in line with neighboring districts.

The kindergarten budget was brought up during a finance discussion at the Tuesday, August 20 Board of Selectmen meeting. Advisory chairman Peter Pescatore noted that the kindergarten budget appeared to have a surplus of nearly $400,000 this year.

Both selectman chair Fred Koed and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski suggested that the issues be taken up with the School Committee. Selectman Martha Gjesteby, however, said that she had received several calls from parents this week who were under the impression that the selectmen controlled the school budget.

The matter was raised after Milanoski discussed recommending the town fund a one-to-one technology initiative that would provide laptops or tablets to all middle and high school students.

Pesactore said that he was unaware of any legal mandate requiring towns to provide computers for every student.

Gjesteby quipped that only happens "when somebody like Bill Gates" donates computers to schools.

Milanoski said that it was only a "global discussion" at this point, and he was only recommending the town put some money aside in the capital stabilization fund.

Adrienne MacCarthy, Doane Street, came to the selectmen's meeting Tuesday to comment on the finance discussion, and chided them for bringing up school department numbers without attending the school board meetings or checking in with the superintendent.

"I find it reckless to talk about numbers the school department has... without full explanation," said MacCarthy. "You haven't been at the meetings where there is opportunity to talk about the numbers."

MacCarthy added that she appreciated Milanoski reminding the selectmen that "this is not in your domain." She concluded the matter was "inappropriate" to discuss without the school department's input, and reminded the board that revolving accounts can only be used for their designated purpose.

Pescatore responded that he tracks both the town and school side of Cohasset's budget.

"These are public numbers," the Advisory chair said. "I'm talking about the town and school side from public reports. If that's reckless, I'm reckless."

Koed cautioned, "We want to respect the autonomy the school has."

Cataldo commented on both issues that were raised at the selectmen's meeting during a phone call on Wednesday. First of all, the superintendent said that the kindergarten revolving account does not have a surplus.

"There are monies in the revolving account which really are already spoken for," said Cataldo. The money covers the kindergarten teachers' salaries, she said. "That account is used to pay salaries; that way, it's not in the operating budget."

As for the one-to-one initiative, Cataldo said that the idea was first explored two years ago when she pitched it to the Capital Budget Committee, who asked for more research. The following year, in May 2012, the town hired a Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, to oversee the technology infrastructure and make improvements for the school and town.

Since then, the IT plan has changed, said Cataldo. "In 15 months, if you saw what [Bonnell] has done, it is remarkable," said Cataldo. "In lightning speed, he single-handedly brought us to the twenty-first century."

As for whether students will eventually receive their own computers, Cataldo said that could be a ways off. However, "It's fine they brought it up; it's something we do have to discuss. It's becoming an integral part of every student's education."

OUR VIEW

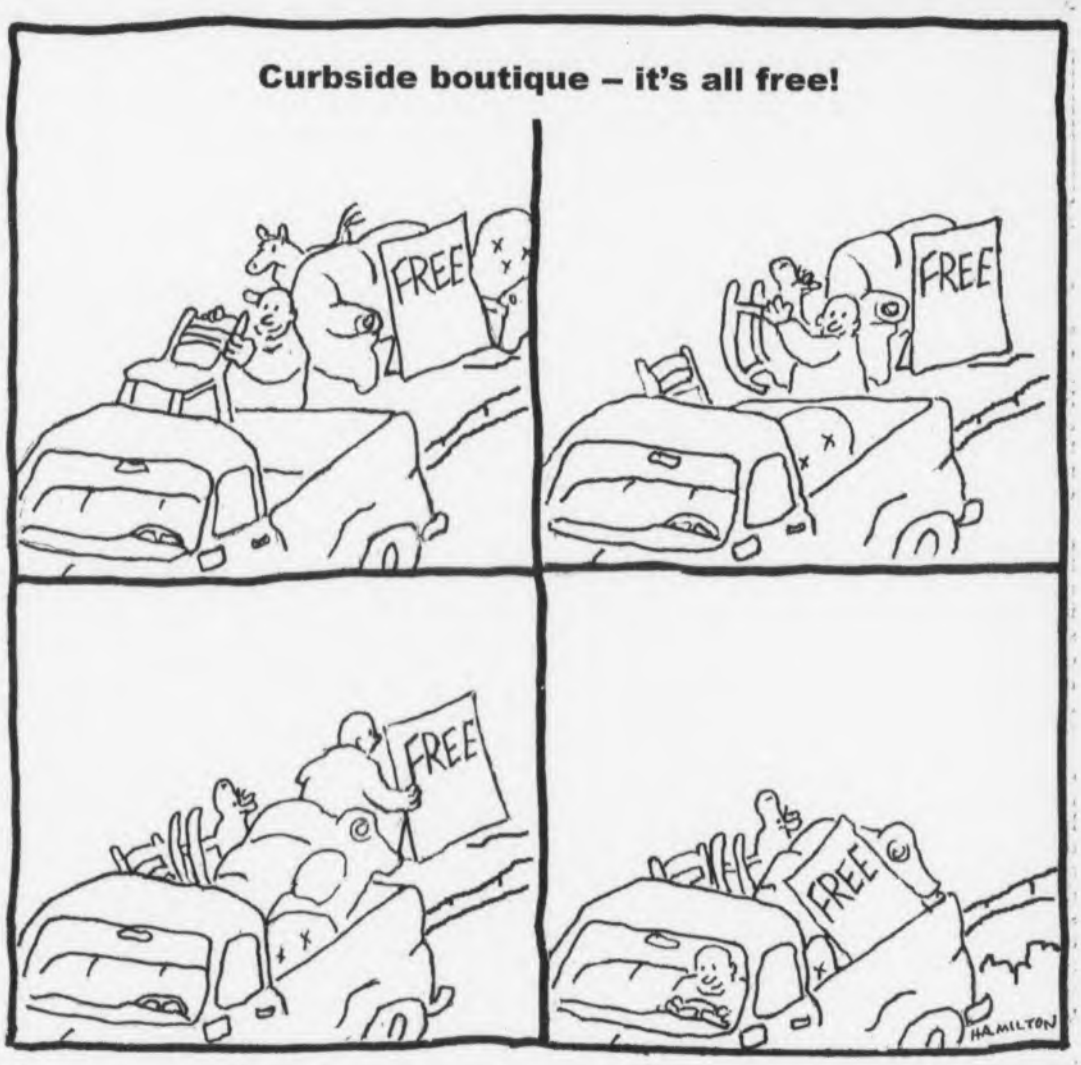
Where do we go from here?

If we could send the Selectmen on a camping trip where they could sing Kumbayah around a campfire – would they return with a sense of unity, closeness and compassion?

At this point, we are ready to try just about anything because the current board is so deeply divided that their ability to govern is seriously in question.

The fact of the matter is that the running of Cohasset that includes making key appointments such as the treasurer-collector or police chief cannot be put on hold endlessly until the board decides whether to hire a new town manager or make the acting town manager, permanent.

The board also needs to seriously question why the revised Town Manager Act is languishing in "committee" where according to some knowledgable folks – it may never see the light of day.



State Rep. Garrett Bradley and state Sen. Robert Hedlund need to be called before the board to explain clearly so we can all understand. If there is an issue that makes the revised act unconstitutional – then we need to know how to fix it.

Simply the fact there is opposition to the revised Act is not a good enough reason to hold it up. When, especially in Cohasset, has there been unanimity on any matter of substance?

What is at stake here is more than the revised TMA but the democratic Home Rule Petition process for the town. Down the road, are Home Rule Petitions duly approved by Town Meeting, going to be sidetracked because of some persistent, outspoken and relentless opposition? What is the purpose of a Town Meeting vote then? There will always winners and losers.

We also think that votes taken during the summer months on key committee appointments should wait until the full board can participate. It seems to us that it is common courtesy for any selectman to do their homework so they understand the consequences of their actions and notify a sitting committee member whose term is up if that selectman feels that person should not be reappointed. That would avoid the insensitive and uninformed result on Tuesday where in an apparent political move, long-time Cable Advisory Board and Cohasset Community Television (CCTV) treasurer, former selectman Paul Carlson, was not reappointed in a 2 to 2 vote. Carlson saw the vote on TV and then drove from home to the Selectmen's meeting where he implored the board to reinstate him on a temporary basis because of critical issues facing the committee such as being able to sign checks to pay staff and vendors, and to allow for a smooth transition.

The town could end up in a tough spot finding volunteers willing to serve – often for years – if there is no appreciation at all. Shouldn't the town be encouraging volunteerism?.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Takes issue with Selectman Quigley's statement

At the August 20 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Selectman Quigley referred to the board's decision to file a complaint with the State Ethics Commission regarding Selectmen Gjesteby's unauthorized public release of a confidential communication from Town Counsel. These communications belong to the board as a whole and no individual member has the right to release them to the public without board approval. The law is clear on this matter.

Selectman Quigley stated that Town Counsel, Paul DeRensis, one of the most respected experts on municipal law in the commonwealth, treated this matter as a minor infraction. She said that he stated many times that we should not file a complaint.

That is simply a false statement. A review of the minutes and video of the public meeting when the board discussed the appropriate response to the ethics violation shows no indication that Mr. DeRensis, who was in attendance (as was Ms. Quigley), disagreed with our decision.

The board voted to release the response from the State Ethics Commission. Selectman Gjesteby also received a response from the commission. In the interest of transparency, she must release that response as well.

Need help spreading wood chips!

The Deer Hill Playground project has come a long way! We are happy to report that the site has been prepared and that installation will begin this week. We hope to have much of the work completed by the 29th of August.

We now need your help. Our committee and the DPW will have the playground lined with large piles of wood chips scattered throughout. We need volunteers to come help and if possible bring wheelbarrows, shovels and rakes to distribute these piles evenly thought the play area. Children are welcome but must understand that the playground is off limits for play until it has been deemed safe at a later date. They are most welcome to use the field and basketball area if they get restless. To volunteer for one of the below 2-hour shifts please email Franchesca Arnold (franchesca@cohasset.net) and Ralph Tulio (RTulio@FinRecInc.com):

- Friday August 30: from 12-2; 2-4 and 4-6 or
- Sunday September 1: from 12-2; 2-4 and 4-6.

If you have any questions feel free to contact Franchesca at 383-2548 or Ralph at (617) 650-3813.

We need everyone's help so please help us spread the word about spreading wood chips!

Franchesca Arnold and Ralph Tulio for the PSO Deer Hill Playground Renovation Committee

Lacrosse coach will miss players

To all Cohasset Lacrosse players:

I've coached hundreds of you over the years, as boys and girls, as young men and young women, and watched you grow, watched you improve, watched you succeed, and most importantly watched you move on to new opportunities in life, many of you now beyond high school; perhaps better equipped to do so as a result of your time on the field.

Now it's time for me to move on. After 13 seasons coaching lacrosse in Cohasset, most of them long before my own kids were old enough to play, I'm moving my family to California for work and will have a chance to coach some west coast lacrosse.

The only thing to say that hasn't been said a thousand times on the fields is thank you, from me to you. Whether you know it or not, you have all been a big part of my life. It's been my honor and great pleasure to spend time on the lacrosse fields with you. Watching you develop into competitive players dedicated to your friends and teammates has been like one big highlight real for me. I wouldn't trade that time for anything.

Keep challenging yourselves no matter what your level today. Strive to be a well-balanced student athlete of strong character. Opportunity will find you and you will be happy and successful. I will miss you and I wish you all the best.

Coach Stu Sanderson, 115 Linden Drive

An apology...

In last week's edition, the Cohasset Mariner inadvertently published a photo of Dylan Gold's younger brother, Wyatt, thinking the photograph was of Dylan.

In an effort to write the story about the tragic accident and include some remembrances of Dylan, the Mariner appealed to family friends of the Gold family. We received a number of remembrances last week and more this week including several photographs. We have compiled a special tribute to Dylan (see page 14).

Although the photos were labeled, we mixed the boys up last week and we offer our sincere apology to the Gold family and to the family friend who provided the photographs

COMMENTARY

Concerned about lack of transparency

STEVE GAUMER

The reason I requested that the Town Manager Act be put on the Selectmen's agenda for discussion was to explore why our petition is currently stuck in committee on Beacon Hill.

To the Selectmen and the Citizens of Cohasset:

I am submitting this written statement to be read into the record of the August 20, 2013 Selectmen's Meeting. I would have preferred to present my comments personally. Unfortunately, at this moment I am in flight for a two day meeting with clients on the West Coast.

The Selectmen's Comment's period is normally reserved for the congenial discussion of neighborly news and gentle inquiries. Tonight, I wish to speak on a more fundamental concern, the lack of transparency and due process in deliberations by the Selectmen.

A few weeks ago, I requested that a discussion of the status of the Town Manager Act be put on the agenda. My request was denied. Last week, I asked the Chairman to defer discussion about the job description for the Town Manager's position -due to my travel schedule- to the next most convenient date. Again, my request was denied.

The items are consequential and will have a long-term impact on the town's governance. I have deep concerns that the Chairman has, by controlling the Selectmen's agenda and not allowing open and complete debate, shortchanged the citizens of Cohasset. These important issues are not being fully discussed and vetted if they are not part of the agenda.

Recently, the town meeting voted overwhelmingly in favor of revising our existing Town Manager act, which now requires a legislative vote. I have been advised by legislatively savvy folks that a home rule petition such as this — containing revisions only — sails through committee and is voted quickly. In fact the original Town Manager Act (which fundamentally changed our local government) followed just this pattern.

The reason I requested that the Town Manager Act be put on the Selectmen's agenda for discussion was to explore why our petition is currently stuck in committee on Beacon Hill. Our elected state representatives have been vague as to its status, saying only it is being "studied," which is to say, it is being euthanized.

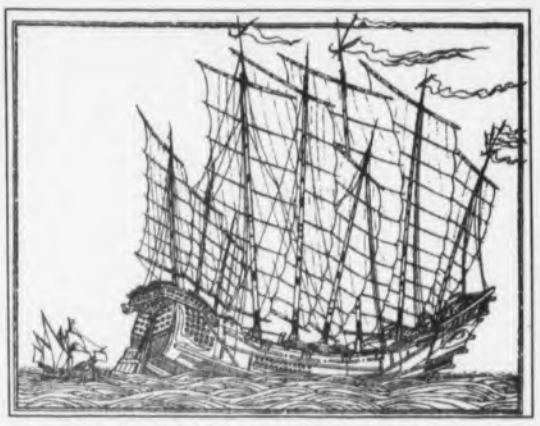
I asked the chair at the request of several residents, to invite our elected state representatives to address the Board of Selectmen in open meeting so that we may publicly inquire about the hold up. The reply from Chairman Koed, documented in an email exchange, advised me that in becoming advocates for the Act's passage, we have already stirred up enough resistance and we, the Selectmen, should sit quietly until the controversy blows over. My request was denied.

My purpose for asking Mr. Hedlund and Mr. Bradley to appear in front of the Selectmen was to discuss the progress of the legislation and the politics of its approval. As our elected representatives on Beacon Hill, they are in the best position to directly answer questions arising from our citizens regarding this bill.

Next, I asked to delay this evening's discussion of the draft job description and town profile to be used in the town manager search until I could attend the meeting. The job description is going to be used by our search consultant The Collins Center as the basis for screening candidates seeking the Town Manager's job. Conducting a search for a permanent Town Manager is the most consequential act we will undertake as a board. Our consultant, the Collins Center notes: it is more important that we conduct this process properly and effectively, rather than quickly. Asking to defer this item to "the next most convenient date" would ensure full discussion of the draft by all of the Selectmen and likely produce a more representative document. Again, my request was denied.

Shortly after election, our town counsel and I spoke so that he could explain in broad fashion, my duties in this position. He made it clear, above all, that I represented the entirety of the town, rather than just those who voted for me. He further noted that while we are executive in nature, we are not mayors or managers, rather we are goal setters, policy makers and the final stewards of the town's wellbeing. I take these responsibilities to heart.

In both these cases, I am seeking to represent the interests of the town as a whole, by providing the citizens of Cohasset a full understanding of the facts surrounding consequential, enduring issues for our community. A full understanding of the facts can only be obtained by having access to placing items of import on the Board of Selectman's agenda, for open discussion.



Steve Gaumer is a member of the Board of Selectmen.

Interesting facts about China

The oldest tree in the world, the gingko, survived the Ice Age only in China, thanks to Buddhist monks who preserved and cultivated them in temple gardens.

DID YOU KNOW THAT....

• China, the world's third largest country (after Russia and Canada), is home to over 1.3 billion people, almost one fifth of the earth's population. In fact, there are more people in China than in all of Europe.

• The name "China" comes from Qin, the emperor who first established a unified empire about 221 B.C.E. Silk from the Qin era was China's first introduction to the Western world.

• The oldest tree in the world, the gingko, survived the Ice Age only in China, thanks to Buddhist monks who preserved and cultivated them in temple gardens. According to one text written about 2800 B.C.E., the tea brewed from the leaves was a cure for senility.

• Luk Yu, an 8th century Tang dynasty Master of Tea, wrote that drinking tea aids the digestion, especially "when sipped in the company of sweet and beautiful maidens in a pavilion by a water-lily pond or by a lacquered bridge."

• China's main language (spoken by 75 percent of the population) is Mandarin, a word that originated from the Portuguese word mandar meaning "to govern." Cantonese is the second language.

• In the "old days" a man of 80 did not have to kneel before the emperor. At age 90 he would often be consulted by the emperor for advice. Women, of course, were not consulted on important matters.

• Confucius – teacher, politician, philosopher, and a strong advocate of marriage - urged that a man take a concubine if his wife bore only daughters.

• In China white is the color of mourning. Announcements of a funeral are sent as invitations in a white envelope. If the deceased reached the age of 80, pink is used because living beyond 80 years requires celebration rather than mourning. A guest who cannot attend a funeral should send flowers and a white envelope containing money.

• The Chinese language has no plurals, no past or future tense, and no articles (the, a, an). All words, however, have four to six different tones to clarify the meaning of spoken words. For example, the word "ma" can mean "mother" or "horse" or "scold" or "hemp," depending on the tone of voice: level, falling, rising, or falling-rising.

• Chinese family names (almost always just one syllable) are placed first, followed by the given name – the equivalent of Smith John.

• The assortment of mouth-watering delicacies – like shrimp dumplings and chicken feet in black bean sauce — we know as Dim Sum, means, literally, "to touch the heart." By the way, Confucius also said that "Eating is the first happiness."

• About 500 years before Gutenberg printed the Bible in the mid-1400s, the Chinese invented woodblock printing. The world's oldest surviving printed book, The Diamond Sutra, a sacred work of the Buddhist faith, was printed in 868 C.E. during the Tang Dynasty. (In 1900 a Chinese monk found a copy of the book in a cave).

• Like Columbus (in 1492), Zheng He (in 1421), set off with men in ships to explore the world. Unlike Columbus, Zheng He, a eunuch and a devout Muslim, was commander of 28,000 people sailing on 300 ships, the longest of which measured about 400 feet (the longest of Columbus' three ships, Santa Maria, was about 85 feet).

• Like Columbus, Zheng He died in obscurity. Unlike the voyages of Columbus, which opened the door to colonization of the New World, however, Zheng He's voyages resulted in China closing its door for centuries. Government officials concluded there was nothing of any value for trade offered by the outside world.

LIVING WELL

Stretched to the limit this summer

JOAN F. WRIGHT

It's been an odd summer, vacillating between downpours and windy rains to stretches of extreme heat to cool days to yet even more rain. Certainly not what many of us expected after the winter we endured. After all, this is New England and usually one bad season begets a better season just to even it all off.

In our zest for sun, we dash outdoors in those days and hop on our bikes, or set out on a run, and try to get in all the exercise we've missed out on due to the rain or heat. We forget that maybe we haven't worked up to the lengths we hoped to achieve by now so we stretch our bodies to the limit. And all too often, we find ourselves pulling muscles or straining a limb all in an effort to "catch up."

Patience should be the signature virtue of New Englanders since we all have to wait out various weather patterns to get to the one we love. But it usually is in short supply for those of us who want to be outdoors all summer. So to counter weather's impediments, and our own impatience, try to balance each day with some good warm up exercises whether you're stuck indoors watching the rain or angling for the vent of the air conditioner due to the heat, or outside in the driveway limbering up before that run in the sun.

Recent studies reported in The Journal of Strength and Conditioning Research showed that stretching itself might not be the best avenue to take before exercise. In fact, a wide-range of studies reported in The Scandinavian Journal of Medicine and Science in Sports concluded that pre-exercise stretching was counterproductive and often worsened performance.

Instead, warm-up exercises that move the muscles that will be needed for your exercise of choice (running, biking, tennis, golf) are far more effective and advantageous than stretching. So, doing jumping jacks and leg kicks might be a better choice to prepare muscles before a run or ride.

Yoga is a perfect way to stay flexible and balanced regardless of the weather. There are countless yoga classes across the South Shore as well as many offerings on television via on-demand fitness TV. You can purchase yoga DVDs and books, which many local libraries also have to check out.

Some people think that you need to be flexible and elastic-like to practice yoga. But if you saw me in my yoga class, you'd know this isn't true! The nice thing about yoga is that there are many levels and approaches to the practice, and most teachers are good about showing participants how to go at their own speed and modify poses to meet their own physical limitations.

Many postures of yoga can be done right in one's chair – at the office, the kitchen table, or even in the car at stoplights! The beauty of this is that you can benefit from yoga no matter where you are. And again, weather can't interfere!

FOR THE RECORD

Still Pink after all these years

GREGORY MATHIS

What many thought was a colorful gimmick back in October of 2009 has evolved into a campaign that has raised more than $100,000 in the fight against breast cancer over the past four years.

This October, GateHouse Media New England will embark on its fifth annual Paint It All Pink program to raise awareness and funding to help battle to a disease that continues to impact many lives.

Like the previous four years, your hometown community newspaper will once again be printed on pink newsprint the first week of October.

The pink paper is more than just a symbolic gesture designed to draw attention to Breast Cancer Awareness Month. We'll use those pages to highlight the latest research, technology, and medicine, as well as important information that can save a life through early detection and information about support groups available. You'll also learn more about our partner is this campaign, the Susan G. Komen Massachusetts foundation.

A big part of our coverage over the past several years has been the inspiring and compelling stories readers have shared in their own words. Breast cancer survivors and family and friends touched by the disease have provided insightful and personal stories that showed its impact beyond the statistics and the technology.

Although this disease still carries with it pain and suffering – and heartbreak for some families – great strides are being made in the areas of detection, treatment and research. And while there still is no cure, more and more people are beating breast cancer and living to talk about it.

We're looking for your personal stories once again. Soon, you will see a reader callout in your community newspaper, as well as on your Wicked Local website, asking readers to share their stories.

We know for many breast cancer survivors and their families this is a private matter. We also know that your stories will inspire others facing similar struggles and will give those people strength, faith and determination in their time of need.

Like the past four years, GateHouse Media New England will donate a portion of the advertising revenue generated through a special advertising program, as well as part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold the first week of October. Once again, that donation will be made to Komen MA.

There are a number of great causes and organizations competing and struggling for research dollars, donations through fundraisers, as well as public awareness. Each family is faced with its own circumstances, its own health issues and its own causes, including heart disease, stroke, Alzheimer's/dementia, head injuries, Crohn's and colitis, prostate, ovarian and many other types of cancer, just to name a few.

As a company, our focus with the Paint It All Pink campaign continues to be breast cancer and Breast Cancer Awareness Month. For those with other causes to champion, continue your fight and continue to make a difference however you can. We will do the same.

October is right around the corner, so keep an eye out for our reader callout and consider sharing your story.

Historical Society clambake Sept. 14

In 1951, the Cohasset Historical Society held a memorable clambake on Pleasant Beach. As part of the organization's 85th birthday celebration, the society is reviving the tradition on Saturday, Sept. 14 with a clambake at Sandy Beach.

Celebrate the end of summer at a real New England clambake with all the fixings. The event benefits the Cohasset Historical Society, allowing them to provide the community with programs and exhibits highlighting the rich history of Cohasset.

For more information, call 781-383-1434 or visit the Historical Society online at: www.cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

Remembering Dylan

The Cohasset community has been grieving the loss of one of their own over the past week. On Sunday, August 11, Dylan Gold was killed in a tragic accident. He was nine years old.

Since then, calls and messages have poured in to the Mariner from family friends and neighbors who all wish to pay tribute to this special boy who touched the lives of many.

The nine-year-old has been described as smart, athletic, adventurous, inquisitive, and very musical. Dylan was homeschooled but very active in the community, being a member of the Sailfish Swim Team and the Running Club and playing soccer and lacrosse. It is clear that Dylan is loved by his community and will be long remembered.

Susan Hoadley:

"I work for Hoadley Martinez Architects. Corina Martinez and I designed the Golds' addition on their house, which they used as a conservatory space to teach the boys, who were homeschooled. The memory that is so vivid to me is the six-year-old Dylan popping in on our evening design meetings to pore over the drawings and imagine the new spaces that were on paper. He was so bright; he made the effort to understand what he saw, and he even offered ideas about how the family would use the design that was on the drawings for beloved home and explain it to Wyatt, who would listen intently.

"Dylan was a remarkable big brother, and very bright boy who was very attuned to his world and ready to learn about anything.

"Dylan and Wyatt's ages coincide with my kids Andrew and Nicholas, and my kids looked forward to any opportunity to be at the Golds' house, because it always meant fun with the dogs. The boys and their pets were synonymous — and our boys knew that if it was time to run on the trails at Wainwright, that there would be a big adventure. No puddle went unsplashed or rock unturned. Dylan was very attuned to animals to the natural world, whether it was a pet to commune with or a new creature to find."

Nicholas Henry, 9:

"Dylan was one of my first friends. He liked adventure. He was a really good goalie on my soccer team, and a really good lacrosse player. He was awesome and I will miss him very much."

Kevin Norgeot:

"Dylan played soccer in 2013 probably for another soccer team, which would be called Cohasset U-10 Boys Town soccer. He has played multiple years. In 2012, I was his coach for the U-8 Boys (2nd grade team).

"We will miss seeing Dylan's smiling face playing soccer on Milliken field. He was a fun player to have around, a hard worker and most importantly, he was polite, a great sport, and a great teammate. I also appreciate having talked with Howard Gold while playing with the family's puppy this year, and learning about the ski weekends in Vermont that they have all enjoyed together. To say that Dylan will be missed is an understatement." Best Wishes, Kevin Norgeot & Family

Maite Diaz:

"My favorite memories of Dylan surround how much he loved to play his guitar. He had such enthusiasm for it, that he taught himself the last and most difficult song in Suzuki Book 2 ('Waltz') before he even finished Book 1. I think he liked to challenge himself.

"Dylan taught my son 'Waltz,' and they used to practice it in secret because the guitar teacher didn't want them to go that far ahead.

"I'm sure others will mention how Dylan loved to go barefoot. What a good rock climber he was! He could climb to the top of the swing set too.

"His mother always supported him being who he was, doing what he loved to do."

Polly Duxbury:

"I have no doubt Dylan would have accomplished great things in his life... barefoot! He was a wonderful person, in large part because of his wonderful parents, who gave him so much in his short life— not 'things' so much as love, and freedom to explore, to create, to be his own person.

"Dylan was an adventurer first and foremost; I will always remember him climbing rocks with complete agility or traveling way ahead on a walking trail, almost always in his bare feet. But he was also kind, smart, respectful, creative, musical, athletic, friendly and had a great sense of humor. I'll miss you Dylan; I'm so grateful that Will and I were able to be a part of your short but remarkable life."

Will Duxbury, 9:

"I will always remember playing manhunt with Dylan and his neighbors. He was a really good friend to have. I will miss him."

Kelly Grech:

"Dylan was part of the running club here in Cohasset. The thing that I will always remember about Dylan was his magnetic smile. He smiled from the minute he was dropped off to the minute our hour was up. He was an intelligent and kind boy, it was a pleasure and an honor to have coached him and I feel blessed to have known him."

Zander Chase, 10:

"He was the best friend ever. Dylan was so nice and he was really fun. He was a great friend. I miss him already. He always used to play basketball and capture the flag at the neighbors' house. I am beyond thankful that Wyatt is ok. I'm super, super, super sad that Dylan is not here anymore."

Peter Crumley, age 9:

"I really liked Dylan. He was nice and a good sharer... funny, too. He called the yellow lacrosse balls- 'banana balls,' which made me laugh. I will miss him."

Ken Cook:

"Dylan was an important part of our lives right from the time he came home to 22 Pond from the hospital. I remember him as a sweet little baby and as a charming little boy who almost always had a smile on his face.

"He was bright, a child who learned quickly, but who would stay with the learning process even though it would frustrate many other children his age, in the two to nine category. Often, he and other neighborhood kids his age would play in our back yard, and it was a treat to see and to listen to them. Dylan was a leader, suggesting solutions to problems that would make some others frustrated.

"He had an observant, inquisitive nature. Much of the back yards of the Golds and the Cooks is taken up by Sunset Rock and its various outcroppings. I remember one day when Dylan, at age seven or so, stopped to analyze a rock that was different from the usual outcroppings. He asked me why it was different. He listened intently as I told him it was a conglomerate and I tried to explain how the great glaciers receded at the end of the ice age and picked up pieces of other rocks along the way. To my surprise, he understood this and wanted to know more.

"His mother and father, Allison and Howard are medical professionals and must have passed on some of the scientific inquisitiveness that has framed their lives. They are great parents always willing to explain and expand the 'whys' of things. Younger brother Wyatt was fortunate to have had Dylan as a mentor, with Dylan always ready to stop what he was doing to help Wyatt learn things.

"As an example, Dylan was a very good Lacrosse player for a 9-year old. Learning to use the Lacrosse stick is not easy. Wyatt had some difficulty when he first tried to use the stick. I was so impressed as I watched Dylan, with extreme patience, teach Wyatt how to do things like this."

Matthew Keene, 10:

"Dylan was a kind person who was never mean to anyone. In my memory, he was a great lacrosse player and teammate, he always showed good sportsmanship and was a big help to the Cohasset lacrosse team. Because Dylan was such a nice person, he had lots of friends."

Lori Dali:

"Dylan's life was cut way too short, but in the short time he had, he lived every minute to the fullest. I always loved to hear about what tricks or stunts he had come up with. He truly was a one of a kind and Allison and Howard knew that. They let him live the life that was best for him, the ultimate goal for any parent, and they did it so well. His smiling face, bruised knees and bare feet will be missed for many, many years to come."
- The Dali Family

Stephen Stelljes:

"Our hearts go out to the Gold family as they recover from this tragic loss. Every memory we have of Dylan is of a happy kid. All smiles at karate, soccer, lacrosse and most recently skiing at Sugarbush.
Howard, Allison and Wyatt, your time with Dylan was cut way too short, but know that every day he was here he was surrounded by a loving family. Dylan, we'll miss you buddy." - Stelljes family

Barb Toohey, Swim Team Coach:
"Dylan was a member of the Sailfish Swim Team out of the Scituate Racquet Club. Dylan, one of our original Sailfish Swim Team members, your smiling face, good nature and outstanding team spirit will be missed by all."

Blake Martini, 9:

"I remember Dylan being nice and funny. I remember him at lacrosse practice. He was a good player."

Justin Frojo, 10:

"Dylan was a fun kid. I had fun playing with him in the bouncy house at my neighborhood party."
"Thoughts and prayers for the Gold family." - Ginni Froio

Christian Lewis, 9:

"This is what I remember the most about Dylan. I remember Dylan being really nice and shy. He was always very friendly. We will all miss Dylan dearly he was our friend and classmate."

Charron family:

"We will remember Dylan as a young child, scaling the rocks at Sandy Beach and leading the way through the trails of Wheelwright Park, always looking for the next adventure. We will remember his soccer ball trap move, the way he would tap the ball so effortlessly and fluid, embodying his free spirit." - Sarah, Jim, Nathan, and Hannah Charron

Rob Canavan:

"I had the pleasure of meeting Dylan through Cohasset lacrosse - he always had a smile and was a joy to coach. He never complained and was always happy to be on the field and with his friends. He was kind to his teammates and respectful to his coaches. His smile went a long way and that is how I will remember him. I didn't get to know him for a long time but I am glad we crossed paths."

Jim Morrisey:

"My heart breaks for Dylan and his family. Coaching any child is special, but coaching Dylan in soccer was truly very special to me. I remember near the end of the season I said to his dad that Dylan was the most improved player on the team. Less than a minute later, Dylan scored a goal. Big smiles all around on that day. I will forever remember Dylan in his neon green shirt on Saturday mornings."

Bryce Morrisey, 9:

"I really enjoyed playing soccer with Dylan, he was a good teammate. I'm very sad."

Hilton Hudson, 9:

"Dylan was very nice and funny. He would tell me he was very rich because his last name was 'Gold.' I would told him his first name should have been Rich, like Richy Rich, only his name would have been Rich Gold. We would laugh."
"This is a sad time for our community. We hold the family high in our thoughts and prayers." - Bryan, Stephanie and Hilton Hudson

Paul Appleton:

"As Dylan's lacrosse coach the past three years, I remember his constant enthusiasm for the game. He was always one the first ones at practice, dressed and ready to play while many of his teammates could be found wrestling on the hill or playing sword fight with their sticks. Dylan always had his characteristic glowing smile that could never be missed even from behind his oversized facemask. All the coaches from his 3rd grade lacrosse team remember Dylan as one of the nicest, most coachable, hardest working kids we had on the team. He truly enjoyed the game and excelled. We will all miss Dylan and there will be a void on our team in the coming years that will never be filled. On behalf of The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program, we send our deepest condolences to the Gold family."

UPDATE

Town Manager Act not yet voted

Bill still waiting in committee

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"My intuition is, from my experience up here, that had there not been any opposition, it would have been favorably [voted] pretty quickly."
State Sen. Robert Hedlund

Cohasset's Town Manager Act bill is still in committee, awaiting a positive or negative vote.

On Tuesday night, former selectman Ted Carr reported to the current Board of Selectmen that the bill, which was submitted to the State Legislature in May as a Home Rule Petition as voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting, had failed in committee. He said he heard this from House members a few days ago.

However, according to the chair of the House and Senate joint Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government, the committee has not yet taken action on the bill.

"The committee as of yet has taken no action on this bill," Peake stated in an email Wednesday morning. "Like every other bill where we hear conflicting testimony, we don't take an immediate vote, but give ourselves time to study the issue. The committee will continue to meet through this fall and spring and can vote on this bill at any of those hearings."

Peake promised to keep Cohasset's State Representative Garrett Bradley in the loop on the bill's status, "so he can keep the Board of Selectmen informed."

The petition became a bill with a docket number, H.3486, in June and had a State House hearing with the joint committee on July 23. Many Cohasset residents and officials, including two current selectmen, spoke on behalf of the bill and its merits, while a handful were there to oppose it. According to those in attendance, the majority of speakers were for the bill.

The bill details several amendments to Cohasset's Town Manager Act (TMA), including how the budget process is done and also the removal process for a town manager. The change that has garnered the most attention publicly, however, affects the eligibility of who can apply for the permanent town manager position.

The retooled TMA removes a prohibition for town employees and board members applying for the job; it also changes the cool-off period for selectmen, who are allowed to apply after they have vacated their position for 15 months.

Under the current Act, they only have to wait 12 months. Currently any town employees or board members must also wait a year before they can apply for the job.

This one item has attracted much controversy since the town's Governance Committee started revising the TMA. Former town manager Michael Coughlin, who spoke at the State House hearing, has alleged a conspiracy between the Governance board and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who previously served as that board's chair before vacating his position when the selectmen appointed him as acting town manager in March 2012.

Milanoski was appointed shortly after Coughlin was removed from the position. Coughlin only worked in Cohasset for six months. Milanoski has stated his intent to apply for the permanent position.

The town has been waiting to hear how the joint House and Senate Committee decided to vote. Governance Committee member Jack Keniley recently noted that other towns with similar Home Rule Petitions that had hearings the same day as Cohasset's had already seen their bills passed. State Rep. Garrett Bradley explained that those bills did not have opposition and therefore did not take the committee as long to consider.

Those who attended the Tuesday selectmen meeting wondered why, if the bill had indeed failed, the town had not yet gotten the news.

Selectman Karen Quigley asked, "Has the Town Clerk received anything? It's strange the town hasn't been notified."

After hearing from Carr during the Tuesday night selectmen meeting, members of the Governance Committee checked in with Bradley and Peake the following morning. Peake sent an email reply at 7:17 a.m.

Bradley said in a phone call Wednesday that what Peake had shared was the latest information available, and did not comment further other than to say that he had reached out to Carr to find out where he had received his information.

The Mariner could not reach Carr for comment before deadline.

Senator Robert Hedlund said in a phone call Wednesday that it is normal for the committee to take longer to review a bill that has had some opposition, but it doesn't mean the bill will fail.

"The bill had the public hearing, and there were people on both sides of the issue in Cohasset that testified. My intuition is, from my experience up here, that had there not been any opposition, it would have been favorably [voted] pretty quickly," said Hedlund, "but often times when the committee gets testimony on both sides, they'll hold the bill and do a little more analysis, which is what's being done now. So it's not dead, it just hasn't' been taken up for dispensation yet."

Hedlund added that since the bill was submitted as Home Rule Petition that was vetted and voted for by the town, "it's more likely to pass than not to pass."

When a petition "has been vetted, voted on, approved and sent to us by the town, usually the committee serves as a backstop to the constitutionality of it," Hedlund explained.

For the bill to fail, the senator continued, "There would have to be significant factors or extenuating circumstances or constitutional issues that would give the committee pause."

Selectman Steve Gaumer was not at Tuesday's selectmen meeting but prepared a statement ahead of time, which selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy read. Gaumer asked Koed to bring in Bradley and Hedlund to discuss the TMA bill (see page 13). Koed responded that he would have them in if and when there are any updates to discuss.

Town Manager Search update

The town is proceeding with its search for a permanent town manager. The Board of Selectmen hired the UMass Collins Center as consultants to draft a town profile defining Cohasset's challenges, and what the town is looking for in a town manager, as a first step in the process.

The selectmen reviewed a draft of the town profile and had mixed feelings. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said she flagged multiple grammatical errors, as well as substantive issues that she felt needed to be clarified before rubber-stamping the document. Chiefly, Kennedy was concerned that the Collins consultant had spoken to each selectman and town department head but had not spoken to any town committee chairs.

Selectman Karen Quigley said that she did not think that the board members' perspectives would differ drastically from that of the town employees or selectmen. Selectmen chair Fred Koed noted that talking to 10 different people would yield 10 different perspectives.

Quigley and Gjesteby wanted to vote on the document, but Kennedy wanted more time to review it. She also wanted selectman Steve Gaumer, who was traveling on business Tuesday night, to be present to discuss and vote on the document.

Koed suggested the selectmen take an hour to discuss the profile at their Tuesday, August 27 meeting.

Look for more on these issues in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

BRIEFLY

Ethics board rules on Gjesteby matter

The State Ethics Commission decided to take no further action against a member of the Board of Selectmen, who had been turned in by her fellow board members for review.

The ethics commission said in a June 28 letter that no further action was required in a matter of an information leak. Selectman Martha Gjesteby had forwarded an email from Town Counsel to attorney and former selectman Ronnie McMorris back in December. While the contents of the email have not been disclosed publicly, the selectmen stated that it contained privileged attorney-client information.

The selectmen voted to turn the matter over to the ethics board during their January 8 meeting.

Gjesteby said during the Tuesday, August 20 selectmen meeting, after the letter had been read into the record, that the email she sent was a simple query and that she had no intention of harming the town.

"I would never jeopardize the town in any fashion," said Gjesteby. "That's probably why the ethics commission ruled the way it did."

Selectman Karen Quigley, who was not on the board in January, said that she felt the board owed Gjesteby an apology, and furthermore, the town should reimburse Gjesteby the $10,000 in legal fees she spent defending herself on the matter.

Quigley said the apology is due "in light of the fact that town counsel stood here and said Martha Gjesteby did nothing wrong."

Former selectman Paul Carlson, who was chair when the board filed the complaint, said in a letter that this was an inaccurate statement (see page 12). Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was traveling this week but said in an email that he does not recall exactly what he said at the meeting, but said he remembers asking Gjesteby "to not again release executive session material this time in the form of attaching executive session minutes to an Open Meeting Law complaint she was planning to file."

DeRensis continued, "A second episode of a release could put herself at much more risk than a first-time event, so my recollection is that I urged her not to do so at that meeting."

BASKETBALL

N.E. Colonials tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club is accepting applications from Cohasset players for the program's April 2014 Ambassadors Tour to the Netherlands.

This boys basketball team will accept ten players (going into grades 10 and 11) for its ten-day spring tour. New England Colonials teams have been traveling the world to play basketball since 1981 and the program has an international reputation for excellence. The team will visit and play in Amsterdam, Leeuwarden, Utrecht and The Hague while in the Netherlands.

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club was founded in 1980 and is a nonprofit, volunteer-run program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world. The team does not hold tryouts. All applicants must be in good academic standing and capable of handling a high level of competitive play and the demands of overseas travel.

For additional information, please contact Scott Bryson at 508-734-5660 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol.com. Interested parents and players may learn more about the Colonials' program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net.

CHIEFS FOOTBALL

Getting closer

Chiefs lead for first time this season

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Coastal Chiefs coach Jim Sullivan held his thumb and index finger about an inch or so apart for a reason.

The Chiefs coach was trying to emphasize how close his young, Hanover based program in the New England Football League is from getting its first win and maybe joining the top echelon of the league.

"We are getting so close," said Sullivan. "The East Coast Ducks are 4-0 and Mystic River is 3-1 (in our division). We are playing some seriously good football teams. Teams are finding out that we are not a pushover. We are hanging with the teams that are a higher level."

The Chiefs will go out of the division on Saturday as they will play their final away game of the regular season at

TALKING GOLF

Hub of the golf universe

PAUL HARBER

This small area, south of Boston, might be only a few square miles, but when you think about it, the region is close to the center of the golfing universe.

Many of golf's most important people are from the region. Here are some of the local movers and shakers I'd put on local golf's Mount Rushmore:

Leigh Bader, Pine Oaks Golf Course in Easton. What? Bader, the Steve Jobs of golf equipment marketing, might only be an owner of a nine-hole course, but he is one of the giants in the industry. And it's not just Bader, but his partner, Joe Ricci, and guys who work with them like general manager Mark Petrucci. If you need golf equipment, they are the people to see. Nineteen times they have been honored as a Top 100 Pro Shop. Even PGA Tour pro Jim Furyk dropped by their shop, picked up a putter out of the used clubs bin for $39, and won the Deutsche Bank Championship a few days later with it. Bader and Petrucci are on Golf Digest's six-member national retailers panel, helping the publication select what's hot and what's not.

Wally Uihlein, the CEO of Titleist and FootJoy, has turned the Acushnet company into the world leader in the golf ball and golf shoe industry. FootJoy, meanwhile, has its roots in Brockton. While Uihlein may be one of the leaders in the golf industry, his son, Peter, has done well for himself on the course, winning the 2010 U.S. Amateur and earning his way on to the PGA Tour.

Charlie Lanzetta, operator of Rockland Golf Course for so many years, has been a leader on two golfing fronts. His junior program is one of the oldest and most innovative in the nation. Just about any 20-something golfer, who started the game as a youngster, first swung the club here. Lanzetta is also one of the top rules officials in the world. He has been to more majors than Tiger Woods and has been involved in several important decisions.

Milton native Bob Donovan grew up playing on the fairways of the old Wollaston Golf Course and probably earned an Ouimet Scholarship to the University of Tennessee. For the last 22 years, Donovan has been the executive director of the Ouimet Fund and has seen it grow to the point where it gives out 260 scholarships worth $1.5 million. They also honored 65 Ouimet scholars who did not receive any money for college because they were wealthy enough to afford college. But what's great is that 92 percent of their Ouimet scholars receive their degrees. The nation average is around 55 percent who enter college earns their degree.

Bob Beach, the head professional at Braintree Golf Course is one of the giants in the industry. Incidentally, Beach was the recipient of an Ouimet Scholarship, so was his wife, Cathleen, who is the head of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts, as well as their son, John, who works at Brae Burn Country Club in Newton, and their daughter, Ann, who is a student at UMass-Amherst. Beach belongs among the elite for his humanitarian efforts. Bringing juniors into the game has always been high on his agenda. Making golf available for the disabled has always been another of his goals. He has been duly recognized. The NEPGA Teacher of the Year, the Patriot Award, the Horton Smith Award, Golf Digest's Top Teacher in the State Award, et. al. He is involved in countless causes, Clubs for Vets, Putting for Autism, etc. But for the last two years he has been involved in helping military veterans and their families. On Fridays mornings – this week's his last of the summer – he has trekked over to Cedar Hill GC in Stoughton and given free lessons. When he finishes giving lessons at Cedar Hill, he returns to his home course and gives lessons to military veterans there. These clinics are free, no registration is required and vets were invited to come any and all days. He's also given free lessons at Granite Links and South Shore Country Club. He is all about giving back to the game.

Besides the local giants of the game, there have been several players of note from the region.

Historically, a golfer who learned the game as a caddie at Plymouth Country Club, Henry Picard, won the 1938 Masters championship at Augusta (Ga.) National. Picard also won the 1939 PGA Championship, edging Byron Nelson in 37 holes (back then, the PGA Championship was a match play competition).

Today, there is one of golf's phenoms from the region. Rockland High School junior-to-be Megan Khang is ranked as the No. 4 girls' junior in the world. She's destined for a long career on the LPGA Tour, especially after this summer's showing in the U.S. Girls' Amateur, PGA Junior Championship and the U.S. Women's Amateur.

In the Bay State, the MGA Player of the Year race is dominated by local golfers.

Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich GC is the front runner with 566 points followed by Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea (470) while State Amateur champion Mike Calef of Brockton (350), John Hadges of Thorny Lea (325), Herbie Aikens of Pinehills (300) and Brian Higgins of Franklin CC (285) are all in the Top 10. Norton Country Club's Jeff Martin competed in last week's PGA Championship at Oak Hill (N.Y.) CC.

Courses? When Golf Digest ranked the top golf courses in the state, The Country Club in Brookline, was No. 1. But Nos. 2, 3 and 4 are all from the region. Those being Old Sandwich Golf Club in Plymouth, The Boston Golf Club in Hingham and the Kittansett Club in Marion.

Tournaments? Norton is the site of one of the mini-majors on the PGA Tour, the coming Deutsche Bank Championship. Tiger, et al, are expected to make their rounds when they converge on TPC Boston.

How many courses have played host to major golf tournaments? Blue Hill Country Club in Canton was the host of the PGA Championship in 1956 and in the 1990s it was the home of the LPGA tournament.

Yes, this small area south of Boston has quite a history and a presence in the world of golf, something all of us can be proud of sharing with the world.

GOLF NOTEBOOK

Who won the US Amateur? TCC!

Ancient golf course proves to be a terrific challenge for all who played

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

"Golf is a game that cannot be won, only played."
— The Legend of Bagger Vance

The ninth hole is the start of a series of six holes at The Country Club that would bring the average duffer to their knees, but would be a great test for the PGA Tour. PHOTO COURTESY OF THE USGA

The U.S. Amateur is now history. Many ink-stained wretches will make significant note that no American was among the final four. Who cares?

The real winner was The Country Club in Brookline.

One of the oldest golf courses in America – a founding club of the United States Golf Association – is as difficult a challenge today as it was 100 years ago when TCC held its first U.S. Open in 1913.

Shame on TCC for not holding the U.S. Open there this year. It would have been a perfect course for the pros with its monster stretch of holes, beginning at No. 9. It would be a struggle if every shot counted, unlike last week's U.S. Amateur where you didn't have to finish a hole if you were beaten by your opponent.

What was missing for the U.S. Amateur were those disaster holes, golf's version of NASCAR racing.

The most painful car-wreck finish was Jean Van de Velde, who lost the 1999 British Open at Carnoustie when he made a triple-bogey 7 on the final hole. The hole I wish I were around to see was Willie Chisholm's eighth hole at the 1919 U.S. Open at Brae Burn. He took an 18 on the par-3 hole, trying to whack it out of a rocky lie. Oh yes, he three-putted, too.

If it were match play, Van de Velde and Chisholm would never have had to experience those nightmares.

While the U.S. Open will never return to The Country Club, here's hoping the Ryder Cup does. And soon.

They recently announced that Bethpage Black on Long Island will host the 2024 Ryder Cup, along with the 2019 PGA Championship. Those events will be fun to watch.

Speaking of watching golf, you might want to tune in this week and watch the PGA Tour pros. They are at a unique course.

(Heidi's cousin) Nick Watney will defend his title at The Barclays at Liberty National GC. Although the course has a not-so-extravagant address (Jersey City, N.J.), it offers unique vistas of the Statue of Liberty and the Manhattan skyline. Of course, Tiger Woods is in the field

The Barclays opens the FedExCup playoffs for the seventh consecutive year and returns to Liberty National for the first time since 2009.

Keyes Cup is critical

When the Women's Golf Association holds its Grace B. Keyes Cup at Ipswich CC on Aug. 28-29, it will probably determine who wins the state's women's Player of the Year.

Going into the final major tournament of the year, Hatherly CC's Mary Mulcahy is the top point getter with 762.5 points. Two-time defending Keyes Cup Champion Tara Joy Connolly is next with 667.5 points. Blue Hill CC's Isabel Southard is third with 525 points.

Whoever wins the Keyes Club gets 300 points.

The Keyes Cup, which is essentially the State Stroke Play Championship, has been easy victories for Connelly the last two years. She won at Oakley CC by three strokes in 2011 and last year, at Marshfield CC, a course she grew up playing on, she was a winner by four strokes. Ironically, neither year she won the Player of the Year honors.

However, she is familiar with the championship. Connelly was the WGAM's Player of the Year from 2005 to 2010 and was runner-up in 2011 and 2012.

What does all that mean?

Well, maybe someday the WGAM should name a tournament or a trophy after her.

Mass. Juniors are tops

The seven-member team from Massachusetts entered the final round of the N. E. Junior Amateur Championship knowing they would have to come through with a strong performance on day 2 to take home the title.

In the end, that is exactly what they did!

Jake Shuman of Blue Hills CC along with Cam Giles of Stow Acres CC, Steven DiLisio of Salem CC, Jack Lang of Nashawtuc CC, Paul Lei of Ferncroft CC, Matt Naumec of CC of Wilbraham and Dan Woodbury of Pleasant Valley CC came together at the Connecticut National Golf Club last week and reclaimed a title they last won in 2011. It was an especially remarkable accomplishment given that they bested Connecticut, which has dominated in recent years. In fact, Connecticut entered this year's championship looking to win its ninth title in 13 years. "We could not be prouder of these players and how they responded to the pressure," said Jesse Menachem, the MGA's director of rules & competition. "They knew that the other states would challenge them during the last round, but they kept to their game plan and all contributed to this great victory."

Team Massachusetts finished with a three-round score of 10-over par 1075, which was 12 strokes better than Connecticut which finished in second place.

For Team Massachusetts, there was a distinct emotional element to the victory.

Menachem stepped in as captain for Team Massachusetts on Friday morning after longtime captain – Scott Whitcomb – was called out of town due to a death in his family. With Whitcomb tending to personal matters, the players came through with a win for their leader.

"It was an important win because the players wanted to show their support for Scott," said Menachem. "This group really came together as a family this week and I think that it showed through in their play."

In a show of true teamwork, Massachusetts was the only team that had all seven players post sub-80 rounds. On day one, it was Naumec and Shuman who led the way by playing under-par golf through two rounds. On Friday, Woodbury was the low scorer for the Bay State as he carded a 3-under par 68. Shuman and DiLisio were even par for the day, while Naumec and Lang posted rounds of 1-over par 72.

The last time that a team from Massachusetts won this title was 1997.

Cohasset 'a goat track'

I doubt anybody would call Cohasset Golf Club a "goat track," because, in golfing terms, "goat track" is a derogatory term. It refers to a golf course that is in poor condition and Cohasset is anything but that. However, if you are fortunate to play the ancient (opened in 1894) track, you will find goats employed at the course, helping the greens crew. They eat grasses were nobody can mow. They are corralled along the row behind an electric fence. That's not so they can wander, but to keep goat-feeding coyotes out.

Cohasset isn't the first course to employ goats. In California, Pasatiempo has a herd of 150 goats, exposing peaks and ravines that were in hiding since the 1920s and '30s. Not only are goats cost-effective (about $1,000 an acre as opposed to mowing the area, which would be more than 10 times that amount), but they're also erosion friendly. Unlike sheep, goats won't tear the entire root from the ground, experts say, and the animals' hooves help compact the soil, unlike a team of groundskeepers.

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

Rangers edge Bruins

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Rangers and the Bruins played for the South Coastal Hockey League's Classic Div. title last Spring with the Rangers rolling to a 6-1 victory.

The two teams opened the 2013 Fall season against each other and the Rangers appeared on their way to another easy win. They rolled out to a 4-1 lead and held on for a 4-3 victory over the Bruins.

Lou Sideropoulos had a goal and an assist and John Sances had two assists to lead the Rangers offense.

Bob Sideropoulos, Marshfield's Joe Craig and Paul Lafond of Hanover scored the other goals for the Rangers.

John Dougenik scored two third period goals and Mike Martin scored in the first period for the Bruins.

Marshfield's John Hernon scored a power play goal with 4:52 left and Scituate's Bob Stafford stopped 24 shots, most of them were great saves in the Crusaders come from behind 2-1 Legends Div. win over the Sharks.

Tim Cruz of Marshfield gave the Sharks a 1-0 lead after the first period.

Jim Callahan put in the rebound of a Jack Parsons of Marshfield shot in the second period to tie the game. Cohasset's Rob Dennis also had an assist on the play.

Reading against MDX Warlords. They will then play their final three games of the season at home as the first one will be on Aug. 31 against Mystic River Tigers.

Coastal will look to put two halves together in its game with the Warlords on Saturday.

They controlled the first half of their home opening game against the Mid-Coast Falcons, but had a flat second half in a 22-6 loss.

"We got deflated in the second half," Sullivan said. "They (Mid-Coast) are undefeated and had their backs against the wall and they met the intensity that they needed in the second half. They went above our intensity and that is what happened. This is a matter of learning how to win."

The Chiefs had their first lead of the season in the first half, but that lasted for just 20 seconds.

Coastal had a chance to retake the lead near the end of the first half, but they stopped themselves.

"We played a defensive second half," said Sullivan. "We had to defend against their intensity. We did not step up and meet their intensity. I am proud of the players because we are improving."

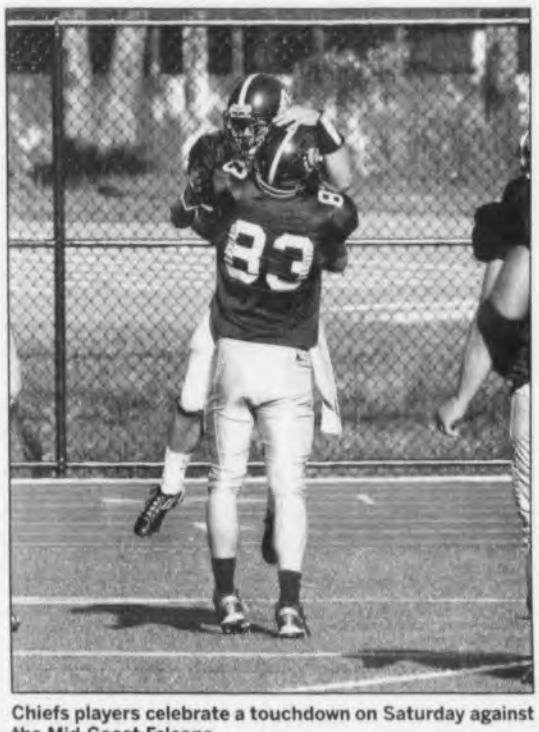
After a fumble recovery by Rob Leary gave the Chiefs the ball at the Coastal 49, the Chiefs grinded out a 51 yard scoring drive to take the lead for the first time in 13 quarters.

John Lane, who had 126 yards in the loss to the East Coast Ducks had a couple of tough runs inside, but it was the ability of quarterback Jason Garcia to hit the outside that keyed the scoring drive. Garcia converted on two fourth down bootleg runs.

The first bootleg run was 33 yards to the Mid-Coast four while the second one was a 7-yard touchdown run with 14:52 left in the half.

The Falcons responded 20 seconds later as Domninique Colanara threw his first of two touchdown passes to Deandre Morton. The pass was 62 yards to tie the score, 6-6 as that is how the first half would end.

Coastal hurt themselves as just before the end of the first half a Garcia to Brendan Ruggman touchdown pass was called back because of a penalty.



The Chiefs hurt themselves even more at the start of the second half. A bad snap on an attempted punt gave the Falcons the ball at the Chiefs 30.

A defensive holding penalty on a fourth down play kept the Falcons 30 yard scoring drive alive that tailback Shane Beal concluded with a 2-yard scoring run and Colanara completed the two-point conversion pass to give Mid-Coast a 14-6 lead.

Coastal had another chance to score as they drove to the Mid-Coast nine, but turned the ball over on downs.

COHASSET POLICE/FIRE LOG

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Many crashes occur when drivers don't see other cars in their blind spots. Try to stay out of the blind spots of other cars by slowing down or accelerating so they can see you clearly. Also, consider buying an aftermarket stick-on type blind spot mirror to help you see more.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Play must be freely chosen

JANA KAHN

I admire the mothers, fathers and caregivers in Music Together class who are able to enjoy class themselves and trust that their children will play too – when they choose to. After eight years of teaching, I look at these adults with respect and admiration for the ease they bring to childrearing, simply by allowing play to happen. Some children jump in immediately while others take their time – observing, perhaps going in and out of play, maybe joining in after weeks of watching. Adults who sing, play and dance freely in class, simply for their own enjoyment, give the gift of joy to the little ones by modeling playfulness. All of us remember the awe we experienced in watching a parent being silly, playing, as a child. I remember my mother's love of music as she played her records over and over again, and my father's love for fishing and darts. Their enjoyment allowed me the freedom to play and find my own enjoyment.

In Music Together at South Shore Conservatory we keep class playful by encouraging adults to have fun, which in turn provides the space for children to play. One of the biggest roadblocks to play for adults is the worry that they will look silly if they allow themselves to truly play. For some it may mean trying something outside of their comfort zone, such as singing with others, dancing with peers or with their child. Play is exploration which means being in the moment and giving oneself permission to improvise and be free. To children this comes naturally. We see this at the playground – one child prefers to play in the sand while another runs to climb on the monkey bars. In class this past semester, one boy wanted the jingle bells each week, while another wanted only the lollipop drum which he enjoyed pretending was his guitar. Play must be freely chosen.

While a baby may enjoy clapping with the help of a caregiver, a toddler quickly becomes frustrated with this. The toddler has already experienced being able to create his own ways to play and is experienced at improvising, thinking outside the box and making choices, and wants nothing to do with patting the drum if told to. He may prefer to simply rock his body to the beat or tap a foot, or dance while everyone else is playing. This is his exploration in class, and it's not only acceptable, it's encouraged.

Music Together is designed to teach young children basic music competences, such as the ability to keep a beat or sing in tune. Exposure and playfulness are key to this learning. Children can participate for three years with a constantly changing repertoire of music and rhythm, and adults provide an engaging environment for play. I wonder how many parents believe me when I say in class that we are all hardwired to be musical? So many of us think music is mere talent and not innate. It's there though. Let yourself be free to experience it. By playing with music we allow our children to freely choose their own musical expression.

The next session of Music Together begins Sept.16. To learn more about Music Together and other South Shore Conservatory early childhood programs, or to register for class, please visit: sscmusic.org.

Jana Kahn has been with South Shore Conservatory as a Music Together instructor since 2005. She lives in Hingham with her two daughters.

Back-to-school haircuts an annual tradition

The checklist can be long leading up to that first day of school prompting many parents to start shopping early. New clothes? Check. New lunch sack? Check. New school supplies? Check. But one item that's usually saved until just before the big day is the back-to-school haircut so students are sure to look spruced up when they enter their new classrooms.

The rush at Hot Locks Salonspa in Plymouth starts around mid August, according to salon owner Sonny Rapozo.

"The rush probably starts around the week of the 12th of August onward," Rapozo said, "especially with the college kids, who start earlier. And we always have those that come in the week that school starts," he added.

Peyton Muratore shows off her new back-to-school layered bob. Hot Locks Salonspa owner Sonny Rapozo says bobs are a good haircut for younger children because they look nice with little styling needed. Adding layers gives the style movement and helps it not look flat. COURTESY PHOTOS

Extra help

South Shore programs offer assistance for all ages

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

Now that school is almost back in session, it's time to start thinking about getting on the right track in terms of studying. One way to do just that might be by working closely with a tutor or study guide to help you or your child along the path to a successful academic career.

Whether you are looking for help before your child enters kindergarten, assistance with accelerated learning, SAT or ACT prep or help with individual subjects, there is no better way to get a jump on studies than with a little help from a specialist.

Focusing on basics

When choosing a tutor that will be right for you, it is important to find out how long the tutor has been in business, what ages they work with, what subjects they focus on, and to read customer testimonials.

"I work with pre-kindergarten students through second grade," Amy Linnell, of ABC Reading Adventure of Scituate, said. "I really focus on early phonics with preschoolers and learning how to hold a pencil but more importantly understanding phonics and the sound of a letter. These early reading and writing skills through sensory activities and crafts prepare kids for kindergarten. They learn how to blends sounds and sights into words for early reading."

With kindergarten, first- and second-graders, a lot of Linnell's teaching is focused on multi sensory activities.

"We learn a topic and then focus on it," she said. "We have a phonics-based reading program where we work either privately or in a group session to prepare kids for school. I base each lesson on each individual child. It's a great foundation prior to kindergarten so the child learns the basics before entering a classroom environment. Once a student has letters and sounds down, they are able to write letters down before they even start kindergarten."

Private or group sessions

Another thing to determine when selecting a tutor is whether you prefer private, one-on-one sessions, during which a professional can give you undivided attention, or whether you would like a classroom-style environment with other participating students. While some tutors specialize in certain age groups focusing on group sessions, other tutors prefer to work individually with students for a more intensive experience.

"We work with kids in all grades and all subject areas providing one-on-one tutoring," Rebecca Reynolds, area director of Club Z! Tutoring for the South Shore region, said. "Most students come to us looking for test prep help and extra reading assistance. I think one-on-one is the most effective way to remediate any problem."

All sorts of extra help

Some students seek out tutors for enrichment with a high school reading program or to help with study skills while others are looking for assistance with prep programs like SATs.

"Some kids might have a learning disability while others may come to us because they just need a little extra help with harder courses like chemistry," Reynolds said. "We recommend typically an hour to 90 minutes once a week for tutoring. It all depends on the student. We have had kids come in anywhere from one month to others who have been with us for seven years."

Whether you are looking for help before your child enters kindergarten, assistance with a particular subject, or SAT or ACT prep, there is no better way to get a jump on studies than with a little help from a specialist. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

When determining which areas a student needs help in, it's important to look at all areas of learning, including reading comprehension.

"We started out with beginning reading and fluency, which was really our core but now we have Spanish tutoring and help with math and science," Richard McManus, director of the Fluency Factory in Hingham, said. "Now that students are about to return to school, we are coming back into the SAT preparation time of year. In the summer, we work a lot with athletes who are trying to get ahead in their academics so when they go back to school and have to deal with other activities, they won't feel so overwhelmed with their studies."

Final analysis

The Fluency Factory also helps students prepare for finals.

"During the school year, our programs are directed towards what is going on in the classrooms like algebra assistance," McManus said. "Some of the programs are designed for students who are having a problem in a particular area. We have other programs like SAT prep, which we recommend at least 16 hours to prepare for. During this preparation, we look at things like reading fluency, calculation speed, etc. Quite often, kids are not fluent readers so we show them tips on how to improve their skills. While it's important to know efficient test-taking skills, it's more important to know the right answer."

Help your kids avoid potential injuries

Tips from the Massachusetts Chiropractic Society Inc.

So many students from elementary school to college use a computer on a daily basis, and many have not been taught the proper way to work at a computer to avoid potential injuries such as repetitive motion injuries. Teaching kids now the proper way to use the computer workstation can help to avoid poor working habits later in life.

"We need to teach children the proper way to work at a computer workstation so they are not at risk for injuries," Dr. Scott Darragh, a director with The Massachusetts Chiropractic Society Inc., said. "We are seeing more young patients suffering from the effects of working at computer stations that are either designed for adults or poorly designed for children. Many children are already suffering from repetitive motion injuries (RMI) such as carpal tunnel syndrome and chronic pain in the hands, back, neck and shoulders. Poor work habits and computer workstations that don't fit a child's body during the developing years can have harmful physical effects that can last a lifetime.

Here are some tips from The Massachusetts Chiropractic Society Inc.:

• Position the computer monitor so the top of the screen is at or below the child's eye level. This can be accomplished by taking the computer off its base or stand, or having the child sit on firm pillows or phone books to reach the desired height.

• Make sure the chair at the workstation fits the child correctly. An ergonomic back cushion, pillow or a rolled-up towel can be placed in the small of the child's back for added back support. There should be two inches between the front edge of the seat and the back of the knees. The chair should have arm supports so that elbows are resting within a 70- to 135-degree angle to the computer keyboard.

• Wrists should be held in a neutral position while typing – not angled up or down. The mousing surface should be close to the keyboard so your child doesn't have to reach or hold the arm away from the body.

• The child's knees should be positioned at an approximate 90- to 120-degree angle. To accomplish this angle, feet can be placed on a footrest, box, stool or similar object.

• Reduce eyestrain by making sure there is adequate lighting and that there is no glare on the monitor screen. Use an antiglare screen if necessary.

• Urge your child's school or PTA officials to provide educa-

we get a lot of high school kids mostly, a few middle school and a few younger kids, also."

When the guys visit the salon to get their hair cut prior to heading back to the classroom, Rapozo said they customarily choose one of two styles.

"It's either really short or a Justin Bieber-type of haircut – like the one he had when he originally came to fame – flat on top with all the hair toward the face with the shredded ends," Rapozo said. "The flip side of that is really short. There's not a whole lot in-between."

Girls, on the other hand, generally like one length and they generally like long hair, Rapozo said.

"We just get rid of the straggly ends," Rapozo said. "We don't do a lot of layering, as they pull their hair back a lot for sports."

"They're 50/50 on bangs and no bangs," he added. "We don't do much coloring on young girls but some of the teenagers get highlights."

Last year's fad of including feathers is gone, Rapozo explained, and in its place, some teens are adding bright streaks to their hair.

"We put a streak of blue or hot pink in. It's temporary color and washes out," he said.

Colorful highlights are also popular at K A Ricco Salon in Scituate, where the back-to-school rush usually is the two weeks prior to school and definitely the week prior to school, according to Cara Doran, the salon manager.

While highlights aren't that popular with the boys who visit K A Ricco, all ages of girls, from 10 up to seniors in high school, are getting the ends of their hair tinted, Doran said. Called the ombre look, the younger ones are getting pink and purple tips while the older girls mostly go for the look sported by stars such as Khloe Kardashian and Jessica Biel.

As far as more traditional highlights, some of the girls will do a couple around the face but that doesn't really start until the sophomore year in high school, Doran said.

"Most of the girls just want their hair long and straight," Doran said. "They like a little angle through the front and most of them will do the long side bangs going back to school.

"And the boys want either to look like the soccer players or they like that shaggy past-the-ear long hair," Doran said, explaining that the soccer-player look is characterized by short hair with the longish front area where they can put wax in to make it stand up.

"It's funny – some of the boys are even more particular than some of the girls," she said.

tion on correct computer ergonomics and to install ergonomically correct workstations.

Sports injury prevention

Sports injuries are common for kids of all ages. Parents and their children could be overlooking the importance of proper nutrition and body conditioning needed for preventing injuries on and off the playing field. Parents need to work with their kids and make sure they receive proper sports training. Chiropractors can provide advice on sports training, nutrition and injury prevention. Encourage your child to:

- Wear the proper equipment
- Eat healthy meals
- Drink water – hydration is key
- Follow a warm-up routine. Be sure your child or his/her coach includes a warm-up and stretching session before every practice, game or meet. A slow jog, jumping rope and/or lifting small weights reduces the risk of torn or ripped muscles. Flexibility becomes a preventive key when pushing to score that extra goal or make that critical play
- Get plenty of rest. Eight hours of sleep is ideal for the young athlete. Lack of sleep and rest can catch up with the athlete and decrease performance.

Major decision

How to select the best course of study for you

By NextStepU.com

Ever enter your favorite restaurant dying for a hot dog and fries only to have a sizzling burger scream your name from the grill? That's how it is with picking college majors. You start out hungry for an engineering degree, then spot the green clay through an open art class door. Poof! You're an art major.

College major-hopping is as common as pizza on college campuses. Deborah Fargo Schmitt, associate director of admissions at Daemen College in Amherst, N.Y., says nearly 90 percent of all freshmen change their college majors.

Why all the switching?

Peter S. Gold, University of Buffalo, N.Y.'s, associate dean for general education and student services, says, "With more than 100 college majors available, students find opportunities they were unaware of." Students often trudge through a semester or two of classes before discovering an academic menu option best suited to their individual design.

Virtually all hops among college majors begin with a poor initial program choice. Some pursue college majors recommended by someone they know who is financially successful in that field. Many perform well in particular high school courses then pursue similar majors in college.

Still others blindly accept a standard freshman course load. These poor choices have one common cause: Not knowing what we are personally designed to do.

How to choose

How do you figure out what you're designed to do? Freshman orientation classes sprinkle in tips to help students target the right field for them. The time saved by reduced college major-hopping makes them a worthwhile investment.

Your prospective college's career planning and placement department is another resource. Most offer career workshops, planning seminars or other counseling services to help steer you toward a rewarding education path.

Most counselors welcome high school students trying to target a major. There also are undeclared major programs that let you earn credits while investigating varied disciplines. Daemen College's program even assigns an adviser to guide students through the freshman year and pinpoint how to choose a major.

Campus major and career fairs are two tools that can help shed light on how to choose a major that fits your interests and aptitudes. Major fairs bring you face-to-face with department reps and students eager to share what they know about their programs.

Although career fairs may seem better suited to graduating students, meeting reps may unearth interests you never considered. You'll also find out what college majors open doors to those careers.

College websites and online college search services are like desktop career path vending machines. The Princeton Review's online service includes a five-minute career quiz at www.princetonreview.com/careers-after-college.aspx. This point-and-click checklist digests your answers then churns out an instant assessment of your personal interests and style. The assessment's long list of career choices is then used to investigate college majors.

Decide at college

One overlooked resource is right around the corner: your local community college. These academic buffets offer bargain-priced tastes of virtually every program available at top universities – and you can live at home for free. Community colleges let you select courses across several disciplines, buying only the classes you want. Considering a teaching or art career, but still have dreams about carpentry? Fill your first-semester cart with freshman English, a basic drawing course and toss in Woodworking 101.

Liberal arts schools offer a more traditional self-exploration option. Although not as flexible as a community college, the breadth of courses available at a liberal arts school lets you fill prerequisites while pursuing diverse interests College adviser Pamela Roth of Allendale Columbia School, Rochester, N.Y., steers undecided students toward a liberal arts college that fits them:

"I recommend our students gather skills and experiences, pursue internships and study abroad;" anything that applies to the post-graduation "real world."

Photographer to share whale of a tale

A California photographer who specializes in capturing images of whales is coming to Cohasset this month to share his work.

Bryant Austin was snorkeling one day when a whale touched him on the shoulder. He was so inspired that he quit his job and traveled to the South Pacific to photograph whales.

Austin spends four months with one pack of whales to develop a close connection with them. The photographer waits for whales to approach him so that there is a mutual understanding and respect between himself and the whales.

Austin's photography has been featured in many magazines. He has also traveled to Norway and Japan, two nations that still practice whale hunting. Austin has a book of his photography called "Beautiful Whale" and was recently interviewed for "Here and Now" on NPR. He has also been featured in The Wall Street Journal and New York Times, among other publications.

The photographer will visit Focus Gallery in Cohasset (15 Depot Court) this month to discuss his work. Austin plans to return to Cohasset in September after doing book signings in New York and Boston.

Austin will also visit the gallery's Cape Cod location on 595 Main Street in Chatham starting on August 29 and will stay throughout Labor Day weekend.

The proceeds from the Cohasset and Chatham events will go toward the Provincetown Center for Coastal Studies and their whale research program.

For more information on Bryant Austin and his work, visit his website, www.studiocosmos.com.

Bixby among Best Lawyers in America

Burns & Levinson LLP announces that Cohasset resident Brian D. Bixby has been selected for inclusion in The Best Lawyers in America 2014 in the fields of Family Law, Trusts and Estates, and Litigation - Trusts and Estates. This is the fifth consecutive year in which Mr. Bixby has been selected for this honor.

Bixby is a partner, member of the executive committee, chairman of the Probate & Trust Litigation Group and co-chair of the Private Client Group at Burns & Levinson. He works with clients out of each of the firm's Massachusetts offices, including those in Hingham, Boston, Waltham and Andover.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 2, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A little "wool-gathering" for the usually productive Lamb is all right if it helps you unwind. But be careful; too much daydreaming can put you behind schedule in your work.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A work problem is close to being resolved. Now you can go ahead and celebrate the week, accepting invitations from friends who enjoy your company.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Getting your new plan accepted won't be a major hassle if you have the facts to back it up. Your supporters are also prepared to help you make your case. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Dealing with a pesky job problem might be time-consuming but necessary. The sooner you get this situation settled, the sooner you can move on to other matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Career advancement is favored thanks to your impressive work record. On the personal side, you should soon hear some good news about an ailing family member.

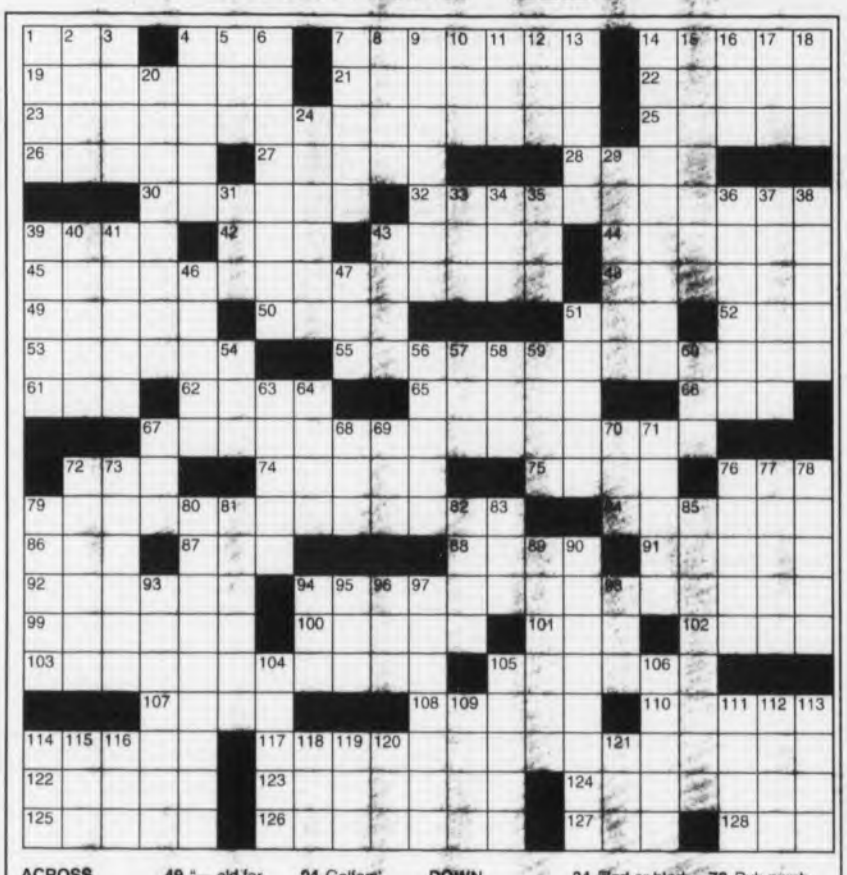
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There might be mixed signals from a certain someone who doesn't seem all that certain about his or her intentions. Best to sort it all out before it becomes more confusing.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Get all the facts about that investment "opportunity" before you put even one dollar into it. There could be hidden problems that could prove to be costly.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Compromising on a matter you feel strongly about not only ends the impasse, but can be a win-win deal for all. Remember: Scorpios do well with change.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With all the demands you currently have to deal with, accepting the help of family and friends could be the wisest course to take at this time.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Recent upsetting incidents might have left you with a big gap in your self-assurance. Refill it by spending time with those who know how worthy you really are.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A dispute about money needs to be resolved quickly, before it festers into something more serious. Consider asking an impartial colleague to mediate the matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A soft approach could be more effective than making a loud demand for the information you need. You might even find yourself with more data than you expected.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're sought out for the wonderful advice you're able to offer to others. And sometimes you even take it yourself.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Town manager criteria voted

Board of Selectmen is split 3-2

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It was a rare Tuesday meeting for the Board of Selectmen in which nearly all of the votes that were taken were unanimous, save for one crucial vote — the board could not come to a unanimous agreement on qualifications for a permanent town manager in Cohasset.

In a 3-2 vote, the selectmen decided that Cohasset's permanent town manager should have a bachelor's degree and at least seven years' experience as a town or city manager, or similar executive position. This would include experience as an assistant town manager.

The board voted overall to approve a draft town profile prepared by the UMass Collins Center, which the selectmen hired this summer to launch the town's search for a permanent town manager. The selectmen first perused the draft profile last week and held a special, one-topic meeting on Tuesday, August 27 to go over the seven-page document in minute detail.

Most of the items the board voted to agree on were minor language changes, grammatical corrections, and other minutiae that needed cleaning up.

What the board disagreed on was the document as a whole after one section caused some debate: the criteria for a permanent town manager.

The language in the town profile describes the type of candidate the town is looking for, and therefore defines who is eligible to apply for the position. The draft profile offered two different options for screening criteria, and the board disagreed on which option to choose: option 'A' or 'B.' Ultimately the board decided to go with option 'A,' which required a bachelor's and seven years experience.

It's back to the books

School starts next week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Leaves are beginning to fall, and Cohasset schools are almost back in session.

The first day of school, for first grade through twelfth, is Tuesday, September 3. Kindergartners are back on Thursday, September 5, and it's their first day on buses. Cohasset teachers have already gone back to school — their opening day was Wednesday, August 28.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that she is excited to start another school year.

"I'm looking forward to all the kids coming back, and hopefully looking forward to a mild winter," she said, adding that the students have new things to anticipate this year.

"The students are going to come back with a lot of technology in place that was not there when they left in June," said Cataldo. "We're very much prepared for the twenty-first century... I think it's going to be a very exciting year."

The school principals also shared their thoughts on back-to-school, the enrollment numbers, what's new in terms of curriculum, and what they're looking forward to as the 2013-2014 year begins.

Osgood

The Joseph Osgood School has been in the news for adding a new kindergarten class this year, by popular demand. Enrollment numbers were higher than usual, making it necessary to add a sixth full-day kindergarten class. With one half-day class, there are now seven kindergarten classes in total.

Osgood Principal Bob LeCount said that kinder-

Well regs

Health board to vote in October

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Well, it's about time.

The Cohasset Board of Health is in the process of updating its private well regulations, which have not been updated since 1995. The board last took a crack at them in 2009 during a rather contentious public hearing. Under Mass. General Law, local health boards have primary jurisdiction over private well regulations.

"We're trying to make [the process] as transparent as possible and get the most community feedback."
Felix Zemel, Health Agent

There are at least 132 houses in Cohasset that have private wells, according to Board of Health Agent Felix Zemel, who gathered data from the town water department. The state defines a "private well" as one that provides drinking water for a single-family residence.

The Board of Health held a public hearing on Tuesday, August 27 to discuss the proposed regulations (see sidebar). Prior to the hearing, Zemel invited all of the homeowners in town who have private wells; he also sent out notices to all of the engineers he knows of that work in town, and have done work for the Board of Health and Conservation Commission.

It's all in an effort to keep the public informed through a transparent process, said Zemel. "We're trying to make [the process] as transparent as possible and get the most community feedback."

Automatic sprinkler vandalism investigated

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Sprinkler

Police investigated a report from a Nichols Road resident that week who discovered the reason her lawn was turning brown was that her automatic, underground sprinkler system had been vandalized. Police found that someone had removed a 9-volt battery and disconnected two small wires in the control panel that is accessed outside the house. The unit was not damaged but police recommend she put a lock on the access door to the panel.

Shuttle

A 30-year-old Marshfield man was provided a police shuttle home on Monday (Aug. 19) after he was spotted walking along Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at around 11 p.m. Cohasset police gave him a ride to Scituate where the SPD drove him to Marshfield where the MPD drove him home, police said.

Car towed

An officer on traffic enforcement on Forest Avenue stopped a 2012 Toyota Corolla around 6:15 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 20), operated by a 53-year-old Cohasset man, because the plates had expired. The car was towed because of the expired registration, police said. A family member gave the operator and passenger a ride home.

Lost

A concerned cell phone caller alerted police about an erratically operated 2013 Ford Escape sedan that was "all over the road" as it came from Scituate over the Border Street bridge into Cohasset on Wednesday (Aug. 21) around 12 a.m.

Police stopped the SUV near the Legion Hall and talked to the operator who was "hopelessly lost," police said. The operator was trying to find his way to Boston.

Towed

A concerned Jerusalem Road caller notified police about a suspicious motor vehicle, a 2010 Honda Civic, parked at the end of the neighbor's driveway around 1:43 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 21). The registration came back to a 43-year-old Cohasset man, whom they could not get in touch with. The car had to be towed because it was impeding traffic, police said.

Ride home

At 11:45 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 21) about a man walking in traffic near Jonathan Livingston Seagull plaza and ended up transporting him to his family's home in Scituate. The man, who is known to police, did not have any outstanding warrants. Apparently, he had missed the last train to Boston, police said.

Carpooling

In checking out why there was a 2011 Nissan Frontier parked on the administrative side of Cohasset Middle High School at 12:54 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 22), the officer found several unsecured windows at the school. While the officer was conducting the building check, he saw a 1998 Mazda pull up. Apparently the owner of the Nissan had parked at the school and carpooled to an event in the Mazda that was then returning to drop that that person off. The officer secured the building, police said.

Towed

Police had a motor vehicle towed from the Municipal Parking Lot in the Village at 2 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 22) because its plates had expired. The car was listed to an address on North Main Street. The car was towed the next morning. Unregistered vehicles cannot be parked on public property.

Warrant

A 21-year-old Cohasset man was arrested on a default warrant after police responded to a call about a suspicious vehicle along Parkingway by the Recreation Center in the Municipal Parking Lot at 2 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 23). Police knew one of the occupants in the blue Mercedes and the officer had information there was a warrant for his arrest. The officer confirmed the default warrant that was out of Quincy District Court was for trespassing, police said.

Towed

The property owner of the plaza where Dunkin Donuts and the former Great Neck Grille are located wanted to see an officer on Friday (Aug. 23) about a blue Camaro that had been parked in the lot for several hours. Dispatch tried to make contact with the owner of the vehicle. He was advised to wait a few more hours before having the car towed.

BOARD OF HEALTH

Update on WNV and EEE surveillance in Cohasset

Given the recent findings in Hingham, the Town of Cohasset strongly urges residents and visitors to take the following personal precautions in order to avoid mosquito bites...

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program are performing ongoing surveillance of mosquitoes for incidence of Arboviruses (such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis [EEE] and West Nile Virus [WNV]) throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as part of the Massachusetts Arbovirus Surveillance and Response Plan. In addition to receiving weekly surveillance updates from MDPH, the Town of Cohasset regularly participates in conference calls with MDPH and other municipalities throughout the state, as well as receives email updates from MDPH.

Earlier this week, the Town of Cohasset was notified that positive samples of both WNV- and EEE-carrying mosquitoes were obtained in Hingham. In addition, a Weymouth woman recently died from EEE, although the town in which she was bitten has not yet been determined.

As of this morning, the Town of Cohasset is still considered "low" risk by MDPH, which means that WNV and EEE are unlikely, but may occur in this area. This does not mean that the area is risk-free, as an infection can occur anywhere.

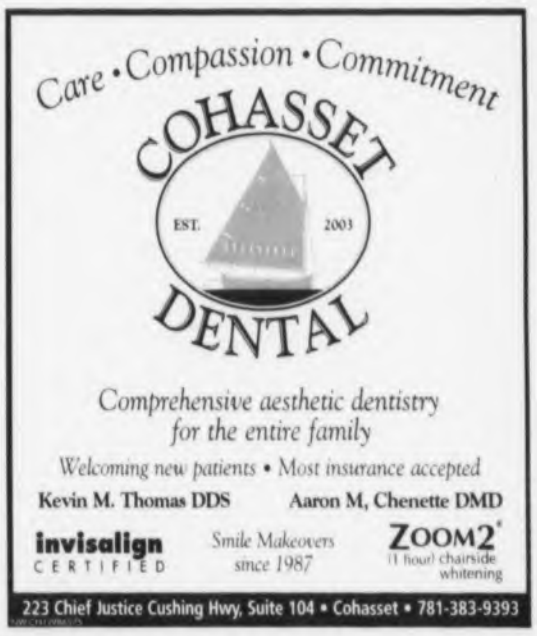
Given the recent findings in Hingham, the Town of Cohasset strongly urges residents and visitors to take the following personal precautions in order to avoid mosquito bites and the illnesses that they may cause:

- Apply mosquito repellant when outdoors – especially from dusk to dawn. Cohasset and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program recommend using a repellant with DEET, IR3535, or Picaridin as the active ingredient. If you are concerned about applying a chemical mosquito repellant, the USEPA has also approved the use of Oil of Lemon Eucalyptus as a natural alternative. All insect repellants should only be used in accordance with the instructions on the product's label. According to the MDPH "DEET products should not be used on infants under two (2) months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30 percent or less on older children". For more information about mosquito repellants, please refer to the MDPH fact sheet about mosquito repellants, which can be found at: mass.gov/eohhs/docs/dph/cdc/factsheets/mosquito-repellents.pdf

- Wear long sleeves and long pants when performing outdoor activities during mosquito peak hours. In addition to using appropriate mosquito repellants, wearing proper clothing (i.e., long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks) when outdoors will help keep mosquitoes from biting your skin;
- Avoid evening and nighttime outdoor activities. The Cohasset Board of Health recommends that residents stay indoors between one hour before dusk and one hour after dawn in order to minimize the risk of mosquito bites;
- Use mosquito netting on infant carriers and outdoor play areas. This netting should allow the infant and/or toddler to breathe while still block any access points for mosquitoes to enter the area and bite the child;
- Avoid standing water. Mosquitoes are attracted to areas containing standing water, and lay their eggs in the standing water. Birdbaths, rain gutters, drains, flower pots, wading pools and other sources of standing water should be drained at least twice weekly; and
- Repairing screens in windows and doors. Mosquitoes may enter a dwelling or commercial establishment if doors are left open and if screens are defective. Chapter II of the Massachusetts State Sanitary Code requires that all windows below the fifth floor of a dwelling must have screens that are at least 16 mesh per square inch and that all doors opening directly inside the dwelling unit have doors with similar screens installed from April 1 through October 30, both inclusive;

Residents should also be aware that the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program does accept private requests for surface spraying of specific streets between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday by calling their main number at (781) 585-5450. Surface spraying as a result of resident requests typically occur between the hours of 12 a.m. and 5 a.m. Residents may also call (617) 582-6219 in order to find out what streets will be sprayed on any particular day.

Residents may add their name and address to the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program's "No Spray List" by calling their main number at (781) 585-5450 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.



More information can be found on the MDPH Arbovirus Surveillance Information web page at: mass.gov/dph/wnv, by calling the MDPH recorded information line at 866-MASS-WNV (866-627-7968), or by calling the MDPH Epidemiology Program at 617-983-6800. As always, residents may also contact the Cohasset Board of Health at 781-383-4116 x. 119 or by email at boh@cohassetma.org.

hearing to ask questions and give input on the proposed regulations.

The health board decided to revisit the regulations at the behest of a Cohasset citizen, Dan Rivera, who said he was concerned that the town does not have regulations in place for testing private well water for contaminants. Rivera attended Tuesday night's hearing and said that it was only through having his own well tested that he learned of how many contaminants can get into the water supply and that the process is not regulated.

"I came to town and was surprised that there are very few requirements for public drinking water," said Rivera.

There are several contaminants, including bacteria, radon, arsenic, and uranium, that are naturally occurring in rocks and soils, according to the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Other contaminants stem from human activity such as improper waste or household chemical disposal, road salting, fuel spills, or using fertilizers with pesticides.

The health agent said that he plans to put together a fact sheet of the required testing, if the regulation are passed, to as a "quick reference for people to know" what they have to get done in terms of well water testing.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said, "If a homeowners are consuming well water, it should be tested."

Zemel explained that through the regulations, the health board would be "protecting the environment and people as a whole."

Some of the recommended tests included in the regulations would need to be done every three years, while others only need to occur every 10 years. The once-per-decade tests include inorganic compounds, synthetic organic compounds, and volatile organic compounds; the every three years tests are for bacteria, turbidity, nitrate and nitrite.

Trish Morse, Forest Avenue, asked the board if the 10-year tests could be done every 12 years instead because it would be easier for homeowners to remember if the dates were divisible by three. The board agreed to consider that option.

Morse also asked if there could be some kind of group rate for private well owners to pay one lab to come into town and conduct testing all at once, helping to ease the cost burden. Some well owners in attendance said that they paid between $500 and $800 to have their well water tested.

"I'm not opposed at all to having everyone test their drinking water, but I'm a little worried about the economics of it for people," she said.

Morse suggested a "well day" once a year where well owners could bring their water samples to Town Hall to be given to a lab for testing.

"They could come to town and do everybody's test the same way, you would get consistent data, and we would get a break on the price," said Morse. "It would be helpful to us."

Zemel noted that the town would not be able to pay for the tests but could facilitate a group testing date. He also explained that the town would not make any money off of the testing, either.

The health agent said that he plans to put together a fact sheet of the required testing, if the regulations are passed, to as a "quick reference for people to know" what they have to get done in terms of well water testing.

The health board plans to vote on the regulations during their October 2 meeting.

Regulating private wells

The proposed new private well regulations include several changes in order to better protect the public health, safety and the environment. Some of the changes include:

- Establishing setbacks for new wells, in order to reduce contamination;
- Requiring periodic Water Quality Testing, in order to ensure that the water is safe to drink;
- Requiring a Water Supply Certificate, in order to certify that the Private Well is constructed and/or maintained in accordance with the local regulations;
- Creating construction standards for safe construction of the well, in order to minimize potential contamination;
- Requiring a Water Quantity and Pumping Test, in order to determine if the flow generated by the well is sufficient for the population being served; and
- Decommissioning standards / requirements, in order to take a well out-of-service safely.

A hard copy of the proposed regulations is on file at the Cohasset Town Clerk's office, and will be available for public viewing during normal Cohasset Town Hall business hours.

The Board of Health expects to vote on the regulations during their October 2 meeting. For more information on private wells, or for clarification on the requirements in these regulations, contact the Cohasset Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or boh@cohassetma.org.

BEECHWOOD STREET

$5K to design sidewalks

Neighborhood input to be sought

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We need to get input from the neighborhood; we have to have a public hearing and take all that into consideration. It doesn't matter what we think — we need to hear from them."
Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

The Board of Selectmen voted on Tuesday, August 20 to approve an expenditure of $5,000 to start conceptual designs for a sidewalk on Beechwood Street near the site of the Toll Brothers development project.

Abutters to the project have appeared before the Planning Board and Board of Selectmen over the past year seeking mitigation for the home building project, which is expected to increase the traffic in that area.

The project will add 41 detached single-family homes on Beechwood Street at the site of the vacant Hayes Estate and former "Cedarmere" development project. The construction will add a substantial amount of traffic to the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood, which officials have labeled a dangerous intersection due to the number of serious accidents that have occurred there over the years, including a fatality in 1997.

Neighbors asked the selectmen to come up with possible solutions; selectmen chair Fred Koed said recently that the board should come up with a way to build a sidewalk there and find out how much it's going to cost. The town's Director of Planning and Project Management, Brian Joyce, presented three possibilities to the selectmen last week.

Joyce shared three cost estimates for sidewalks in the Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road area, as well as potential issues with these scenarios:

- North Side of Beechwood (Hammond to Locust equals 600 feet): $145,000. Potential issues: possible easement takings, tree removal, slope cut in and retaining wall install, consent of abutters, depth of cover to water services, Environmental permitting around Melie's Pond.
- South Side of Beechwood (600 feet): $175,000. Potential issues: Easement takings, removal/replacement of utility poles, consent of abutters, driveway line of site — safety.
- South Side of Norman Todd Road (Talarico to Beechwood equals 1300 feet): $280,000. Potential issues: removal/replacement of utility poles, consent of abutters.

Joyce noted that Norman Todd Road has a higher traffic rate than the other areas for both vehicles and pedestrians. The road is in direct alignment along Beechwood Street between South Main Street and 3A.

"In terms of public safety," Joyce wrote in a memo to the Acting Town Manager, "I think the money is better served connecting the existing sidewalks on Beechwood Street for the 1300 feet of Norman Todd Road, i.e. from Talarico Lane to Beechwood."

Some of these plans would require tree removal and ledge cutting, Joyce said during the selectmen's meeting.

Koed said that he thinks the abutters should have a say in the sidewalk plans. "We need to get input from the neighborhood; we have to have a public hearing," said Koed, "and take all that into consideration. It doesn't matter what we think — we need to hear from them."

Abutters Rich Fitzpatrick and Jane Norton were at the selectmen's meeting and asked about $75,000 that the Toll Bros. gave to the town for as mitigation monies for sidewalks. When asked by selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said this money has not yet been expended but must go through the Capital Budget and Town Meeting process, following a public hearing.

Milanoski suggested the selectmen vote to release $5,000 of the $75,000 to pay for conceptual sidewalk designs to "get moving" on a solution. The selectmen voted unanimously.

A letter from the Cohasset Police Association to the residents of Cohasset.

On September 3, 2013 Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is going to appoint Acting Police Chief William Quigley to the position of Chief of Police. The Members of the Cohasset Police Association fully support this move. Acting Chief Quigley has been managing the department for the past 15 months. The department morale is at its highest level in several years. Acting Chief Quigley has brought leadership, stability, and accountability to the Cohasset Police Department. The residents and stakeholders of Cohasset benefit from this leadership, as well as the rank and file members of the Police Department. Over the last year and a half Acting Chief Quigley has lead and guided the Police Department and its members in a mission to provide the best possible police services to the town and residents of Cohasset. Acting Chief Quigley's intimate and unique knowledge of the department and town has allowed him to provide the members of the Cohasset Police Department with the tools and knowledge to this end. Acting Chief Quigley has stabilized the department, and given officers continuity, cohesion, and confidence in their daily routine and assignments. Acting Chief Quigley, in a short time, has transformed the Cohasset Police Department into an innovative and proactive community oriented law enforcement agency. We are dedicated to serving the citizens of Cohasset and to providing superior police services. We encourage you to contact members of the Board of Selectmen and to sign the online petition in support of Acting Chief Quigley. Please keep Politics of the Police Department. The petition can be found at ipetitions.com, search Cohasset Police Chief and show your support by signing the petition.

Sincerely,

Michael Lopes, President
Cohasset Police Association.

Goodbye to Great Neck Grille

3A restaurant closes; what's next?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Great Neck Grille has closed its doors after a little over a year in business.

The American cuisine restaurant is the latest to come and go at the 156 King Street (Route 3A) location. The building has held Polynesian, Mexican, and Italian restaurants in the past.

Great Neck Grille opened in June 2012, replacing Constantine's, a Greek and Italian restaurant that opened in 2010. Before that, the space housed the Ground Round, KoKo Island, Acapulco's, Pacini's and Blackstone Tavern.

Cohasset Building Inspector Bob Egan said that so far, no one knows what the space will house next. The building's landlord was reached but declined to comment.

The high turnover for the location has Cohasset residents wondering what could be next — and what kind of restaurant has a chance of succeeding in the space which is next to a Dunkin Donuts.

When the Cohasset Mariner posted on Great Neck Grille's closing on our Facebook page, it lit up with comments from the community. Cohasseters discussed issues with the space as well as speculating on what could work there, and what they would like to see next.

The following comments were shared on Facebook:

• An old school diner type restaurant, with a counter and booths. Maybe make the front of the place glass so that you could see 3A. A restaurant like the old "Log and Line." My second thought is a butcher shop like Prevites in Weymouth on Rte. 53. Prevites opened about two years ago in Weymouth and it appears to be very successful. You can get pre-made trays of food for parties, subs, or talk to a real butcher if you want some particular cut of meat. The place is great if you haven't tried it.

• I liked it when it was the Ground Round and we could toss our peanut shells on the floor and watch the big screen!

• It would make a great CVS.

• The space is simply too small for any kind of chain sit-down restaurant. If it is any good, you can't park because the parking lot will be a mess. You almost don't want anything too popular there because the traffic issue is already a disaster with just the DD [Dunkin Donuts] and the empty restaurant and right across from the Avalon entrance. The space needs to be completely re-thought.

• The sports teams were always driving to Outback or Chili's for team dinners. Seems like a place like that would work. Or a Not Your Average Joe's type of restaurant. Everyone else who goes in there tries to have a family restaurant but then makes the prices too high for a family to go there just because it's Cohasset. And for some reason the service has been awful with the last few businesses. And... when you call yourself a tavern you need to ditch the white tablecloths!

• It's a lousy location... with all the cool places downtown, who wants to eat on 3A?

• Put a Chili's or Outback. Need a chain restaurant!

• Yeah, they gotta throw a Chili's in there, it would make baaank!

• Yes, with the long list of ethnic restaurant attempts (Chinese, Mexican, Italian, Blue Blood, etc.) I think that an Indian restaurant should be the next on the checklist.

• I don't think we need a chain restaurant. I think someone just needs to open a decent place with good food, good service and decent prices.

• Good product and good service will do the trick. Tough location because experienced restaurant pros (Jamie's etc.) have failed there.

• Bergson's with a liquor license. But I guess that IS the Ground Round.

• They need to fix the traffic problem, not easy to get out or drive in.

• I think the lack of a front entrance and a low profile from the street hurts the location. As for what could work there, simple— Bergson's.

• I remember the Ground Round and the popcorn all over the floor and going there with my grandparents. Bring back the Ground Round! Honestly, I think the location is bad. When I think of going out in this area, I think of restaurants on the water.

• Panera could kill it there, despite parking/congestion issues.

• We really don't need another sub shop, and CHOPS, 3A and Victoria's do such a nice job. We could use a decent, small "family" restaurant. The problem is the parking and the fact that the back is the front, and you drive straight into the dumpster when you enter. Until there is a good reason to go in there, there just isn't a good reason to go in there.

• I would love Potbelly's or Chipotle, but 3A isn't busy enough for them. Plus, there's still empty, and brand new, space next to the train station.

• No curb appeal at all!

• I think Joe's American Bar and Grill would work there. Another idea would be Paparazzi Italian Restaurant! Both choices would work great!

• Weathervane or a breakfast place. Toast in Hull is good but too small and packed all the time

• Signorelli's had great food. Food for thought if anyone is considering another go.

• Entrance in the rear is never a good idea.

See Facebook for all comments.
Now it's your turn—what do you think should go in the vacant restaurant location on 3A? Check out our poll at: wickedlocal.com/cohasset.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Scholarship

Hats off to Jack Thomae, a graduate of the Cohasset High School Class of 2013, on being awarded an academic scholarship from the Scots Charitable Society of Boston. Jack is attending the University of Vermont this fall.

Founded in 1657, the Scots Charitable Society is the oldest charitable organization still existing in the Western Hemisphere. The Society awards undergraduate scholarships to the Scottish-American community and seeks to promote Scottish and Celtic heritage through education, parades, and other cultural events throughout New England.

Police grad

Congratulations to Cohasset Police Officer Harrison Schmidt, who graduated from the Police Academy on Friday, August 23. He received the Top Gun Award for marksmanship, having scored the highest ranking in Academy history. He also placed second in his class for academics and was less than one quarter percent from first place.

St. Lawrence

Lauren M. Hayes of Cohasset is participating in St. Lawrence University's International Study Program for the 2013 fall semester. Lauren, a member of the Class of 2015 at St. Lawrence, is majoring in psychology. She graduated from Holderness School.

Nearly 50 percent of St. Lawrence University's Class of 2013 studied off campus during their undergraduate careers, either in one of its 21 international study abroad programs or its domestic programs within the United States.

SHINE counselor available Sept. 13

Attention all senior citizens: Lynne Buckley, SHINE counselor, will be available to address health insurance questions or concerns for seniors on a monthly basis at Cohasset Elder Affairs. Lynne's first scheduled visit will be from 8 to 10 a.m., on Friday, Sept. 13, at 3 North Main St. Appointments are required. Call 781-383-9112 to schedule a time to meet with Buckley.

Clambake!

This sounds like a delicious event!

In 1951, the Cohasset Historical Society held a memorable clambake on Pleasant Beach. As part of the organization's 85th birthday celebration, the society is reviving the tradition on Saturday, Sept. 14 with a clambake at Sandy Beach.

Celebrate the end of summer at a real New England clambake with all the fixings. The event benefits the Cohasset Historical Society, allowing them to provide the community with programs and exhibits highlighting the rich history of Cohasset.

For more information, call 781-383-1434 or visit the Historical Society online at:

cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

Jordie is a real charmer!

PAULA J FATERSIK

Jordie is an energetic and interactive little boy who will win you over with his charm and kittenish antics. COURTESY PHOTO

Looking for love? You can't look at Jordie and not fall in love instantly! He is one great package of fun and personality. Have time to devote to a new family member? This 7-month-old is a really loving little guy who wants your love and attention. And yes, he will reward you with purrs and sweet, longing looks. Jordie is an energetic and interactive little boy who will win you over with his charm and kittenish antics.

Got toys? Well, Jordie loves them all! He is particularly fond of his stuffed mice and has no trouble leaping after the wand toys in his room. His energy is totally infectious and you can't help but smile and laugh while playing alongside him. We all know how much joy and entertainment kittens provide, and this friendly feline is sure to bring lots of love and happiness to the right owners. Be ready to be "adopted" by him!

If you are familiar with Pinto ponies, Jordie's markings are strikingly like theirs. His white fur is beautifully patterned with deep caramel patches at his head and down his back. When you get to his tail, it is striped like a tiger giving him a unique look for sure. His face couldn't be cuter and the glow of his golden eyes is captivating. Jordie is one of the most handsome kittens ever, and hopefully, living in the shelter will be a very, very, short chapter in his life.

To learn more about Jordie please call Judy at 781-534-4902. He is waiting to meet you! A really loving forever home where he will be safe and can play and explore will be great for him so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for the best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets.

On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events. The Stem to Stern town wide yard sale and Endless Summer are two upcoming events where we will be promoting our available pets and hope to see old and new supporters.

We continue to have space provided to showcase out cats and kittens at Petco Unleashed in the Hingham Shipyard. Their generosity to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has been abundant and we are so grateful for their support. Our volunteers and board members are there regularly on Saturday mornings, so drop by and you can meet them as well as some of our little 'travelers" who get out for a field trip. Huge thanks go out to Cindy and Jamie for the time and effort they give to this weekly event.

A shelter is very much like a home and when things break down, it can be disastrous. For the past week we have been without our washing machine as it recently made its last clunk and gasp. Well, this is when volunteers step up and make things happen to keep the shelter operating smoothly. Many volunteers have been packing up loads of bedding and towels and taking them home to wash and things are staying on track while we await delivery of a new washer. That day can't come soon enough! It is a time like this when the generosity of volunteers and supporters shines through. There is a lot of effort, love and commitment needed when working with animals who are left homeless, and the people who give their all to help us are to be commended and thanked over and over.

Thank you to all who continue to fill the bottle and can bins at the shelter and A St. and to those who drop off much needed canned food for all of our residents.

Kittens are still arriving and the need for their supplies continues. Canned kitten food is always appreciated. This has been one of the busiest kitten seasons and every adorable, furry bundle here sends a baby meow of thanks to everyone who cares so much about them. Mew, mew, thank you!

BOYS STATE

'What America is all about'

Three CHS students take part in program

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There's more to government than what meets the eye. At the annual Massachusetts Boys and Girls State program, students get a glimpse of what exactly is involved in running a democratic government.

Boys and Girls State brings together high school juniors from around the country to spend one week on a college campus and learn the rights, privileges and responsibilities of franchised citizens. The weeklong program centers on the structure of city, county, and state governments and was held from June 15 to 23 at Stonehill College in Easton.

The program was packed with over 600 both Boys and Girls State participants this year.

Three students from Cohasset High participated in the American Legion Boys State in June. Cohasset's Sons of the American Legion recognized the three boys – Derek Benson, Cole Maher, and Max Montgomery, who are all starting their senior year this fall – during a special ceremony at the Legion on Saturday, August 16.

While Cohasset did not send any girls this year, it has in the past, and local Sons of the American Legion Commander Thomas Wigmore said that he hopes to send more female students in the future.

"This year, it's my goal," said Wigmore.

The Sons of the Legion commander thinks the program is a worthwhile one for students, providing a foundational understanding of American government and politics.

"It teaches them what America's all about," said Wigmore. "They learn how to run for governor, state senator, and run for different offices within the program."

Wigmore has spearheaded the effort to send Cohasset students to Boys State for nearly 20 years. He sits on the state board for the program and represents the Sons of the American Legion for the state, Wigmore explained. He added that he also attends the weeklong event and helps as a staff person as many days as he can.

His process for choosing students to represent the town starts with a call to the high school to ask for recommendations. Wigmore said that the Middle-High School assistant principal, Brian Scott, is a Boys State alum and a major help in finding candidates.

"He's a great guy," Wigmore said of Scott. "He knows what I'm looking for."

Wigmore then reviews the recommendations and conducts interviews. The chosen students must display a strong interest in government and politics.

"Through Boys State and mock legislative sessions and court proceedings, it becomes clear the importance of dedicated leadership and working together for a common goal and learning by doing."
Derek Bensen

"These kids are the cream of the crop," Wigmore said of the selected students, adding that he tries to be as inclusive as possible. "Any kid who wants to go, who's interested in government or politics, should have that opportunity."

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee member Kevin McCarthy helps Cohasset's Legion Post with their technology needs. He launched the Legion's Facebook page and videotaped the ceremony for the Boys State students.

McCarthy said he was impressed with this year's students.

"The young men that spoke were very impressive," said McCarthy. "The education and the experience they got will be a great benefit to themselves and their community."

Benson shared that he learned things from Boys State that can't necessarily be taught in school.

"My week at Boys State was a great opportunity for me to expand my understanding of the workings of American government. Through my school studies, I understood the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. Through Boys State and mock legislative sessions and court proceedings, it becomes clear the importance of dedicated leadership and working together for a common goal and learning by doing."

Maher said he enjoyed attending Boys State. "The experience as a whole offered great insight into how beneficial any form of involvement in government can be towards an individual's role as a citizen."

Montgomery said that he learned that it's important to understand the different sides of politics so that he can make informed decisions.

"Prior to Boys State I made a conscious effort to remain relatively neutral in regards to political controversies because it was just easier than picking a side. At Boys State I learned the importance of and how to formulate opinions," said Montgomery. "Boys State developed my political awareness and increased my worth as a citizen. I met tons of accomplished and interesting people and made many new friends at Boys State."

The Cohasset seniors recognize the program's importance.

"Boys State is a crucial program because it prepares young citizens for a life of informed political activism that will benefit government and society as a whole," Montgomery said.

Benson added, "I'm grateful to the Cohasset American Legion Post for inviting me to participate in this remarkable program."

Wigmore said that the Sons typically aims to send two students to the program each year, but that he would like to send more, if possible. Those who are interested can make a donation to the Sons of the American Legion and designate it for the program.

"Anyone can sponsor a boy or a girl," said Wigmore.

For more information, or to nominate a candidate for Boys or Girls State, email Thomas Wigmore at wiggy3604@yahoo.com.

Boczanowski paintings on view at library

South Shore Art Center will present a series of acrylic paintings by Stephen Boczanowski at Paul Pratt Memorial Library Sept. 3 through Oct. 31.

Boczanowski, former K-12 art director for the Marshfield Public Schools for 34 years, began his career as a commercial artist for several advertising agencies and graphic design studios in Boston. He graduated from the Boston Museum School and Tufts University, and later received his master of science degree in art education from Massachusetts College of Art.

His paintings feature familiar South Shore scenes, downtown Boston locations, and numerous boats, docks, and beachside cottages. In his paintings of city streets and older building facades, he adds brilliant tones that enliven these images.

Boczanowski's work has won several awards at the Cape Cod Art Association, North River Art Society, Plymouth Art Guild, Duxbury Art Association and the South Shore Art Association.

Boczanowski presently teaches evening courses in Desktop Publishing, Photography and Computer Art at Providence College in Rhode Island.

OUR VIEW

A vote for Chief Quigley

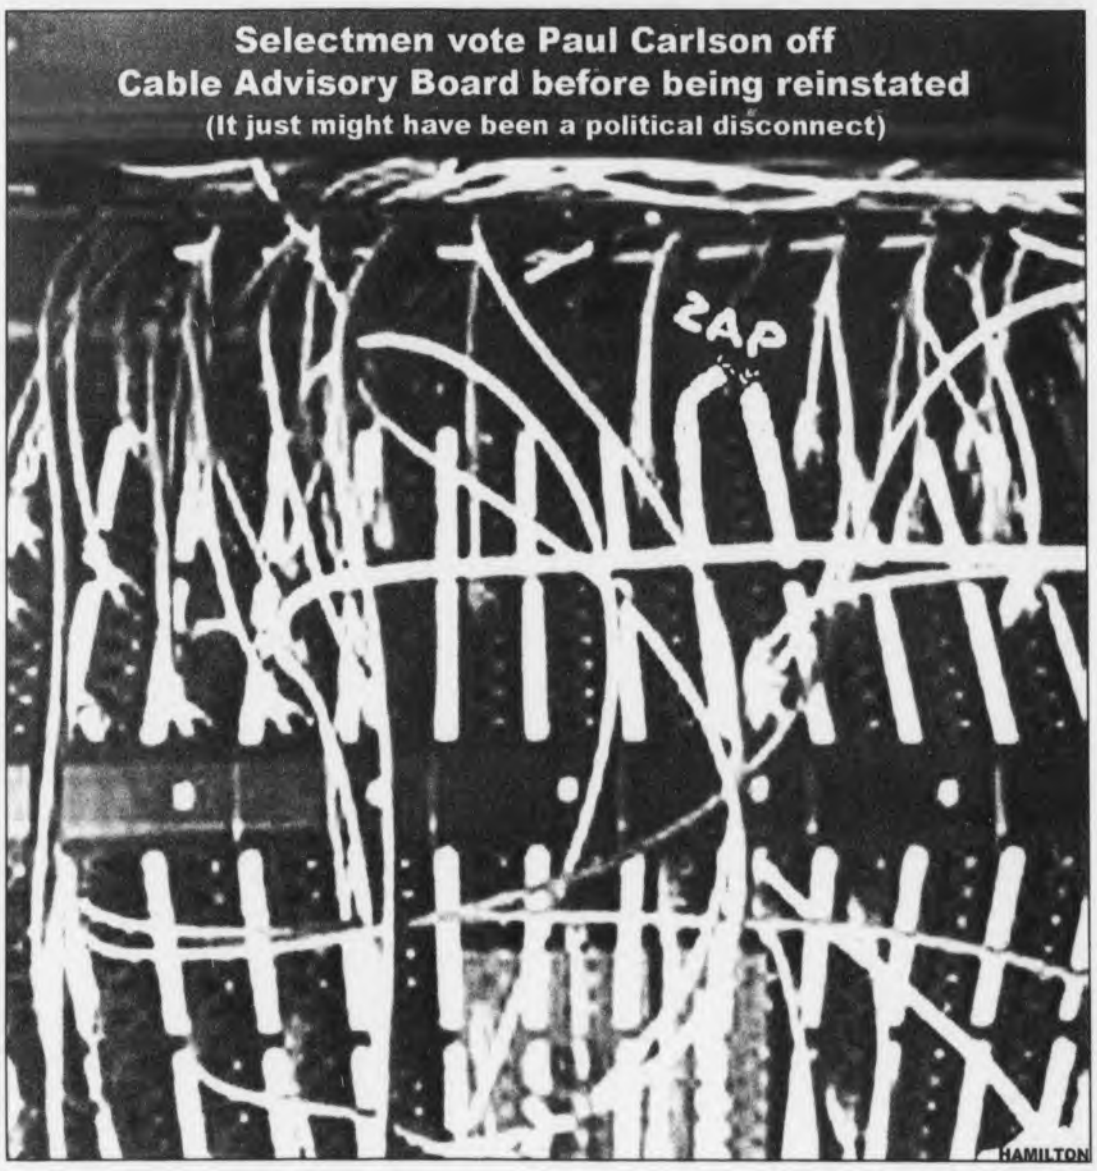
We support Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's decision to appoint Acting Police Chief William Quigley as permanent chief for Cohasset.

We are not alone in our view that Bill Quigley is ready for the role.

• Boston Lt. Robert P. Harrington, a Cohasset resident, stated in a letter to Milanoski: "The CPD needs to move forward with strong, stable leadership, that draws its strength from the dedication and commitment from all its members. I believe wholeheartedly that Bill Quigley is the best person to provide that leadership. His knowledge of the Department, its personnel and the Cohasset community is unsurpassed by any other candidate."

• A. Wayne Sampson, Public Safety Consultants, LLC, whom the town hired to conduct an independent evaluation of Quigley, wrote; "In reviewing the totality of the A/Chief's work experience, education, professional training, command and execution of current law enforcement issues with an emphasis on budgets, discipline, and technology; it is the consultants' opinion that A/Chief Quigley has the skill, knowledge, and abilities to be a Chief of Police."

• Cohasset Det. Lt. Gregory Lennon, long-time colleague who was hired in 1995 (the same year as Quigley), noted that Quigley's knowledge of the intricacies, nuances and culture of the CPD is unrivaled. He stated Quigley has never allowed familiarity or friendship to interfere with discipline in the department; that he has reined in the budget, replaced aging equipment and fostered an esprit de corps, which has led to a very cohesive group that unanimously supports his appointment as permanent chief.



In his "360 management review," Milanoski found unanimous endorsement for Quigley from Norfolk County DA Michael Morrissey, Hingham Chief Michael Peraino, Hull Chief Richard Billings, Norwell Chief Theodore Ross, Scituate Chief Brian Stewart, Quincy Chief Paul Keenan and Weymouth Chief Richard Grimes.

Is Bill Quigley perfect? Let's face it; it is not easy to be a police officer. Interaction with the police can mean being issued a parking ticket, stopped for a traffic violation, or worse, being arrested or having a family member arrested. It would be impossible for an officer with 18 years in town not to have antagonized some people over the years.

But we would think that ringing endorsements from colleagues, in addition to a positive evaluation by the town consultant, would be enough for the entire Board of Selectmen to approve Quigley's appointment. In a thinly veiled attempt to conceal politics and the determination to vote "no" on anything Milanoski proposes, some selectmen will talk about the need for process, that they want to "see what else is out there" through a national search, and want a potential new Town Manager to be able hire his or her own team.

Tuesday, Milanoski is expected to make Quigley's appointment official. Selectmen have 15 days to reject that appointment under the Town Manager Act. We sincerely hope the board will give Bill Quigley the opportunity to take "acting" off his title and let the CPD and Cohasset, move forward.

The full text of Sampson's review, Harrington's and Lennon's letters are available at the Selectmen's Office, as well as Milanoski's memo to Selectmen spelling out his reasons for making the appointment. This correspondence is also online at: wickedlocalcohasset.com

Politics ahead of citizenry

Can Cohasset politics/governance get any worse? Answer: Yes.

Can the downward spiral be reversed? Answer: Yes.

How? By the hiring and the election of intelligent, experienced leaders who will place the citizenry ahead of personal aggrandizement and petty agendas.

Joseph McElroy,
59 Windy Hill Road

Hit and run in store parking lot

This is an open letter to the inconsiderate character that destroyed the back bumper of my black Toyota Sequoia on Monday, Aug. 12th between 12:30 and 1:10 p.m. while it was parked in the Stop & Shop parking lot. If you are reading this message, you are well aware of your actions. To think that you drove away without leaving a note after causing $1,000 worth of damage, leads me to believe that you will strike again.

My concern is that the next time you hit something, it could be a "someone." Thus I offer the good honest readers of the Mariner a $500 reward for the identification and conviction of this insensitive menace. Thanks to the assistance of the "security cameras" mounted outside of Stop & Shop, I do not have a description of the perpetrator or their vehicle. Please contact the Cohasset Police Department with any leads that will bring this person to justice. If the "perp" decides to bring himself or herself to justice, don't expect any cash. Rather, I will leave your future up to a greater authority.

Robert Bernstein,

COMMENTARY

The case for Bill Quigley

JACK KENILEY

By law, Milanoski is not required to conduct a search; he could have moved to appoint Acting Chief Quigley based on Quigley's performance on the job as he did with the re-appointment of Bob Silvia as Fire Chief this summer.

There seems to be a significant amount of confusion surrounding the appointment of Acting Chief William Quigley to the permanent position of Chief of Police.

Acting Chief Quigley has been Acting Chief for over 18 months. By all accounts he has done a great job and has demonstrated, through his on-the-job performance, he has earned the appointment.

Under the Town Manager Act of 1997, the Town Manager appoints the Chief of Police, the Fire Chief and other important positions by filing a notice of appointment with the Board of Selectmen. The Selectmen then have 15 days to accept or reject the appointment. The Town Manager Act of 1997 does not require a search nor does it require the Town Manager to consult with the Selectmen in the selection process. Of course, politically astute Town Mangers are unlikely to recruit and appoint a person to the Chief of Police position without working closely with the Selectmen in the screening process.

Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski has for over six months tried to move forward with the appointment for the Chief's position. Twice, he has begun the process, with the endorsement of the Board, and both times the search has been halted once the search was underway. By law, Milanoski is not required to conduct a search; he could have moved to appoint Acting Chief Quigley based on Quigley's performance on the job as he did with the re-appointment of Bob Silvia as Fire Chief this summer.

It is well known that Fred Koed and Mr. Milanoski have had numerous and public disputes over many aspects of town governance. Chairman Koed has made no secret of his dislike of Milanoski's management of the Town. Chairman Koed has rarely demonstrated his support for Milanoski, even though Milanoski has been very successful in making improvements to the finances and governance of the Town.

It seems like Chairman Koed's personal feelings towards Mr. Milanoski have colored his actions on the appointment of Bill Quigley to the chief position. Under any objective measure, Quigley is qualified to be Chief of Police. Why has Chairman Koed disrupted the Chief search twice? Neither Chairman Koed nor the Selectmen have ever explained their reasoning behind stopping the searches. Most importantly, the Selectmen and Chairman Koed have never articulated why Mr. Quigley should not be appointed to the job.

If the Selectmen, in their meeting next Tuesday, vote against the appointment it will be the Town's loss. The Selectmen's actions may result in significant turmoil in the Police Department until a new Chief is hired sometime in the future. More importantly, why are we injecting partisan, Town Hall politics into the Police Department?

After three years of instability and political maneuvering throughout the Town, it would be refreshing to see the Selectmen demonstrate that they can rise above their political disputes and do right by Deputy Chief Quigley who has served us faithfully and with great distinction.

Jack Keniley lives at 46 Black Rock Road.

Bradley raises awareness of mosquito-borne illnesses

Tours state testing laboratory

The symptoms of EEE include abrupt onset fever, chills, headache, muscle aches, nausea and vomiting, seizures, and even coma.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, announced Tuesday that the first human case of West Nile virus (WNV) this year had infected a local resident in his 70s who was diagnosed with WNV in late August and remains hospitalized, but is recovering. State Department of Public Health (DPH) officials also told Bradley on Monday that two mosquito samples from Hingham had tested positive for Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE). Coincidentally, the news came just days after Bradley visited the Hinton State Laboratory in Jamaica Plain, where mosquito samples are tested, to meet with DPH Commissioner Cheryl Bartlett and several staff members to discuss current and future funding priorities. The tour took place August 22nd.

"This new WNV case, the finding of EEE in tests in Hingham, together with the recent reported EEE death in another local town, underscores the serious nature of the threat, and I encourage residents to check the Department's website which is updated daily with mosquito results and risk levels," said Bradley. "I want to make sure that the public sees the same information as local health officials, to know whether there might be an increased risk of exposure in their town."

Bradley thanked Commissioner Bartlett for inviting him to tour the facility and learn more about the vital functions it provides for the Commonwealth, the region and nation as well.

"I was impressed by the scope and quality of research and testing which takes place at the facility, often under less than ideal conditions. The staff and equipment appear to be outgrowing the current facility, but these dedicated professionals continue to work hard to accomplish their tasks," said Bradley.

Later in the tour, Bradley was shown a small room where technicians process mosquito samples to determine whether the insects have been infected with West Nile Virus or Eastern Equine Encephalitis. He told Commissioner Bartlett and staff members that his district has been affected by outbreaks of mosquitoes, and mentioned the recent death from EEE of a local Massachusetts woman.

Bartlett said, "DPH and our staff at the Hinton State Laboratory Institute work hard to protect our Commonwealth's residents from mosquito-borne infection. We appreciate the Representative's dedicated leadership in support of this important public health issue and look forward to continuing our partnership with the Legislature moving forward."

Symptoms

According to the DPH, in 2012, 33 cases of West Nile Virus were detected in Massachusetts residents. While WNV can infect people of all ages, people over the age of 50 are at higher risk for severe disease. WNV is usually transmitted to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. Most people infected with WNV will have no symptoms, which tend to include fever and flu-like illness. In rare cases, more severe illness can occur. In 20 percent of cases, patients will experience headache, sore throat, fatigue, muscle and joint aches, and moderate to high fever. The symptoms of EEE include abrupt onset fever, chills, headache, muscle aches, nausea and vomiting, seizures, and even coma. The disease tends to affect children disproportionately, has a nearly 50 percent mortality rate, and 80 percent of survivors have residual neurological deficits.

The lab consists of four bureaus employing 278 staff, and conducts more than 225,000 tests each year for EEE, West Nile Virus, Rabies, chemical threats, blood lead, food-borne disease, STDs, tuberculosis, influenza, and other bio-agents, to name a few examples. Other core functions of the facility include environmental health and protection, disease prevention, control and surveillance, training and education. The lab operates separately from the Executive Office of Public Safety's crime testing facility.

Bureau of Laboratory Sciences Director Dr. Michael Pentella told Bradley during a presentation that the lab is supported by a combination of state funding and federal grants. Pentella said current and future needs include maintaining adequate staffing levels, plus improving technology and the infrastructure that supports it. Space is limited, and some computer equipment is kept in closets.

The information collected by the state lab is shared with health officials throughout the state and the country, as well as the federal Centers for Disease Control, as part of a large integrated network of testing facilities. In addition, the facility conducts regular air sample testing at various locations and shares the information with the Department of Homeland Security, to monitor for potential airborne pathogens.

Laboring through a myriad of thoughts

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

September, even though most of the month is technically summer, it's the start of my favorite season, fall (or autumn if you so desire). This year September not only brings us a new school year, apples and the kickoff off to the Patriots season but it also brings back baseball games that matter and Ring Dings to store shelves. But before we find ourselves caught behind a school bus allow me to shake-out a few things that have been piling up over the summer.

• First of all, a huge tip of the cap to the folks over at the Music Circus. Not only did they have another great summer of music but they also expanded their selection of beers; both of which made me extremely happy. May you all have a great winter and I look forward to seeing the tent going up next spring.

• Speaking of music, Petty is great when it comes to singing but not so much when it comes to local politics. The recent move by some of the Selectmen to try and boot former Selectman Paul Carlson off of the Cohasset Community Television Advisory Board was just that, petty. I'm glad that common sense prevailed, but c'mon folks show us you're better than that.

• Spent the month of July coaching the 12-year-old B baseball travel team and I have to be honest, I may not be in the upper echelon of coaches. Due to a scheduling snafu, we fought an uphill battle all season long, but every single player made a positive impact and it was an honor to have been their coach. The two highlights of the season was the continued enthusiasm of the kids even as the season wound down and an incredibly nice thank note I received this week from one of the players.

• Very few things top a hand written thank you note.

• Today (Friday, Aug. 30) is my son's 13th birthday. I am now the parent of a teenager; seriously it's hard to believe. Like any parent we lost countless hours of sleep those first few years and I have a feeling those nights are on the verge of returning. Happy Birthday Andrew, let's hope for a great year and that the Sox win one for you tonight.

• Is it too much to hope that when Ring Dings return they'll be in the silver foiled wrapping? Also, how it's possible for the many months that they've been off the shelves I've actually gained a few pounds?

• While on the subject of shopping, are there other parents who get frustrated by combo packs of products? I don't want to buy cotton candy and watermelon yogurt just so I can get strawberry. Lost sale.

• Following up from last month's article. Olivia's settling in well and thanks to the wonders of technology the girls chat face to face a few times a week. Watching them, I can't but help think about going to the Museum of Science 30+ years ago and seeing the exhibit about communication (remember the TV ad "My name is Karen?"). The exhibit speculated about a future where people communicated via videophones; well it's here and it's simply amazing.

• Citizen McSheffrey firmly supports the move to make acting Police Chief Bill Quigley the town's permanent Police Chief. Quietly, Chief Quigley has been doing a wonderful job leading the Cohasset Police. After all the issues surrounding former Chief DeLuca and the self-promoting of former Chief Hussey we all should embrace the job Quigley is doing and embrace the move to name him Chief.

• Read on the Mariner Facebook page that the Great Neck Grille restaurant has closed (you are following the Mariner on Facebook aren't you?). Never like to hear of a small business not making it. It's been a tough few years for that location but I for one think that it hasn't been the location as much as the types of establishments that chose that location. How about a new version of Bergson's; a locally owned place where a family can have a fun meal and an ice cream.

• Last Saturday there was an informal parade through town of classic and antique cars; it was pretty impressive.

• We took the kids to the Weir's Beach Drive-In earlier this month, it was loads of fun. It wasn't too long ago when the South Shore had a number of Drive-Ins. The last Drive-In movie I saw in this area was "Pretty in Pink" over in Braintree.

• Did you read about the anonymous letter sent this month to an Ontario family telling them to "euthanize" their 13-year-old autistic child? It was beyond obscene and is an extreme example why Gatehouse Media and many other news outlets have done away with anonymous postings on their websites. Coincidently, the policy change has happened at the same time the posters on the Mariner website decided to be kinder and more respectful to each other.

• "It's the most wonderful time of the year..." Seriously, is there a better advertisement than the Staples' school supply commercial?

• Is there a family in town with kids that hasn't been positively impacted by Par-Tee? Mary-Anne is a true treasure. Perhaps sometime in the near future, you can get in a round of indoor golf, support a wonderful business and see if any of the faces on the walls look familiar.

• Note to at least one local restaurant, online menus really help.

• Finally, words cannot describe the sorrow I feel for the Gold family for their tragic loss. Though I don't know the Golds, the amazing words that have been shared about Dylan have both broke and warmed my heart. Please allow me to join the many others and share my most sincere wishes and thoughts. Peace to your entire family.

Thanks for reading and enjoy the last few weeks of summer.

FOR THE RECORD

Connecting with today's students

GREGORY MATHIS

But I do remember typewriters; not only through my middle school and high school days, but also for the entire time I was in college.

What an exciting time to be in school.

Students young and old, and maybe even some teachers and administrators, may not share that same sentiment as they return to school this week or are counting down the final hours of summer before starting after Labor Day.

Over the past few years, as we've highlighted various changes in school systems as part of our back to school coverage, there's been a growing trend in technology. A couple of years ago, we were reporting on a middle school that was distributing iPads to all incoming middle schoolers.

This year we reported on a school system that is supplying 60 new iPads, with iPad applications, to all kindergarten classes thanks to a grant from that town's education foundation.

These stories are becoming more and more common as school departments find the resources to bring education in line with the digital era.

And the times, they are'a-changin'.

I'm not so old that I remember walking to school uphill, both ways, barefoot, in the snow. But I do remember typewriters; not only through my middle school and high school days, but also for the entire time I was in college.

The computers available to us in college in the early 1980s weren't very useful unless you were a computer science major and knew how to write code and programs. I tried to learn, but wasn't very good. Regardless, word processors were not yet in the mainstream and Al Gore had yet to invent the Internet. So looking back, the mammoth monitors, bulky hard drives and funky green and white striped paper were nothing more than paperweights.

Today, voluminous textbooks cluttering lockers and weighing down backpacks are nearly history as students now log in to do a great deal of their homework. And in addition to the necessary text, the online component features interactive options fitting for this technologically savvy generation.

Beyond the digital advances being made in the classroom and eliminating the need to lug around textbooks, how exciting is it for today's students to have a world of information at their fingertips?

Gone are the days of having to navigate the Dewey Decimal System and spending hours at the school or town library researching information for a class project or essay. Some might say that's not necessarily a good thing, but the digital landscape expands nonetheless.

I think of all the time that could have been saved writing research papers using today's technology. Google, Bing, Yahoo, Ask.com and other search engines crank out information as quickly as one can type in keywords. Everything from the history of Ancient Rome to the science of nuclear physics is available with a few keystrokes. Misspelled words are flagged with squiggly red lines underneath, and misused words or poor grammar are highlighted with a green line. There's much less margin for error.

And alas, typing on a computer sure beats trying to use White Out to correct mistakes made using a typewriter, although I do miss the feel of striking the keys and listening to the rhythm of the writing. But that seems such a small sacrifice given the big picture and the seemingly limitless opportunity available these days.

It's sad that summer is winding down, but once everybody gets back into a routine, there's plenty to be excited about now that school is back in session.

GROWING ON THE FARM

High time for harvest

JON BELBER

Beans are probably the most successful of the three sister gardens we planted at the farm and for kids and teachers at school farm gardens.

In these dry, late days of August, many a folk find themselves at the beach, either about to or already having stopped by the farm stand or market to purchase their long awaited corn and tomatoes. It is meant to be the height of harvest, at the moment before the Winter squash comes into the barn to ripen and the mums arrive at garden centers.

At Holly Hill Farm, there is plenty of desire to go to the beach, but far too many weeds to uproot and beans to discover.

The magic purple beans are filling up baskets at the farm stand. Magic for their slow metamorphic color change to green when they meet the hot water. The camouflaged green beans are finally out and under the heart shaped leaves. Such a great discovery, if one has been fortunate to be away.

The beans are hanging off the stems and benefit from a two-handed tug, otherwise you might pull too much of the plant. Once you lift the leaves, you can see the multiple beans of all different sizes dangling beneath their flowers. It is quite tempting and easy, as well as permissible, to pick a few and nibble one. Repeat and nibble again.

Beans are probably the most successful of the three sister gardens we planted at the farm and for kids and teachers at school farm gardens. The other two sisters are corn (tall) and squash (vines to spread and cover potential weeds). Many a pilgrim learned of the three companion plants from the Native Americans they encountered on these similar shores and open lands.

Soon, many school kids, and hopefully curious teachers too, will also look beyond the weeds and under the leaves for bright sunny tomatoes, prickly cucumbers and slightly wilting kale, which will liven up with oil and salt in the oven as kale chips. As autumn approaches and people are forced off the beaches and away from vacations, the return to the school farm garden will be a welcome site.

Many may wish for school to open in late September, when summer officially ends, but along with the joy of purchasing new sharpened pencils and sturdy folders, there is joy in harvesting the fruits of what others have planted in June.

I will write soon about potatoes, speaking of great harvesting thrills. But as a teacher said to me today at the beach, it will be great to talk soon, she said, so we can even plant some crops for a fall harvest – new pencils, new books, new spinach.

Fall holds plenty of summer joys both sown and soon to reap. From the growing beds in downtown Hingham at St. Paul School to the new peas at the Jenkins School in Scituate to the straight rows of arugula at South River School in Marshfield, the transition from the beach to the weeds to the beds, harvesting and nibbling are good lures for the summer farmer and reluctant student or teacher. I will see you in the weeds.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

garten classes sizes range from 17 to 19 students per room; if the seventh class had not been added, each class would have had 22 to 23 students. There are 130 kindergarten students total this year, and 37 enrolled in pre-k.

LeCount said that this has happened at Osgood before.

"We have had seven kindergarten classes in the past, so we were prepared for the additional class this year. The room is furnished, the teacher is chosen, and she is eager to personalize the room," said LeCount.

While grades one and two start on Tuesday, kindergarten students' first day of school is Thursday Sept. 5. First, the school has a kindergarten meet and greet on Wednesday, Sept. 4; parents should have received a scheduling letter of when to come for the meet and greet, LeCount said.

Grade one is back to the prior teaching levels, meaning there are six grade one teachers, the principal explained. Class sizes range from 20 to 21, which is an improvement over last year when there were only five first grade classes. There are 124 first grade students.

There are also six teachers in grade two, with class sizes of 19 to 21, which LeCount said is the same as last year. There are 119 second graders.

Overall, there are 410 Osgood students this year. LeCount said the school is ready to go.

"We are ready. The building is cleaned, the teachers have been working in their rooms getting ready to receive students, and we are using a new math program this year. All the energy is positive. We are looking forward to Tuesday when we will welcome grades one and two to the 2013-2014 school year."

Deer Hill

Third, fourth, and fifth graders can expect some exciting new developments this year, said Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara.

"Technology is certainly one of them," the principal said. "We're being outfitted for the twenty-first century classroom. Every one will have an LCD projector, an interactive white board, a document camera, and a speaker system... technology that will really make teaching innovative and exciting."

When it comes to utilizing other tech devices, it seems that Deer Hill is ahead of the curve, with laptop and iPad carts for the students to use in the classroom.

"It's quite a big, new thing," she said.

The Deer Hill teachers and administrators are working to implement state Common Core standards in the curriculum for English language arts and literacy, history/ social science, mathematics and science/technology.

"This is the first year we need to implement the common core standards 100 percent," said deChiara. "We've been studying and implementing them for the last two years, and are very well positioned to go ahead with that."

But it's not all work and no play. Another exciting development at Deer Hill this year is the brand new playground. The PSO fundraised for the project and parent volunteers are spending Labor Day weekend spreading woodchips.

"It's such a big project, and we can't thank the playground committee enough," said deChiara. "They took community input and turned it into a beautifully designed space and a colorful playground. It's really exciting."

One challenge facing Deer Hill this year, like Osgood, is increased enrollment, especially in grades four and five, deChiara said. To mitigate this, the school hired an additional Educational Support Personnel (ESP) "to help serve the kids and teachers better," the principal explained. "It's one thing we've done to remediate the effects of the large class size."

There are 154 students in fifth grade, 150 in fourth, and 138 in third.

It's clear that Deer Hill is ready to start the new school year, challenges and all. The principal said she looks forward to seeing all of her students, former and new.

"As always, I'm so excited to get to know my incoming third grade students and their families," said deChiara. "And just watching the kids grow up year to year... it's really rewarding."

Middle-High School

You'll see some new faces at the Middle-High School this year, including several new teachers (see sidebar). The school district has hired a total of 18 new educators.

There are 793 students ready to fill the halls of the Middle-High School next week, with 136 in sixth grade, 139 in seventh, and 114 eighth graders. On the high school side, there are 97 freshman, 117 sophomores, 88 juniors, and 101 seniors.

While Principal Carolyn Connolly could not be reached for comment before deadline, Assistant Principal Brian Scott shared that he is very excited about the upcoming school year.

"Last year I discovered a palpable excitement from September to June, even with the extended year," said Scott. The school year was longer than usual last year, ending on June 27, following many snow days and other weather-related closures.

Scott said that he admires Cohasset's student population.

"Students here clearly take pride in their town, they celebrate the diversity of talents that their classmates share with the school and community, and they genuinely enjoy learning with a faculty I've found to be second to none," said Scott.

"I really look forward to seeing how this group of students, and particularly the seniors, create their unique version of the CMHS community and the lasting impression they leave."

All one-hundred-and-one of them.

Look for more on the start of the school year in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Volume 38 - Report No. 34 August 23, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the 2013 official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 157 state representatives from January 1 through July 17, 2013. The list reveals that representatives collected a total of $110,468. Combined with the $27,772 collected so far by senators, the total per diems taken so far is $138,240.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to lawmakers above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for representatives who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Representatives who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Some supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions. Others argue that some legislators accept the per diem but use all of the revenue they receive to support local nonprofit causes. They say that not taking the per diem would leave that money in the state's General Account to be spent on who knows what?

Some opponents argue most private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. They say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes and funding for important programs has been cut. Others say the per diem is especially inappropriate given the recent 3-cent-per-gallon hike in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax.

The 2013 statistics indicate that 65 of the state's 157 representatives have received reimbursements ranging from $52 to $3,500, while 92 representatives have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that representatives must meet in order to collect the per diems. Some legislators will never collect per diems regardless of the number of days they spend at the Statehouse because they do not support the practice.

The representatives who received the most per diem money are Reps. Timothy Madden (D-Nantucket) and Tricia Farley-Bouvier (D-Pittsfield), who each received $4,500.

REPRESENTATIVES' 2013 PER DIEMS

The dollar figure next to the representative's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state paid him or her so far in 2013. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the representative certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

BACKGROUND CHECKS (S 1839) - The House approved a Senate-approved bill that would allow the FBI to conduct fingerprint checks for a national background check on teachers, child care workers and others who work with children. Current law authorizes only a Massachusetts background check. The Bay State is one of the few states that does not provide for a national check.

RISING HEALTH CARE COSTS - A hearing on rising heath care costs across Massachusetts is scheduled for Tuesday, October 1, and Wednesday, October 2, at 9 a.m. at the University of Massachusetts Boston Campus Center. It's questionable, however, whether the public will have the opportunity to testify. In its press release, the Health Policy Commission (HPC) announces, "Time-permitting, the HPC will accept oral testimony from members of the public beginning at 4:00 p.m. on Wednesday, October 2." It also notes that anyone who wants to testify may sign up to offer brief comments on a first-come, first-served basis when the hearing commences on October 1.

Members of the public may also submit written testimony by October 11 electronically to HPC-Testimony@state.ma.us or sent by mail to the Health Policy Commission, 2 Boylston Street, 6th floor, Boston, MA 02116, attention Lois Johnson.

ELECTRIC CAR CHARGING STATIONS (S 1579) - The Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy Committee will hold a hearing on the future of electric cars November 12 at 10 a.m. in Room A2 at the Statehouse. The hearing includes a bill that would require the Department of Public Utilities to investigate the charging infrastructure needed to build charging stations for electric cars in Massachusetts and report back to the Legislature.

SEN. DAN WOLF MAY RESIGN - Sen. Daniel Wolf (D-Harwich) announced that he will resign from the Senate on August 29 unless the Ethics Committee changes its ruling that Wolf is in violation of state ethics laws because Cape Air, the company he founded 25 years ago and in which he still has an interest, has agreements with MassPort to use Logan Airport. The commission has given Wolf three choices: either permanently divest his holdings in Cape Air, terminate the company's contracts with MassPort or resign from his Senate seat and end his campaign for governor.

Wolf said he does not believe Cape Air's agreements with MassPort create a conflict of interest for him as a public official. He noted, "These are fixed fees and leases with identical terms and conditions for any airline that uses Logan ... There is no opportunity for discretion, negotiation, or influence. MassPort does not pay Cape Air; Cape Air leases space and pays a fee, like a Turnpike toll or a charge for municipal water, to use a piece of public infrastructure."

Wolf said the Ethics Commission has been aware since at least May 2010 of his ownership interest in Cape Air but did not make their ruling until August 2 — three weeks after he announced his campaign for governor.

CRITERIA

The board voted overall to approve a draft town profile prepared by the UMass Collins Center, which the selectmen hired this summer to launch the town's search for a permanent town manager.

The Collins Center's document, chiefly prepared by consultant Richard Kobayashi, contains several sections, including background information on Cohasset, its governance and operational structure, finance, and potential challenges for a permanent town manager. It was the section titled "The Ideal Candidate" that gave the selectmen some pause.

The board voted 3-2 to approve the document overall, with selectmen Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer dissenting because they did not agree with the criteria for a town manager. Selectmen chair Fred Koed voted in agreement with selectmen Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby, who both emphasized that they wanted to hire someone with previous town manager experience and education.

Kennedy said that she would like to hire a specific skill set rather than an exact resume. She agreed, however, that someone with prior town manager experience would be ideal, however adding, "I don't want to exclude somebody who's had other management or municipal experience."

Kennedy cited Hingham's Town Administrator, Ted Alexiades, as an example. He was the town's Finance Director prior to taking the helm as town administrator.

Gaumer agreed with Kennedy that the scope of the town manager search should be broad, rather than restrictive. He further stated that he views the qualifications as an attempt to limit the candidate pool and block certain people from even applying for the job — something the town's Governance Committee tried to clear up in amended Town Manager Act (TMA), which would remove a prohibition that keeps town employees or board members from being able apply for the permanent town manager position until they have vacated their previous position for a year.

The TMA does not require the town manager candidate to have prior town manager experience.

Depending on how things go with the state legislature, the town profile could be at odds with the TMA, which underwent several amendments (as voted by the April 2013 Town Meeting) that were sent to the state as a Home Rule Petition in May. The petition had a State House hearing in July and is currently in the hands of the House and Senate joint Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.

Cohasset residents and officials who were both for and against the bill testified at the hearing; the opposition could explain why the bill has not yet been voted into law. The legislature has until next year to make a decision.

Kennedy said that she does not feel that the qualifications outlined in the town profile prohibits a non-town manager from being able to apply for the job, however, believing that the language is up to interpretation.

The vice-chair wanted to focus on the positive. "We got through 98 percent of the document with unanimity" among the board, Kennedy said in a phone call Wednesday. "Overall, I'm very pleased with how the meeting went in general because there was a lot of very important minutiae and we all agreed on that."

Gaumer said that approving the document was only part of the issue.

"The document itself was innocuous; the fine-tuning we agreed to, no problem," he said. "Disagreements arose over the two options for the screening criteria; one option, the more restrictive of the two, was reportedly proposed by one of the board members specifically to screen out the acting town manager's candidacy."

Michael Milanoski has been acting town manager since March 2012.

Gaumer said the scary part to him is this does not appear to be above board and that selectmen should operate as a body rather than as individuals with agendas.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed could not be reached for comment before press time.

Other items the selectmen wanted to emphasize: the town manager's joint management of Cohasset's water and sewer enterprise funds; the need for a town manager to have a collegial working relationship with elected and appointed committees, commissions and boards; that the town has several interactive departments and that while some services, such as technology and building maintenance, are shared with the schools, a town manager must respect the autonomy of the schools.

Kennedy agreed to keep track of the board's edits to the draft profile and send it to Koed for approval; he would then send it off to the Collins Center for completion. The next interaction the selectmen will have with the Center is during the town manager screening process.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

When you need to know...
Public Notices tell you.

What are Public/Legal Notices?

Public notices are announcements from all levels and branches of government, as well as from individuals and businesses that inform you about government actions, environmental conditions and economic changes. They alert you when your interests, your family or your community is affected by what others do, and they invite you to participate in the democratic process or in business opportunities.

Watch this newspaper for public notices that inform you about things like:

- the restaurant at the end of the block that applied for a liquor license
- a proposed tax increase on the school board's agenda
- the neighbor that applied for a permit to enlarge her house
- the sewer authority that is issuing bonds to finance a new plant
- business and/or residential properties that are going up for sale

Lobster clambake has evolved

Circa 1950, Cohasset listed 17 lobstermen, 1,751 lobster pots, 78,317 caught lobsters worth $15,831. Lobsters were not always considered a delicacy. Native Americans used lobsters to fertilize fields and as bait for more desirable fish. During the 1700s lobsters were considered food for the poor and imprisoned. Indentured servants became so tired of lobster that clauses were inserted into their contracts limiting the amount of weekly servings of lobster to three.

Today, however, a lobster clambake is a cause for celebration. The Cohasset Historical Society will celebrate the end of summer on Sept. 14 at Sandy Beach with a New England-style lobster clambake. Call 781-383-1434 or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com for reservations and information.

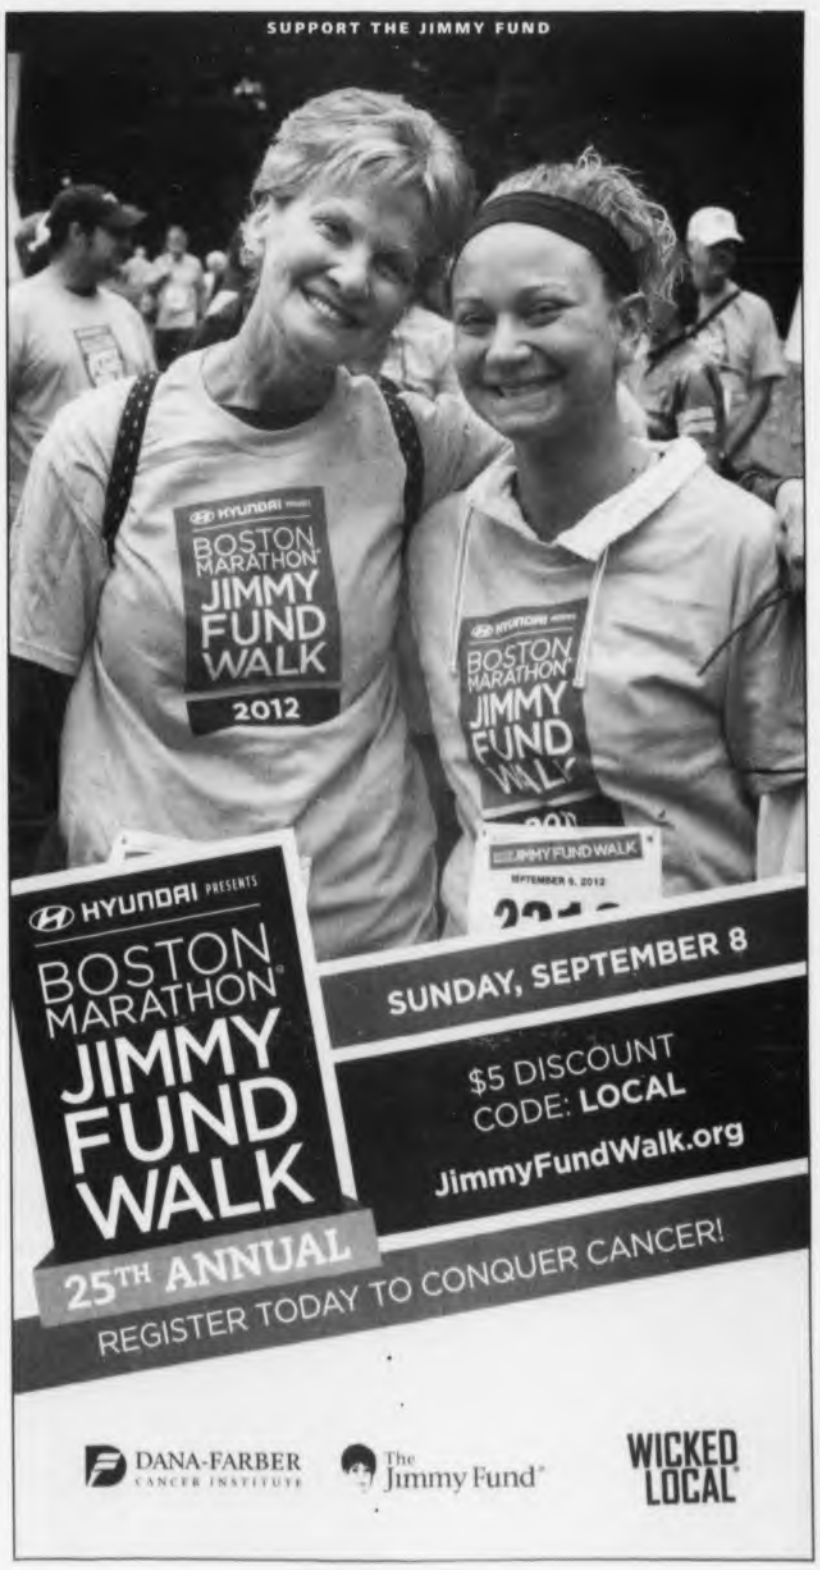
Dog event coming to Wompatuck

DoggiePawLooza is Standish Humane Society's major benefit and the donations received are an essential source of support for an active spay/neuter program and a no-kill cat shelter.

Standish Humane Society will hold its 19th annual "DoggiePawLooza" Fundraiser for Animals from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 15, at Wompatuck State Park on Union Street.

DoggiePawLooza is an event that has something for everyone: including an optional 3-mile walk through the state forest, live music, face-painting, animal sketches, great food, dog contests, animal behavior advice, dog agility and training demonstrations, raffles and much, much more. Also, we are proud to say that we have a number of great exhibitors and vendors. All dogs must be wearing a rabies vaccination tag and have up to date vaccinations.

This year's event is particularly noteworthy since Standish will be saluting service dogs. Service dogs make our communities a better place in which to live. Sweet "Lilly the Hero Pit-bull" who sustained serious injuries while saving her unconscious owner from the path of an oncoming train will also be back to join us again!



DoggiePawLooza is Standish Humane Society's major benefit and the donations received are an essential source of support for an active spay/neuter program and a no-kill cat shelter

Pet lovers who want to get involved can help by collecting donations, making a contribution at the event, organizing a walk team with friends and their dogs, or by participating in the events during the festival. People have the opportunity to fundraise in advance with either a pledge sheet or via our new First Giving fundraising page:

firstgiving.com/Standish-Humane/doggiepawlooza.

Standish Humane Society and other local and regional animal rescue groups will be on hand to discuss breed specific traits and adoption options. Standish is pleased to have The Animal Rescue League of Boston's state of the art mobile surgical unit, The Spay Waggin, on site for guided tours.

SciCoh to host fundraiser

Former Patriot Jermaine Wiggins to host

The Cohasset Mariner

SciCoh Football will be hosting its Second annual Tailgate Party and Fundraiser, Friday, Sept. 13 from 7:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. at the River Club.

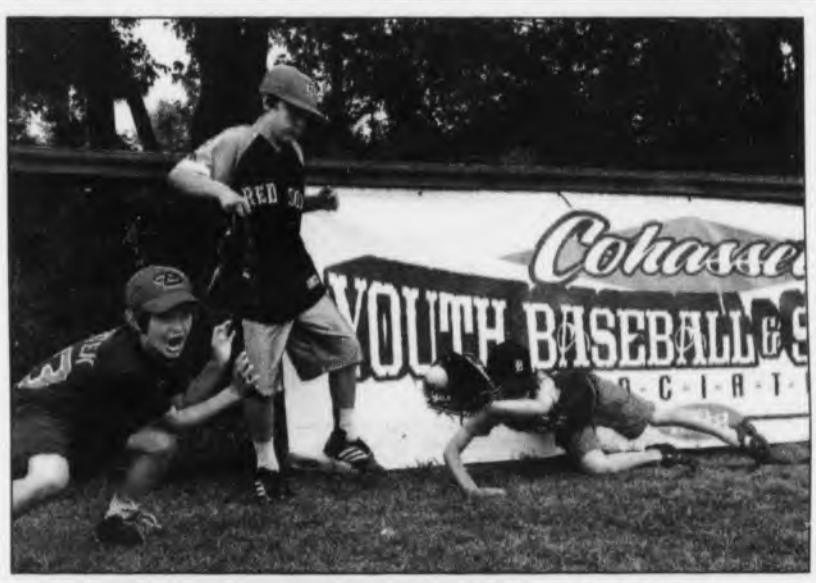
The event will be hosted by former Patriot and current NFL analyst and Sports Hub radio personality Jermaine Wiggins with special guest, Patriots star Vince Wilfork.

There will be tailgating themed appetizers, cash bar, door prizes, raffle, along with silent and live auctions.

Music will be provided by Elbow Room.

Tickets are $50 and can be purchased by emailing scicohfootball@gmail.com

The event is for adults only and proceeds go to the SciCoh Football and Cheerleading.



The emphasis for this year is equipment. The league is in need of equipment, especially new game-day pants, helmets and shoulder pads, which the league has just purchased.

SciCoh Youth Football and Cheerleading Organization is a non-profit 501 (C) (3) organization dedicated to serving the boys and girls of Scituate and Cohasset by providing a multi-division, tackle football league, encouraged by cheerleading squads for each participating team.

SciCoh is a member of the Old Colony Youth Football League, comprised of 22 other communities from South Eastern Mass.

Sports get back to work

After a quiet summer, the high school sports season is close on the horizon.

Teams have been working out together for a couple of weeks now, not including captains practices, and everyone will be ready for battle soon.

The football team will open Sept. 6 by hosting Norwell in the first game of a new season that features a new playoff system that should give the Skippers a better chance of qualifying due to the fact that more teams will be involved.

In the past, Cohasset would have to win the South Shore

GOLF NOTEBOOK

Come see Tiger and Phil

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

This week all the greats in golf converge on Norton.

The likes of Tiger Woods, Phil Michelson, et al, are coming to TPC Boston for the Deutsche Bank Championship, one of the key stops on the FedEx Cup Playoffs with more than $28 million at stake.

Yes, parking is off site. It's difficult to get there. But it is fun to watch these professionals do the things they do in person.

Sure, television offers a more comprehensive view of the tournament, but here you might catch something the camera misses, watching Tour professional in action and up close. It's not something I would like to do from sunrise to sunset or even for eight hours.

But it is worth the trouble of getting there.

Who is my bet to win the tournament? I couldn't care less.

Rooting for most PGA Tour players is like rooting for AT&T or Verizon. They all have plenty of money.

What is it going to take to win the Deutsche Bank Championship?

Webb Simpson, who won in 2011, thought about it and offered this insight:

"Well, I think if you look at most all the winners, I would say 90 percent of them will hit it a long way. I think one of the short hitters was Olin Browne, but I think that's before they redid the course. I'm not sure about that.

"But I'm not a long hitter. I was able to win in 2011 because I made tons of putts on the weekend, and that's really what you have to do on every golf course is you have to make a lot of putts.

"But in terms of TPC Boston, three par 5s, 7 is reachable if it's downwind. But I think you've got to take advantage of 2. You've got to take advantage of 4, the reachable par 4, and you have to take advantage of 18, because the back nine, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 are all very tough holes. I think the toughest on the golf course.

"So I think the guy that plays the par 5 well, plays No. 4 well, and can also keep the ball on the par 3s because they're not easy.

"But, again, a long hitter most of the time he hits it high up in the air with a lot of spin, and typically at TPC Boston, the greens get firm and fast on the weekend, and guys like Rory, he's able to control that spin. Tiger has played well there, Vijay are all the type of players to watch for in the tournament," he concluded.

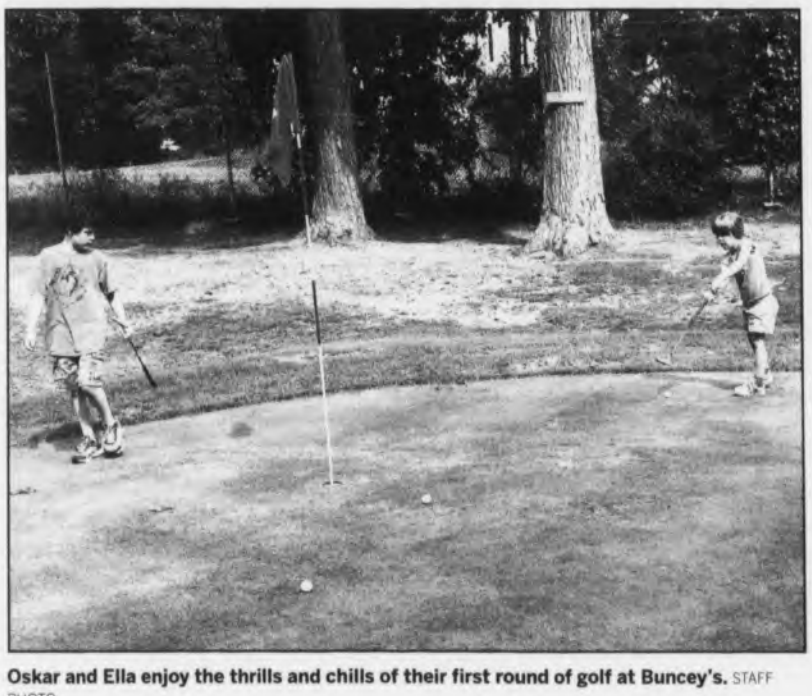
Who do I think fits the bill? Look for Tiger. He'll be the favorite. How can you not make the No. 1 player on Tour the oddsmakers' choice?

Entries closed

If you want to play in a Massachusetts Golf Association state championship, you'll have to wait until next year. Entries for all the tournaments have closed, most have been played and only two are remaining. What's left are the State Senior Amateur Championship, which will be played Sept. 10-11 at Haverhill CC; and the State Mid-Amateur Championship, which will be played at Marshfield CC on Sept. 23-25. Last week the MGA held several qualifying tournaments for the State Mid-Am, with one at Pembroke CC and another at Blue Hill CC in Canton. At Pembroke, Poquoy Brook's Rick Marcos earned medalist honors, fashioning a 1-under 70. He was chased to the clubhouse by David Pomarico of Poquoy Brook and Justin MacKinnon of Squirrel Run. They both carded 1-over par 72s. Dan Sullivan, who plays out of Mid-Am host-club Marshfield, was tied with Tim Johnson of Poquoy Brook at 2-over 73. Other qualifiers at Pembroke include Jeff Stewart of Marshfield (74), David Pierce of Halifax (74), Kevin Carroza of DW Field (74), Kevin McMenamy II of Back Nine Club (75), Michael O'Neil of Marshfield (75) and Derek Schug of Plymouth (75) . . . Meanwhile, at Blue Hill CC in Canton, Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea coasted to medalist honors with a 2-under 70. He had three birdies (hole numbers. 8, 9 and 18), all par-5s. Parziale, with a good finish at the Mid-Amateur, could overtake Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich in Plymouth for MGA Player of the Year honors. Clapp is the leader with 566 points and Parziale has 470. The winner of the Mid-Am gets 300 points. Clapp, along with John Hadges of Thorny Lea, Andrew DiRamio of North Hills, Scott Dabney of Dedham Country and Polo, Ryan Riley of Easton, Mike Willock of Cohasset and Andry Falcone and Dan Najarian of Marshfield are exempt in the Mid-Am championship . . . Golfing legend Jack Nicklaus will be in the area on Sept. 17 when he is honored by the Sports Museum at TD Boston Garden at the 12th annual Tradition celebration. Nicklaus is one of many stars, including Doug Flutie, Aly Raisman, Carlton Fisk, Derek Sanderson and Vince Wilfork, who will be honored. Please tell me why Nicklauis is being honored in New England? He hated playing here. Said it was the grass. His only notable event was making a hole-in-one during the US Junior at Taconic in 1956. Tickets are "only" $300 for reserve seating and $200 for the unwashed masses . . . This week the Women's Golf Association holds its Grace B. Keyes Cup at Ipswich CC on Aug. 28-29, it will probably determine who wins the state's women's Player of the Year. Going into the final major tournament of the year, Hatherly CC's Mary Mulcahy is the top point getter with 762.5 points. Two-time defending Keyes Cup Champion Tara Joy is next with 667.5 points. Blue Hill CC's Isabel Southard is third with 525 points. Whoever wins the Keyes Club gets 300 points. The Keyes Cup, which is essentially the State Stroke Play Championship, has been easy victories for Joy the last two years. She won at Oakley CC by three strokes in 2011 and last year, at Marshfield CC, a course she grew up playing on, she was a winner by four strokes. Ironically, neither year she won the Player of the Year honors. However, she is familiar with the championship. Joy was the WGAM's Player of the Year from 2005 to 2010 and was runner-up in 2011 and 2012.

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA



Atlantic COUNTRY CLUB

PAR		YDS
12		250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course. #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

TALKING GOLF

Last call at The Clubhouse

PAUL HARBER

Time is short; here are some stops on this year's bucket list

Time goes by too quickly.

It's not just that this is the final week of The Clubhouse, signifying that our summer is quickly coming to a close.

It's partly because last week we played Golf City, a/k/a Buncey's, the toy-course in West Bridgewater near the crossroads of route 106 and 28.

If you have youngsters too young for a real golf course, this is a terrific introduction to the game.

The holes measure 30 to 100 yards and it is a fun adventure for golfers from 99 to 5.

It was just perfect for my playing partners, Oskar, age 8, and Ella, age 5.

When you pay your greens fee, they give you a 9-iron and a colored ball and off you go.

It's been 30 years since we last visited this course, but it seems like yesterday when we introduced our daughter– Oskar and Ella's mother – to the game.

Thirty years has gone by in a flash.

Like summer, life is too short and it's time to close the door until next summer as we make room in the newspaper for the fall high school sports season. This page will be filled with the kick off of football and soccer, cross-country and all the other sports that make high school so much fun.

So, while the weather is still golf worthy, get out there and don't miss a round.

You don't have that much time left to enjoy all of the great experiences that golf has to offer in the region.

Make a bucket list today and do your best to enjoy every moment, every drive and every putt, even if it is the third or fourth on a particular hole.

If you haven't made that winding drive up to the clubhouse at Granite Links in Quincy, you can't call yourself a golfer. If you haven't peered off the elevated seventh tee at the Milton nine, with the majestic skyline in front of your, you've missed something in your life. It is difficult to enjoy because your heart will be set on attempting to drive the short-par 4.

If you have the chance to play White Cliffs in Plymouth, if only once, take it. Yes, I know it is an executive course and you might not think it deserves your attention. But it will surprise you. It might be one of the most underrated courses you will find in the area. My favorite shot there is one that doesn't count. While waiting on the 18th tee, I take an old ball from the bag, aim out at the Atlantic Ocean and launch a drive off the cliff into the waves down below. The ball has more hang time than a Zoltan Mesko punt.

Speaking of under rated courses, overlooked by many is Atlantic Country Club in Plymouth. So many golfing friends I know come off the 18th green impressed. It may be overshadowed by high end and widely publicized local courses, but here you need to hit every club in your bag and it is the best bang for your buck you will find anywhere in the region.

If you are a golfer, you have to make your way to Norton this week to watch the best professionals in the world at the Deutsche Bank Championship.

Flashing signage is already stationed on Route 95 and Route 495 beckoning you to off-site parking.

Yes, Tiger and Phil will be there, trying to win the Fed Ex series championship. Problem is there aren't many great viewing areas. On the front nine, between the fifth and seventh greens, is one of the best areas to view the action. The fifth has a three-tiered green that causes plenty of heartache. Fronting the seventh green is what tournament officials call "our equivalent to Pine Valley's Hell's Half Acre." And, on the sixth tee, you can watch some booming drives on the 465-yard par 4.

After all the top players complete those holes, go home and watch the finish on TV. You'll beat the traffic and TV offers better views of all the action than anywhere on the back nine.

I could go on and on and fill 10 pages of great golfing opportunities in the region. We are really blessed.

There are so many courses to play, tee shots to thrill over and putts to sink.

Get our there before the first snow, which is coming faster than you think. There are only 123 or so shopping days until Christmas.

Got to run out... don't want to be late for my tee time.

See you next summer.

Whalers' Nason at his best again

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Whalers of the South Coastal Hockey League's Legends Div. have relied on their goalie Dan Nason for three titles since 2007.

Nason was at his best in the team's opening game of the season as he stopped 21 shots, which included three breakaways and six point blank shots in a 6-4 win over the Toros.

Hanover's Jim Toner scored two goals in the span of 57 seconds to break a 4-4 tie and give the Whalers the winning margin.

Duxbury's Kevin Mackin, who scored a goal for the Whalers in a three goal second period, set up both Toner goals. John Maguire of Norwell scored a goal and set up Mackin's goal in a 17 second span of time in the middle period.

Skip Tufts of Sciutate also scored in the second period for the Whalers who led 3-1 after two periods and Mike Verrochi of Norwell had a goal in the third period to give his team a 4-3 lead.

Pembroke's Peter Cleary scored the first goal of the game for the Toros. Paul Brinkman added a goal and an assist. Ray Degaust and Dave Currier both scored a goal in the third period to tie the game, 3-3 and 4-4 respectively.

Bob McCabe scored two goals to lead the Canadiens to a 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings.

Bob Morrissey and Steve Berlo added a goal each and Clem Fillion had two assists for the Canadiens.

League just to qualify for playoffs.

In a league that regularly has powerhouse teams, two losses could mean sitting on the sidelines at playoff time. In fact, there have been times in recent years when one loss was enough for elimination.

The changes squeeze together early season league and non-league schedules to fit playoff games in before Thanksgiving, and if a team makes it and is eliminated, the rest of the schedule will be played against other teams in the same division that are out of the playoffs.

I personally like the changes for the fact that in the past few seasons I have seen three of the four teams I cover eliminated with one league loss.

Yes the old way rewards perfection, or near perfection, but almost always leaves deserving teams out of the mix.

In other MIAA sports, all it takes is a .500 record to get in, and the Sullivan Rule can give teams with losing records playoff invitations based on games against teams in their own division.

It's time football joined the party.

It's good to see it happen, the same way it will be good to see more of a real playoff in college football.

College football, which is one of my favorites, still irks me with the way champions are determined through polls.

Even with the BCS finals, getting those teams right has been brutal.

I like a few of the new rules that cover targeting opposing players. The penalties may be a little steep however, if there is no type of appeal process and calls are left to referees on the field with no video assist later.

Still, the fact that safety is a bigger factor is probably a good thing.

I'm sure there will be players and some coaches who feel that taking out the huge hits is a bad thing, but I wonder what they might think if they were taken out on a dirty hit.

I thought of that yesterday when I was coaching my flag football team in some passing drills and a couple of kids caught the ball and were shying away waiting for hits.

When I reminded them that there is no hitting, the balls stayed in their hands longer.

I may have coined a new term at that practice when I apologized for errant throws by telling the kids "Sorry, I Tebowed that one." Oops.

On that thought, why is Tebow still on the roster?

He can run against third string defenses, but can't throw. Watching him in the first preseason game made me turn the channel and put on a Battlestar Galactica DVD.

Great show by the way. I'm into the fourth season and it is even better watching it together than it was when it ran originally.

I highly recommend it.

To all athletes, here's to a great season.

Coaches, parents, players, here's another plea to send in your stories, and your scores.

I'd love to get everyone in the paper this season, and it all starts with you.

Enjoy. So say we all.

ANNUAL MDA TELETHON PARTY

Weekend fun for great cause

Event is Sept. 1 and 2

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

A dance-a-thon, live music, a huge cookout, $5 buzz cuts, raffles, delicious hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, a comedian appearance, an ice cream party, and much more will add up to Labor Day Weekend fun for a good cause at the 37th Annual Tolman MDA (Muscular Dystrophy Association) Telethon Party.

The popular "Show of Strength" event has raised more than half a million dollars to date. All proceeds will benefit the MDA — including research and the many patient services the Association provides — in memory of Richard Berberian, Richard Berberian, Jr., Brian White, John Fasci, Jr., Mattie Stepanek, and Mary Cronin.

"We lost two great friends and supporters of our Telethon event recently," Jay Tolman said. "Brian White who grew up in Hingham and supported our fight to end Muscular Dystrophy for more than 30 years, and Richard Berberian, formerly of Hingham. Joan and Richard Berberian lost a son to Duchene Muscular Dystrophy and have been major supporters of our event and MDA for more than 30 years."

This year the party will not run the usual 24 hours, but planned activities, including new features, will ensure the event is as much fun as ever, spread as it is over two days. The party coincides with the national MDA fundraiser, "MDA Show of Strength."

Cohasset resident Jay Tolman, who grew up in Hingham, started the event in his family's backyard in the 1970s.

It eventually outgrew that venue and was moved to the Hingham Community Center, where it was based for many years.

The party has been held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., for the past three years and will be hosted there again this year.

"It's hard to believe that another year has flown by," Tolman said. "Every year I think back to a handful of friends staying up for 24 hours to watch the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon and to raise a few dollars to help fight Muscular Dystrophy – that was 36 years ago!"

Supporters come from near and far to make donations and to show their support for the cause. Friendships are renewed every year, and new ones are formed.

Tolman's wife, Jodi, and their three children, Chloe, Jack, and Charlie, have been and continue to be among the event's biggest supporters. His father, John, 92, is up from Venice, Florida, "ready to go and excited about the annual reunion," Tolman said.

Chloe is busy making special artwork to sell to benefit MDA. Charlie will travel from New York to attend, and Jodi and Jack are "working like crazy to help to make this year's MDA Telethon event the best ever," Tolman said.

"Thanks to the many people who have supported the cause over the years advancements continue to be made as the MDA searches for therapies and the cures for 40 neuromuscular diseases such as Duchene and ALS (Lou Gehrig's disease)," Tolman said. "Muscular Dystrophy takes away things that most of us take for granted. Our annual event is an opportunity to help in the fight against this disease. One of the most important things we can give is hope."

"Muscular Dystrophy takes away things that most of us take for granted. Our annual event is an opportunity to help in the fight against this disease. One of the most important things we can give is hope."
Jay Tolman

Tolman expressed appreciation for all supporters of the event, including Stop & Shop "for its generous support to help sponsor this year's event" and to Congregation Sha'aray Shalom "for providing a fantastic venue for our gathering."

The entire Hingham and South Shore Community and beyond is invited to participate in this fund-raising event.

"Without the help and support of our family and Telethon Team this event could not continue," Tolman said. "The outpouring of support from the community is amazing."

For schedule of events, see page one.

For more information or to make a donation, visit tolmantelethon.com or send a tax-deductible contribution to: MDA Telethon, 3 Forest Circle, Cohasset, MA 02025, made payable to: M.D.A./Muscular Dystrophy Association. Or stop by the party and throw a donation into the famous fishbowl. All contributions are gratefully received. (No telephone calls asking for donations are made during the Hingham event.) All proceeds benefit the MDA.

Farmers market news

Here's what's happening next week.

As summer fades into fall, some familiar favorites are coming back into season. Perhaps one of the yummiest root vegetables you'll be eating all autumn and winter long will soon be available at the farmers market.

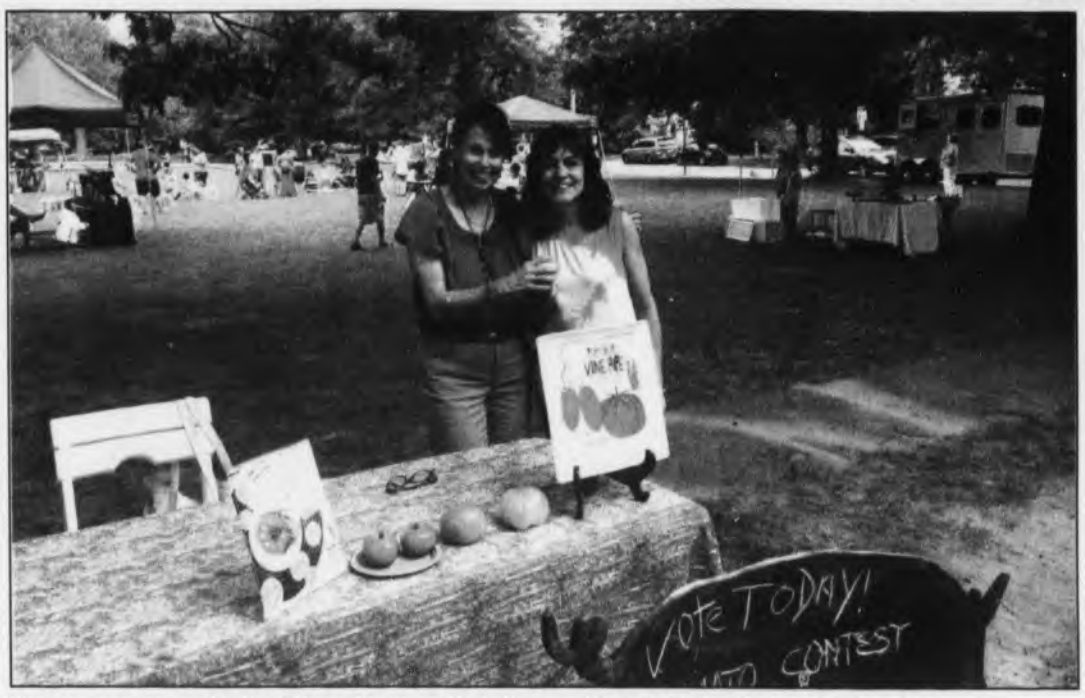
One of the most popular and familiar vegetables is the sweet, delicious, crispy carrot. Once only of the orange color, they now appear in dark red, bright yellow, purple and white. Give these rainbow carrots a try!

Carrots will be available through October at our market. Market patrons can stock up for the fall months and keep them refrigerated. Most varieties will keep for several months. To store them properly, first remove the tops to prevent moisture loss, wash and dry well, then place them in a plastic bag until ready to use.

Carrots are a rich source of beta-carotene, an antioxidant used by the body to make Vitamin A. Beta-carotene helps boost the immune system and is beneficial to the skin.

Carrots are high in fiber and low in sodium and calories.

Carrot trivia



- It is said that the cultivated and edible carrot dates back about 5,000 years ago, when the purple carrot was found growing in the area now known as Afghanistan.
- In Massachusetts, carrots were first grown in the 1620s.
- The heaviest carrot recorded (1998) weighed almost 19 pounds.
- The longest carrot recorded (2007) measured 19 feet, two inches!

Coming attractions

- Behavioral expert and Renaissance Cooking co-owner Julia Swartz will give a talk on "Food and Mood: Why Eat Local" on Thursday, Sept. 19 at 4 p.m.
- The Pet Parade marches around the Cohasset Common on Thursday, Sept. 26, starting at 4 p.m., with judging by professional dog trainer Terry Haskins. Prizes will be awarded!

Stay tuned for details on a Decorated Pumpkin Contest and Harvest Day!

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. through October 17. For more information, visit: cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

Winners were crowned in the Cohasset Farmers Market's annual Tomato Contest last week (Thursday, Aug. 22). Simple Roasted Carrots Makes 8 servings (recipe adapted from Gourmet, December 2008).

Ingredients:
- 3 pounds carrots (peeled or unpeeled, carrots about 5 inches long, tops trimmed to 1 inch)
- 2 Tbsp. olive oil
- Salt and pepper

Instructions:
- Preheat oven to 500 F with rack in lower third.
- Toss carrots with oil, ½ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper and spread out in a large 4-sided sheet pan. Roast 20 minutes. Reduce oven to 325 F and roast, stirring occasionally, until carrots are browned and tender, about 25 minutes more.

BRIEFLY

GOP cookout

Cohasset Republican Town Committee will host a cookout from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 8, at Lou Harvey's home, 465 King St.. Tickets are $20 per person; pay at the picnic.

Attendees can celebrate successes, laugh with friends, eat hot dogs and more, toast candidates at a cash bar and play Crazy Ray's Trivia for cash.

Invited guests include: State Sen. Robert Hedlund, state Rep. Geoff Diehl, state Rep. Shauna O'Connell, state GOP Party Chairman Kirsten Hughes, National Committeewoman Chanel Prunier, Holly Robichaud and Stephen Coulter, spearheading the gas tax rollback petition.

Language immersion programs promote fluency

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

We all know just how important it is to be well versed in English but nowadays, it's equally as important to know a second language. More and more schools are realizing just that and instituting foreign language programs designed specifically for young children to become fluent in a second language. Language immersion programs offer students the opportunity to delve right into learning a chosen second language by speaking fluently in that language in a classroom setting.

Students who participate in an immersion program will learn fluency in a second and/or third language while being taught courses in history, math, science, art and music. When people become fluent in a second language, they are able to speak and think in both their native language as well as the second language. Teachers are able to achieve fluency through the use of visual techniques, body language and facial expressions – just how they were able to learn their primary language.

Milton Public Schools offers a French immersion program for students beginning in grade one and continuing up through their senior year in high school. But throughout the South Shore, parents have been bringing their children to the Su Escuela Language Academy in Hingham.

Elementary Spanish Language Arts teacher Paz Mosqueira works with first-grader Hope Huffman and second-grader Eric Byrne on Spanish reading skills at Su Escuela Language Academy in Hingham. PHOTO COURTESY OF SU ESCUELA LANGUAGE ACADEMY

In the kindergarten through fifth-grade program, the academy provides a curriculum that combines a Spanish curriculum with the Massachusetts state standards. Students in kindergarten and first grade are taught 80 percent in Spanish and 20 percent in English. As the kids get older, the English instruction is increased. By the time they reach fifth grade, English instruction is at 80 percent and Spanish at 20 percent as the students have achieved fluency.

Children starting at age 15 months can be placed into full Spanish and Mandarin immersion programs at Su Escuela, where they will begin talking in both languages within three to four months.

"I think parents are realizing how important it is for their kid's future to have them be able to speak a second or third language," said Sandra Baldeon, founder of Su Escuela, which offers both group and private classes. "Children who learn another language are typically early readers and have better math skills, as well. I think as they get older, it will also help them in college and in the workplace."

The K-12 full immersion after-school program offered at Su Escuela requires students to attend once or twice a week where they will speak only the select language in the class.

"That's the only way you can learn a second language," Baldeon said. "You really have to be forced to learn the language, which is why we use it in the classroom fluently. Immersion can be done at any age but you will get an accent if you are taught it later on in life. If you have an immersion program at a young age, you won't have an accent."

The language academy has about 250 students each year sign up for the immersion program, ranging in age from 15 months all the way to adulthood. Also offered are enrichment programs, including summer programs and vacation activities, that include everything from music, arts and crafts, hands-on projects and story time to language enrichment games, math, reading and writing.

"When a child learns a word, they copy the sounds and repeat what they hear," Baldeon said. "At 15 months old, they repeat the sounds and understand the meaning associated with the word. When you get older, there are different factors that make learning a second language difficult. Some people don't want to say a word because it sounds funny or they get shy speaking in front of other people. The biggest difference between kids and adults is that kids just want to communicate with you so it's easy to capture a second or third language at such a young age. Kids want to learn and want you to teach them. When they are older, they already have a language of their own established. They realize they are coming to a Spanish school and know they are learning a second language. The younger you start, the easier it is to get fluency."

The Boston Language Institute also offers immersion programs at its Kenmore Square location in Arabic, Russian, French, Mandarin, Italian, German, Spanish, Portuguese and Japanese.

Heading to kindergarten

What parents can do to ease the transition

Beginning kindergarten can be both an exciting and scary transition for your child, as well as the family as a whole. Consider these important factors from the staff at Best Friends Preschool in Wareham when preparing your family for this special milestone:

Social confidence

If your child doesn't have experience in a group setting, try to attend local children's events and activities in the weeks before school starts. This will help your child understand the concepts of sharing and taking turns. It will also reinforce patience and tolerance to differences. To further your child's social competence, try role-playing different situations that may occur at school. This might include how to initiate play or handle conflict.

Separation anxiety

Your child should be comfortable being away from you for several hours at a time. If your child still shows sighs of separation anxiety, start taking time away from each other. Begin with only a few hours at a time. Let your child describe his/her experiences without you. Emphasize the positive experiences. Gradually increase your time apart until your child is comfortable with the length of a school day.

Respect for authority

Leaving your child in another adult's care will also help develop a comfort in following and respecting another adult's authority. Your School carpools

Reduce your time on the road

Yellow buses are synonymous with school. But in some neighborhoods, budget cuts have forced school districts to limit bus service for students. In an effort to transport youngsters to school more efficiently, parents often band together to form carpools. Those who are new to the area or school may not know where to turn to team up with other like-minded parents.

Ridesharing is an effective way to get children to and from school and divide the responsibilities among parents. Carpooling reduces vehicular congestion in and around the school, cuts down on car emissions in the atmosphere and also helps multiple families save time. Furthermore, carpooling can offset fuel costs and cut down on wear and tear on a vehicle for those parents who live far away from their kids' schools.

Choosing carpoolers

Parents who live nearest to you are the most likely choices for carpoolers. Most schools funnel children from specific areas into one school, so look for parents of school-aged youngsters in the immediate vicinity of your home.

Many school communities now have an online presence through social media, and this can make finding people to share carpooling responsibilities with that much easier. Keep in mind that if you are new to the school and/or community, it could take more time to establish yourself as a reliable and safe driver among other parents. Remember, when it comes to the safety of their children, many parents are not quick to let them hop into the car with just anyone. The same principle exists when you are looking for a carpool. You'll want to develop a relationship with the parents prior to the start of the carpool to ensure you feel comfortable with your child riding along with this person.

Establish a schedule

Carpooling will blend the schedules of a few different families together. It is important to map out a schedule so that all days of the week are covered. There should be a contingency plan should one driver not be able to carpool that day due to illness or other commitments.

Carpooling safety

Even if you are close friends with someone who will be ridesharing, you will want to be certain of their driving skills prior to their driving your kids to school. All parents involved in the carpool should bring their safety concerns and rules to the table to be sure everyone has the same priorities. The size of vehicles will play a role in carpooling safety. Each child should have ample room to sit and his or her own seat belt. If booster or car seats are still required, the car should fit the seats comfortably so that all passengers have the correct safety equipment. No child should be allowed to ride unsecured, in the front seat under the required age by law or in the rear cargo area of a sport utility vehicle.

Sharing the responsibilities of transporting children to school and extracurricular activities saves families time and money. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

Establish a payment arrangement

In most school carpooling situations the amount of fuel used is nominal. However, those who do spend a good deal of money on gas may want to establish a way of sharing the costs associated with the carpool. Taking turns driving the kids to school usually divides the cost fairly. Some parents prefer to give a gift at the end of the school year to the parent who did the bulk of the driving. Donations to the primary driver also can offset any expenses.

Carpooling is a good method of transporting children to school when buses are not available. A carpool reduces the number of cars on the road and also helps conserve time and resources among several different households.

KINDERGARTEN

child should understand that when other adults are in charge, their rules, directions and expectations might be different.

Memorize personal and school information

Your child should be comfortable reciting his/her first and last name, age, address, birth date and phone number. New school-related information should also be memorized, including your child's teacher, classroom number, school bus number and school lunch pin. Stress that this information should only be shared with safety officers and schoolteachers as needed. Adapt the information to a familiar melody to help with retention.

Develop self-awareness and self-help skills

Train your child to take care of his/her belongings. A child that routinely puts his toys and shoes away at home will ease in to a similar routine at school. When self-help skills, such as buttoning pants, dressing oneself and bathroom confidence are fully developed, they will not be a source of anxiety at school.

Familiarity with a school setting

Help your child understand the school environment, including the classroom, cafeteria, playground and school bus. Try to take a tour of the school, read school-themed picture books, play on the school playground and familiarize your child with the bus stop and bus stop safety. Be sure to show your child exactly where you will be at drop-off time.

Create a routine

Begin bedtime and morning routines at least one week in advance. This will set your child's internal clock, and help develop comfort and familiarity with the new schedule.

Make the first day cheerful, not tearful

Although this is a bittersweet moment for parents, keep it positive. Don't express any negative emotions toward the experience when your child is present. Hearing that you are worried, or upset that he/she is growing up, will only create feelings of fear, confusion and shame. Validate your child's emotions by expressing empathy, but focus on the excitement and confidence that you have in your new kindergartner.

The story of you

Tips for a memorable admissions essay

By NextStepU.com

For some students, the prospect of writing the college admission essay is so frightening that they wait until the night before deadline. Others are so confident in their application that they consider the college admission essay extra credit. The admissions process reveals that both sides are missing the point.

Without the essay, a selection committee would have to arbitrarily choose between two (or 200) nearly identical candidates. Unlike every other means of evaluation, the college admission essay is not multiple choice, it is not timed, and it does not require auditions or tryouts. You can rewrite it hundreds of times and ask everyone you know to read it. Therefore, there is no excuse for submitting a college admission essay that is not your best possible effort.

Many students put off writing this all-important statement of self. They worry about bragging, or they try extra hard to sound intelligent. Consequently, they fill their essay with statements of their achievements, wisdom and the profound lessons they have learned. In trying to create this exaggerated image, many students do not realize that every other applicant is attempting the same thing.

Instead of playing along with the crowd, a successful essay stands apart. It tells a unique story true to the writer; one that makes the admissions officer like and remember the applicant.

Topic selection

Many students obsess over their choice of topic. Your choice of topic does not matter as much as your approach. Almost any topic can work if it's tackled in the right way.

In most cases, an admissions officer is especially curious how you think and feel about a topic and what this says about your creativity, sophistication and personality.

However, some essay topics never work. Hopeless essays are ones that betray a student's lack of perspective. Nobody likes a 17-year-old who cannot imagine the world beyond high school.

On the flip side, nobody appreciates 17-year-olds who think they know everything. A 700-word essay was not meant to solve urban poverty or discuss the great themes of life and love. Likewise, you should steer clear of sounding preachy, for instance when condemning the evils of alcohol, eating meat or regulating the sale of firearms. An essay should never risk offending the reader's sensibilities or beliefs.

That said, many possible topics remain, although some are used more often than others. It is common to read of a student's immigration to America, big loss in the soccer playoffs or admiration of her father.

Choosing one of these essay mainstays means working extra hard to make it special. It means concentrating on the details of a story, the facts that pertain only to you, to make the story unique and revealing. This goes for even the most unusual subjects.

Regardless of how original the topic, the essay needs to present authentic, vivid details of your life in order to implant itself in the reader's mind and convey something memorable about yourself.

Tell a story

Your essay will succeed if it tells a good story. Too often, an essay will fizzle into a series of statements that "tell" rather than "show" the likeable traits of the writer. Some students wrongfully assume that the reader will not "get it" if they do not spell out their main arguments.

As a result, the essay succumbs to the usual clichés: the value of hard work and perseverance, learning to make a difference, not taking loved ones for granted, dreams coming true or learning from mistakes. These statements are fine if used minimally, but the best essays do not use them at all. The worst essays are composed entirely of such statements.

Use details

You should allow the details of the story to make the statement for you. An example helps elucidate the difference. A mediocre essay might say: "I developed a new compassion for those with disabilities." A better essay says: "Whenever I had the chance to help a disabled person, I did so happily." However, an excellent essay says: "The next time Mrs. Cooper asked me to help her across the street, I smiled and immediately took her arm." The first example provides no detail, the second example is still only hypothetical, but the final example evokes a vivid image of something that actually happened, thus placing the reader in the experience of the applicant. Of course, this technique works only insofar as it highlights the qualities of the writer. These larger points should always lurk in the back of your mind. Once a good story is written, any details that distract your overarching qualities should be removed.

Revise, revise, revise

In order to bring these points to the surface, feedback plays a crucial role. You should give drafts to a variety of readers: relatives, friends, teachers and, if possible, to an experienced editor. Test readers should give their first, unadulterated opinion of the piece, answering questions such as: What is this essay about? What does it say about the applicant? Is the essay memorable? Since there is no predicting who among the admissions staff will read the essay, any early feedback helps. The great value of a second opinion — or 12th, as the case may be — means the essay has many chances at improvement. Make your essay reflect your personality and circumstances in as flattering and detailed a way as possible.

Get to know the FAFSA, scholarship process

By NextStepU.com

Mom and dad don't have enough. You don't have enough, either. And that moneybags uncle of your dreams never quite materialized. How are you going to foot your college bills?

You've probably heard of several forms of it, but exactly what is financial aid, and how can you get it? Here are a few frequently asked questions and answers.

Q: What is FAFSASA, and why does it matter?

A: The only way you can qualify for federal scholarship, grant or loan money is to fill out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid first. If you don't fill out the FAFSA, you can kiss any government-given financial aid goodbye.

If you're a senior, complete the FAFSA as soon after Jan. 1 as you can. It helps to have done your taxes before filling out a FAFSA. But if you're eager to get the ball rolling sooner than Mom will finish her tax return, you can estimate your family's income, taxes and investments using last year's tax data. You'll get a chance to make changes later on the student aid report, which will be mailed to you after you turn in the FAFSA.

Q: What is FAFSA 's function?

A: The FAFSA determines your expected family contribution, the amount that determines how much your family can put toward your education. If your EFC is below a certain amount, you'll be entitled to federal grants to help cover your school's cost of attendance. A school's COA is more than tuition, room and board; it includes the average you'll spend on books, supplies, personal expenses and transportation. College financial-aid officers subtract your EFC from the COA to determine your financial need. They try to meet your financial need by offering you grants, scholarships, loans and work-study.

Q: What is financial aid, and what's the difference between loans, scholarships, grants and work-study?

A: Grants and scholarships are money that you don't have to pay back. A loan is money that you borrow from the government or a bank. You have to pay this money back with interest. Some loans require that you start repaying while you're still in school, while some loans will start sending you bills only after you leave school.

Work-study is a type of financial aid through which your college gives you the go-ahead to find a job on campus. You can earn up to your awarded amount during the year. You'll get a paycheck, just as if you were working off campus. It's up to you to put that money toward your school expenses.

Q: I have a 4.0 GPA . Should I wait to see what colleges come to me with scholarships before approaching any schools?

A: No! You are responsible for letting colleges know you're interested in them and for getting financial aid. Don't wait for colleges or scholarships to come to you.

Some colleges and universities have merit-based grant money you'll receive on the basis of your high school grades, SAT or ACT scores. But don't rely on a college to write you a full ride just because you're smart. Check with your religious organizations, volunteer groups, music groups, ethnic communities, clubs and schools for private, merit-based scholarships. You may have to write a lot of essays, but top students are strong candidates, and you'll be thankful for the cash.

FAFSA tips

* Guys, you have to be registered with Selective Service to be eligible for federal student aid. If you aren't yet 18, check the box on the FAFSA and they'll register you on your birthday.

* You can pick up a FAFSA in your guidance counselor's office or at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

* Don't freak out when you see the FAFSA. Half the package is instructions and worksheets. There are only four pages you'll have to send in. Don't bother paying someone else to do your FAFSA for you; you can handle it yourself.

* Print in capital letters. Don't include cents when writing dollar amounts. Send the originals, but keep a copy of the forms for your files. You'll have to pick which schools you want to receive your FAFSA info. Find the school codes by calling a financial-aid office, asking your guidance counselor, checking at the public library or searching www.fafsa.ed.gov.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Alfred J. Mavilia

Alfred J. Mavilia

HINGHAM – Alfred J. Mavilia, of Hingham, formerly of Weymouth and Braintree, died Aug. 24, 2013.

Alfred was a WWII Veteran of the United States Navy. After the war he joined A&P Supermarkets where he spent his career, retiring in 2000 as Store Manager.

Since he worked six days a week, Alfred had a special love of Sundays. It usually started out early either fishing with his father-in-law or tending to his yard, cigar in hand and always ended with the family enjoying his famous BBQ dinners. His family also enjoyed summers in Hull at their beach house.

His wife Grace Anne suffered from difficult health at an early age and Alfred was always there for her. His care and devotion to his wife will never be forgotten. He will be remembered as a gentleman by all those who had the privilege of knowing him.

Beloved husband of the late Grace Anne (Tricomi) Mavilia. Loving father of Richard and his wife Andrea of Hull, Ronald and his wife Susan of Cohasset, David of Cohasset, and Paul and Dennis Shaw of Hanover. Brother of the late Anthony and Nicholas Mavilia. Grandfather of Stephen, Mariana, Michaela, David, Sarah, Caitlin and Sean. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were on Tuesday< Aug. 27, from 4 - 8 p.m. in the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, 21 Emerald St. (off Central St.), Hingham. A funeral service was celebrated on Wednesday, Aug. 28, at 10:30 a.m. in the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, Hingham. Burial in St. Mary's Cemetery, Randolph.

Donations in memory of Alfred may be made to Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, MA 02043.

See www.Keohane.com or call 1-800-Keohane for directions and online condolences.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 9, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With your Arian charm quotient at an almost all-time high this week, plus all the facts to back you up, you just might win over the last doubters to your proposal.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might be in line for that job change you applied for. But be advised that you could be called on to defend your qualifications against supporters of other applicants.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Creating a new approach to an old idea is one way to get beyond that workplace impasse. No such problems in your personal life, where things continue to flow smoothly.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be more forthcoming about your feelings concerning a proposed change either in your workplace or in your personal life. Your opinions are valuable. Don't keep them hidden.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A changing situation in your life needs more patience than you appear to be willing to offer. Allowing it to develop at its own pace is the wisest course you can take at this time.

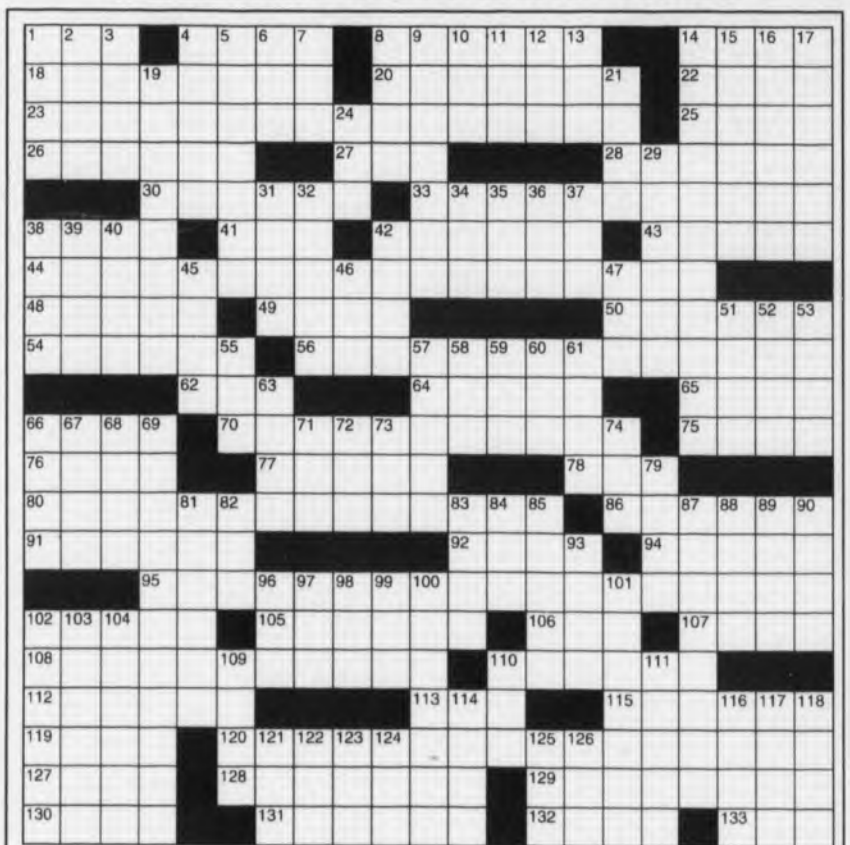
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With more stability in your life — on both personal and professional levels — this could be a good time to strengthen relationships with both friends and colleagues.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) People have always relied on your integrity not only to get the job done, but to get it done right. So don't be pressured by anyone into cutting corners to save time.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While others might get rattled over unexpected changes, your ability to adapt calmly and competently helps you make a positive impression during a crucial period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A changing environment might be daunting for some, but the adventurous Sagittarian takes it all in stride. A friend from the past could awaken some meaningful memories.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) With your self-assurance rising to full strength, the bold Goat should feel confident about opening up to new ventures as well as new relationships.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Reaching out to someone who has been unkind to you might not be easy. But in the long run it will prove to have been the right thing to do. A friend offers moral support.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your keen insight once again helps you work through a seemingly insoluble problem in your workplace. The weekend offers a good chance to develop new relationships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

UPDATE

Police chief appointment postponed

Local citizen group starts petition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As the Acting Town Manager has made it clear that he intends to appoint Acting Chief William Quigley as Cohasset's next police chief, a group of citizens has launched a campaign urging the Board of Selectmen to approve the appointment.

Acting Chief Quigley has worked in the Cohasset Police Department since 1995, starting as Animal Control Officer. He was promoted to Sergeant in 2002 and then Lieutenant in 2007, appointed as Deputy Chief in December 2011 and appointed Acting Chief in May 2012. He holds an Associate's in Criminal Justice from Quincy College and expects to receive his Bachelor's in Criminal Justice in Dec. 2013.

The appointing of department head positions, including police and fire chiefs, lies with the town manager per Cohasset's Town Manager Act. The selectmen have veto power for up to 15 days after an appointment has been made.

So far, it seems that a majority of the board would vote against Milanoski's proposed appointment. Selectmen chair Fred Koed has said publicly that he wants a search conducted. Selectmen Karen Quigley (no relation to Acting Chief Quigley) and Martha Gjesteby have both said that they want to wait until a permanent town manager is hired, and let that person make the appointment.

The board voted 3-2 in June to stop the police chief search that had been launched in February, disapproving of Milanoski's process. Cohasset has been without a permanent chief since former Police Chief Mark DeLuca was suspended in May 2012; his contract with the town ended in January 2013.

Deer Hill to unveil new playground

Volunteers pitch in to make it possible

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

School started this week, but the Deer Hill playground is roped off. Not to worry — the new playground, installed over the summer, should be ready to go by Monday.

Volunteers pitched in over Labor Day weekend to spread woodchips and get the playground ready to be played on.

"The volunteers were very helpful," said Ralph Tulio, who has helped to oversee the project. "It's looking like a playground now."

Franchesca Arnold, who also helped head up the project, said that it's brought out the Cohasset community.

"It's been such a wonderful community-supported project," said Arnold. "Over the rainy Labor Day weekend, to have all these parents and kids come out, and really spend hours doing this on a restrictive timeline... There was not a huge workforce, but those who came really rolled up their sleeves, and it was just wonderful to see."

Deer Hill's new playground has been a labor of love by the school's PSO and parent volunteers. The PSO spearheaded the project, holding community fundraisers to pay for the playground, including a basketball event and selling bricks families could put their names on that would become part of the playground.

Community Preservation Committee funds also helped make the playground possible. The PSO playground committee approached the CPC earlier this year to have the playground project placed on the Town Meeting warrant. The April 2013 Town Meeting approved the project unanimously. Selectmen deem appointment process unfair

edale@wickedlocal.com

It's that time of year again — time for town board, committee, and commission appointments and reappointments. A fairly routine agenda item for the Board of Selectmen at the start of each fiscal year, this year's appointments have caused a bit of controversy, starting with the 3-2 vote at the August 20 selectmen meeting to unseat Cable Advisory Board treasurer Paul Carlson. (Carlson was reappointed on a temporary basis so that the cable board, which is also a non-profit business, can continue paying its bills.)

This week, the controversy laid not with the selectmen but with the Acting Town Manager's recommended appointments to the Conservation Commission. Per Cohasset's Town Manager Act, appointments to the permitting board fall under the town manager's purview with the selectmen voting to accept or reject appointments.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski brought two Con Com candidates forward for the selectmen's consideration: Patrice Vogelman of Black Rock Road and William Henry of North Main Street. Henry has served an associate commissioner for the past year and was reapplying for his position.

Henry is a veterinary surgeon and has lived in town for over 40 years. Last year, Henry beat out four other citizens who submitted letters of interest in joining the Con Com. Attorney Patrick Kennedy, Jerusalem Road, was also appointed to an associate member position last year; he was made a full voting member this year, leaving one associate seat vacant.

Milanoski selected Vogelman, a senior manager at

POLICE BEAT

Recent rash of mailbox vandalism

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Mailboxes

Police have been conducting extra patrols in response to three different incidents last week involving mailboxes being knocked off their posts. Two incidents were reported from different Tad Lane addresses and the other from Old Coach Road. In one of the Tad Lane incidents, the mailbox, which had a $200 check inside, was pulled out of the ground. It was later located in the woods and still had the check inside. In the other Tad Lane incident, the resident reported that first someone knocked down his mailbox and the next day, someone took his Private Drive sign.

In the Old Coach incident, the resident returned home from vacation to find the mailbox smashed. The mailbox was located in the woods a couple of hundred feet from the house and was able to be reinstalled, police said.

Vandalism

A 67-year-old Beechwood Street resident reported to police on Saturday (Aug. 24) that his red 1998 Dodge Dakota pickup truck had been keyed. Police said the truck had been parked along the road in front of the residence and was vandalized sometime overnight that Friday into Saturday.

Shoplifting

Stop & Shop reported to police on Saturday afternoon (Aug. 24) a shoplifting incident involving a woman who had entered the store, selected several grocery items and left without paying. The store had seen the woman allegedly shoplift before but this time they obtained the plate number on the car she had parked in the handicapped space.

Further investigation traced the car back to a 90-year-old woman at a Cohasset address. The woman explained she had accompanied her daughter to Stop & Shop but had stayed in the car.

The woman's 60-year-old daughter was interviewed and admitted to shoplifting, police said. The store did not want to pursue criminal charges, police said.

Warrant

A traffic stop for speeding resulted in the arrest of a 30-year-old Hingham man, police said. An officer stopped the 2008 Mazda5 that was headed north on Main Street. A computer check on the driver revealed a warrant out of Quincy District Court for operating after license suspension.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident on King Street (Route 3A) near Sanctuary Pond Road on Monday (Aug. 26) around 4:30 p.m. Police said a 16-year-old Cohasset girl operating a 2013 Jeep Wrangler had stopped on King Street to make a left onto Sanctuary Pond Road when hit from behind by a 2009 Ford Flex, operated by a 46-year-old Cohasset woman. The operator of the Ford Flex was cited for following too closely on a state highway. She told police she misjudged the amount of room when she was trying to get around the Jeep on the right.

Soliciting

On Monday (Aug. 26) around 6:30 p.m., police responded to a complaint about two men, who had gone to the caller's home where they tried to sell her windows and a new roof. The resident provided a description but police could not locate the individuals. Police, who put on extra patrols, remind residents to call them about solicitors who do not have a permit. Solicitors, who are not working for a non-profit or involved in a political campaign, must register with the police department.

Gun license

An officer pulled a gray Mercedes over on Chief Justice Cushing Highway around 3:30 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 29) for speeding. As the officer approached that driver displayed both hands. He was holding his driver's license and his permit to carry a handgun, police said. In is belt was a loaded 9 mm semi-automatic Browning pistol. The gun permit had expired on June 13. The operator, a 57-year-old Scituate man, told police he thought he had a 90-day grace period due to processing delays for renewals and was in the process of renewing his gun permit.

The officer took custody of the guh and the man was allowed to pick it up after police confirmed with Scituate police that his renewal was in process and the grace period was valid until Sept. 16.

Investigation

Investigation is ongoing into a report from a local business that two employees who were recently let go may have tampered with the computer system there, police said. The day before the alleged tampering was discovered, the employer, who was concerned there might be an issue, asked police to stand by while the employees were terminated.

Domestic

A 62-year-old Cohasset man is facing an assault and battery charge stemming from an incident on Saturday (Aug. 31) around 10:30 p.m. when police responded to a report of a domestic incident in progress at the residence. Upon arrival police heard loud arguing and as they approached the house, they could see a man inside grab a woman's neck, slap both sides of her face, and shake her. Police entered through an unlocked door and had to forcibly remove the man. The man's wife also refused to cooperate with police and refused any assistance. The husband was held on $5,000 cash bail, police said.

Domestic

A 54-year-old Cohasset man is facing charges of assault and battery and intimidation of a witness after a dispute with is wife on Monday morning (Sept. 2). Police said the couple is separated and argued over their child going over to his place. When the wife told him to leave, an altercation occurred and he allegedly pushed her. Police said when she grabbed the phone, he allegedly took the phone and threw it at her. She was able to duck and the phone hit and damaged the wall, police said. The husband left and she called police. Police located the husband, who was placed under arrest. Police said intimidation charge is a result of his ripping the phone out of her hands. She planned to apply for a restraining order, police said.

Road rage

A caller in a silver Audi reported on Sunday (Sept. 1) around 4 p.m. that a bicyclist had cut him off and then swore at him. The caller described the bike and the rider and followed him around part of Cohasset and then into Scituate. Police eventually located both men and determined there was no crime committed.

Smart dog

Police and AAA were en route to free a dog from a car that the owner had left running and locked it by mistake on Sunday (Sept. 1) around 5:30 p.m. However, before help arrived, the dog was able to open the window, police said.

Attempted housebreak

Police put on extra patrols after a Deep Run resident reported an attempted housebreak. The homeowner told police on Sunday (Sept. 1) that someone had tried to break-in through the back door. Access to the home was not gained and nothing was missing, police said.

Window broken

Police responded to a report of a possible BB shot into the picture window of a home on Atlantic Avenue on Monday (Sept. 2), police said. Police said the homeowner said his wife was watching TV she heard a loud bang. Investigation showed a hole the size of a fist in the outside pane only. No evidence was located as to what may have caused the damage, police said.

Verizon Communications, for the open associate seat, recommending that Henry be reappointed since he has served on the commission for a year, and it takes time to learn the rigors of serving on the board.

Con Com chairman Jack Creighton explained that three other citizens had expressed interest in serving on the board, but Vogelman opted to attend a meeting and impressed the board by making some "valuable procedural recommendations" during their discussion.

Balance

Selectman Martha Gjesteby was concerned that an engineer who applied to the commission was not considered for membership. Creighton replied that the individual did not reach out to him.

"But he applied," said Gjesteby, adding that she would like to see all five of the applicants.

Last year, the selectmen voted on all five candidates for the Con Com, choosing two to fill two open associate seats.

Creighton said that he is "not the appointing authority" for the board, deferring to the town manager.

Milanoski said he recommended Vogelman's appointment to help "balance out the committee."

Gjesteby countered that the Con Com is in fact "off-balance" and "lacking in engineering."

Selectman Karen Quigley pointed out that the current Con Com did not appear to be "geographically diverse," stating that most of the members live in the same part of town.

Milanoski replied, "I'm looking at gender diversity," pointing out that the Con Com is currently comprised of male members only.

Creighton stated, "While I'm not in favor of choosing based on gender, we have had an all-male committee for a number of years."

History repeating?

The Conservation Commission has had three female members in recent history— Veneta "Vee" Roebuck, who stepped down this year after serving on the board for nearly three decades; as well as Debbie Cook and Sarah Charron, who were "unseated" when they were up for reappointment in 2011. Cook served on the Con Com for 15 years, several of which she was chair. Charron had also served on the commission for several years.

The selectmen's decision to unseat Cook and Charron, along with another longtime commissioner, Dick Karoff, was met with controversy in the summer of 2011 that led to a citizen's petition with 120 signatures to reinstate the former board members. The selectmen at the time said the decision could not be reversed.

Although Cook, Charron and Karoff all indicated an interest in continuing to serve on the board, they were replaced by Alexander Koines of Atlantic Avenue, Jim Marten of Nichols Road and James Gilman of Rust Way, all of whom were appointed as voting members of the Con Com. Karoff ended up securing a seat on the board as an associate, non-voting member.

Part of the controversy at the time was the fact that Koines, Marten and Gilman all were associated with a group calling themselves the "Environmental 20," a group of families residing in the area known as Cat Dam, who together paid for an engineering study of the Inner Little Harbor tide gates on Nichols Road.

It was thought that certain selectmen were attempting to stack the Con Com with members of the E-20 so that the commission would side with that group when it came time to decide on a schedule for flushing the tide gates at Cat Dam. When the Mariner last reported on Cat Dam in 2012, the Con Com was attempting to reach a compromise on the flushing schedule.

Process

Both Gjesteby and Quigley said they were disappointed that one of the applicants to the Con Com, who holds an engineering degree, was not called in to interview for the position, and wanted to know why.

"It's the expertise people have that I'm concerned about," said Gjesteby.

Quigley felt it was wrong to exclude the other applicants, stating, "It's incumbent upon the town to bring in candidates who have the most applicable resumes."

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy agreed, adding that the town should respond to anyone who applies to serve on a volunteer board.

"If somebody sends their resume to Town Hall, we need to be fawning over them, calling and interviewing them," said Kennedy. "We need to make a commitment to doing that. Nobody's resume should sit in a folder."

Selectman Steve Gaumer agreed, stating that he recognized "how difficult it is to find people willing to give of their time for the town." He also stated that the take-away from this situation is that the town must be consistent with the committee application process.

Quigley asked Milanoski the reason certain candidates were not even considered for the open positions.

Milanoski said that he solicited feedback from the Con Com before making his appointment recommendations. "I felt it incumbent on me to ask how they feel... and what I can do as part of the appointment process to enhance their success."

The selectmen voted 3-2 to approve Henry's reappointment, with Gjesteby and Quigley dissenting because they disapproved of the process.

Milanoski offered to hold off on appointing Vogelman, asking selectmen chair Fred Koed to agree to postpone the appointment until the next selectmen's meeting (scheduled for Sept. 17). The town manager said he would reach out to the other applicant this week.

Creighton said that there will be more opportunities to serve on the Con Com in the future, as the board would like to recruit more associate members since many long-term, voting members could step down in the next few years. The Con Com chair said he expects a "rapid turnover" in the near future.

Just because an applicant was not considered this year, said Creighton, "doesn't mean a year from now they wouldn't be welcome."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, who was in the audience, said that with this kind of application process, it would be tough for the board to attract new members.

"Good luck filling an associate position in the future because people aren't going to want to volunteer," said McCann.

Brush-up on Open Meeting Law

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Ross said that the easy way to avoid future OML complaints is to simply refrain from discussing town business outside of a public meeting, and to only converse via email about scheduling meetings.

What is a meeting, according to state law, and how does a town board ensure that the law is followed whenever it convenes?

These were among the topics discussed during a presentation on the Attorney General's Open Meeting Law (OML), given to the Board of Selectmen by Town Counsel Lou Ross and Paul DeRensis of the firm Deutsch-Williams.

The selectmen typically have an OML workshop every year sometime in the summer, following the board's reorganization after the spring Town Election.

Ross took the board through the basics during their Tuesday, Sept. 3 meeting, with DeRensis adding helpful comments and suggestions along the way.

Ross provided background on the revised OML, which is only three years old. It was enacted to allow for better transparency in government operations, "so the public knows what's going on," said Ross.

According to the OML, a meeting is any deliberation by a public body on "any matter within the body's jurisdiction." Deliberation, by definition, is a broad term referring to any discussions on official business. This means that any oral or written communication – including email – among board members on town business is considered deliberation, and must be done openly.

Any time a board has a quorum, or simple majority, of members present, it counts as deliberation, Ross explained. This applies to all committees and subcommittees, appointed or elected, "even a committee of two."

This issue has proved tricky for the selectmen in the recent past. The Cohasset Mariner filed an OML complaint against the selectmen last spring after it appeared that the selectmen chair was chosen behind the scenes. The board admitted to a possible violation.

Ross said that the easy way to avoid future OML complaints is to simply refrain from discussing town business outside of a public meeting, and to only converse via email about scheduling meetings.

DeRensis added, "You can communicate to set up a meeting," but that's it.

Ross also stated that public events, including Town Meeting, do not count as meetings and therefore do not need to be posted as an official board meeting.

Boards also do not need to post a meeting when attending another board's meeting, even if they have a quorum, although Ross still suggested that boards post meetings anyway "to cover inconsistencies, because of differences in definitions."

The idea is, better safe than sorry.

Boards should also play it safe when it comes to deciding when to hold an executive, closed session. There are 10 circumstances, according to law, that allow for boards to meet in private, mostly to do with sensitive personnel issues or matters that would impact the town's ability to conduct negotiations and collective bargaining.

When in doubt, said DeRensis, a board should meet in open rather than executive session. He suggested boards "use common sense, and err on the side of meeting in open session."

DeRensis added, "You're never wrong doing it in public session; you can be wrong by doing it in executive."

Ross explained that this is because what happens in executive sessions does not stay in executive sessions.

"Generally, what's discussed in executive is not necessarily going to stay secret," said Ross, explaining that eventually, the meeting minutes become part of the public record.

When it comes to boards doing the right thing, it all comes down to intent, said Ross. The whole point of the OML is to prevent governments from skirting the law on purpose.

"The state doesn't want to see a violation, on-purpose circumventing" the OML, Ross explained. "The biggest rationale [for the OML] is transparency, to give the public notice so they can monitor what's going on in their town government."

The bottom line — if the board has questions on the OML, they should call Town Counsel. And, when in doubt, conduct business in public.

The board was commended for posting meetings correctly in Town Hall on the outside bulletin board by the building's handicapped entrance, so the meeting agenda can be seen clearly by the public. Agendas are also posted online (the law requires two postings that are easily visible).

DeRensis pointed out that the selectmen are perhaps overly cautious with agenda item details and meeting minutes, which are often long and complex. DeRensis said, for instance, that the board does not need to include the statement "action requested" following an agenda item that may or may not be voted on that evening.

"It's not a bad practice, but it's not mandated by the open meeting law," DeRensis explained. The practice just needs to be consistent.

Ross said that the board should include a statement on the agenda explaining that agenda items can be taken out of order during the course of the meeting, since some items end up taking longer to discuss than the estimated time listed on the

Integrity of search process questioned

Board squabbles about TM qualifications

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen voted last Tuesday to approve the final draft of the town profile, which was prepared by a consultant from the UMass Collins Center to help the town conduct its town manager search.

The town profile includes background information on Cohasset and outlines its potential challenges for a permanent town manager. The document also includes a description of the ideal town manager candidate.

Cohasset has been without a permanent town manager since Michael Coughlin was removed in March 2012 by the then board of selectmen. Resident Michael Milanoski was appointed Acting Town Manager the same month.

Last week the board approved the document, voting 3-2 in favor of the profile as a whole. Two selectmen, Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer, disagreed with the requirements for a town manager; the document stipulates that Cohasset's town manager have seven years' experience as a town manager or an equivalent position and a bachelor's degree.

This week, Gaumer said that he was concerned that this requirement was added to the profile by one selectman in particular who wished to bar certain candidates from applying for the town manager position.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has stated that he plans to apply for the position. It is unclear whether Milanoski would qualify for the position given the requirements listed in the town profile.

Furthermore, Cohasset's Town Manager Act makes it difficult for an acting town manager to become permanent; under the current Act, enacted in 1997, town employees or appointed board members must vacate their positions for a year before they can be eligible for the job.

The Act was revised by the town's Governance Committee, removing the one year cooling-off period, enabling qualified town employees or board members to apply, and approved by the April 2013 Town Meeting. The revised Act was sent as a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature in May and had a State House hearing in July; the bill is still in committee, awaiting passage.

Gaumer said during the selectmen comment period on Tuesday night that following last week's meeting, it was brought to his attention that one of the screening options for town manager candidates was designed specifically to limit the scope of the search and block certain applicants.

Gaumer said he called the Collins Center consultant to find out if it was true that one selectman tried to control the process.

"He did not deny it," said Gaumer, adding that he found this "troubling."

"Our consultant was hired by the board, not an individual," Gaumer said, adding that he hoped this was just a rumor but, however, "I question whether there's integrity in the search process."

Gaumer said he raised the issue because the board should "act as a single body, whether or not we're in agreement," and these discussions should take place in public for full transparency.

"If it knowingly exists that we have done the work in advance, then we have not done our job for the town," said Gaumer.

Selectman Karen Quigley, who voted in favor of the town profile last week, took issue with Gaumer's statement.

"I don't even know how to begin," said Quigley, visibly upset. "I think there obviously was, exhibited by the discussion last week, two different options of qualifications for a town manager."

Quigley added that in her own conversations with the consultant, "I did say I prefer a professional town manager. I did not ask for or demand that. I thought he was talking to us to get a feel for [the preferences of] each individual board member."

Quigley chided Gaumer for addressing a rumor. "I find it very disturbing that you would give credence to an accusation and bring it up during the meeting tonight."

And while Quigley did vote for certain qualifications for a town manager, so did two other selectmen (Martha Gjestelby and chairman Fred Koed), she pointed out.

Gaumer responded that his comments were not directed at any one individual.

"I heard the commentary, I went to [the consultant], he did not reveal any name; he just didn't deny it," said Gaumer.

The rest of the board did not address the matter.

Koed updated the board on where the final draft of the town profile stood. Kennedy compiled the board's edits of the document into a file last week and sent it to the Collins Center. The Center will soon advertise the Cohasset town manager position and begin selecting candidates for the screening committee to interview.

"We can expect the final draft any day," Koed said of the profile. The document will be posted on the town's website.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

agenda.

DeRensis also explained that meeting minutes do not have to be quite so detailed; they are not intended to be full transcripts of the meeting discussions, but rather summaries on what was discussed and voted "in a few sentences." DeRensis said keeping in too much detail just allows board members to re-read their statements and attempt to edit them word for word long after a meeting has taken place.

"I'd avoid that," DeRensis said of a detailed transcript. "I'd caution against everyone expanding on their remarks... It gets too personal, and the minutes get too long."

AROUND TOWN

Lots of activities to talk about

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hi there, Cohasset. How is everyone doing? This week was the start of school for so many and it was amazing to see all the children at the bus stops, photos in social media and hear so many stories of first-day adventures! (Most of them with happy outcomes.) I want to encourage drivers to remember to slow down and be cautious, as we drive around town, especially during the a.m. and p.m. time frames. Also, remember too how important it is to allow the kiddos to play, unwind and "be a kid" after school each day, even with homework and schedules. Kids grow up way too fast and childhood vanishes before you know it. There has to be a balance between school, activities, sports and just being an awesome kid, playing with friends and enjoying free time/choices! Enjoy the upcoming week.

Yoga

Here is a great way for adults to relax, stretch and "play" as well. A 6-week Beginners Yoga workshop starts Sept. 22 and runs through Oct. 27, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. and is at Balance Studio. Sue Richardson will be leading the workshop and it's only $100, a great way to kick off the fall and get back into a routine! This is the perfect workshop for students who want to learn the basics of vinyasa yoga. Knowledge of the basic yoga postures, sun salutations, modifications, alignment and proper form will be the foundation of this six week series. Learn how to safely flow from posture to posture and feel comfortable continuing on in regularly scheduled classes.

Wentworth

Congratulations Eric A. Studley, now a senior majoring in Computer Science, on making the summer 2013 Dean's List at Wentworth Institute of Technology. This is awesome news Eric and your family is so proud.

AT CAMP

Law school

Dan Williams, a Cohasset Police Officer for over the past 5 years, graduated Suffolk Law School, receiving his JD (Juris Doctor) Law Degree on Monday May 20, 2013. This accomplishment is huge and your family and friends are so proud. Congratulations.

Habitat ride

Dr. Lisa Lewis will be riding her bike 25 miles on Sept. 21st in the 7th Annual Ride for Habitat, which raises money for South Shore Habitat for Humanity. Her goal is to raise $800 and you can help in this endeavor. For each $10 donation the donor will get a chance to win several items listed on her fundraising page: firstgiving.com/fundraiser/lisa-lewis-6/ride-for-habitat.

Car wash

Attention Cohasset Field Hockey Families, Alumni and Fans! The CHS Field Hockey Team will be holding their annual Car Wash Fundraiser on Saturday, Sept. 7th, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Cohasset Common. Please be sure to bring your dirtiest car by to support this team and their run for the 2013 League Championship.

Rally Sunday

Are you looking for a "Church Home" for you and your family? This coming Sunday (Sept. 9) is what many call "Rally Sunday." As Rev. Ritts, minister at 2nd Congregational Church commented, "This is the time of year when we religious communities are getting back to our 'program year' routine, and we encourage everybody to include some time for weekly spiritual renewal in their scheduling." Any one of the local religious communities would be glad to assist in that effort. At 2nd Congregational Church, there will be lots of opportunities to "join the flock." No need to be a member to participate! Worship and Church School begin at 10 a.m.

Children will start in the Sanctuary and are then dismissed for a special introductory lesson on this year's theme: "Trust in God." Choir rehearsals start on Thursday, Sept. 12, at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome – reading music not a requirement. The annual all-church picnic will be on Sunday, Sept. 15. Worship and Church School start an hour later than usual, at 11 a.m. with a cook-out to follow in the courtyard. Food will be provided by church members. For more information, find them on the web at: 2ndcc.org.

Also, please join the clergy and Town Police, Fire and other Officials on Cohasset Common for our annual Remembrance of 9/11.

SHINE

I have two events to share from Cohasset Elder Affairs. Lynne Buckley, SHINE counselor, will be available to address health insurance questions or concerns for seniors on a monthly basis at Cohasset Elder Affairs. Lynne's first scheduled visit will be Friday, Sept 13th from 8 to 10 a.m. at 3 North Main St.. Appointments are required. Please call 781-383-9112 to schedule a time to meet with Lynne.

Cohasset cafe

On Monday, Sept 9th,Cohasset Cafe will resume at the Lightkeepers from 9-11a.m. The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs sponsors these Monday morning get-togethers. Please drop in for a cup of coffee and home baked goods. Bring a friend and enjoy! Just a reminder to Cohasset seniors that Cohasset Elder Affairs offers delicious lunches on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and all are welcome. Meals feature mouth-watering recipes from Mr. Dooley's, French Memories, Cohasset Pizza House, Five South Main, and the Red Lion Inn as well as offerings from talented local cooks. Lunches are served at 12 noon at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St. Please call 24 hours in advance so we can provide an accurate count to the chef of the day. Suggested donation, $3. Transportation is available. Call 781-383-9112 for reservations.

Wellspring

This message is a great community opportunity from our neighbors from Wellspring in Hull. They are offering classes in Wellspring's computer lab, located at 814 Nantasket Ave. Classes meet once a week for 4 weeks and are available both days and evenings. Students will learn on new computers running the most recent software programs.

For further information, visit: wellspringhull.org, call 781-925-3211 x 24 or email Rick@wellspringhull.org.

Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

WEDDING

Pilczak — Fallon

Margaret Olivia Pilczak and Douglas Martin Fallon were married June 1, 2013 at an evening ceremony on Cohasset's Sandy Beach officiated by the Honorable Reverend Donna M. Cunio of Norwell. Maggie is the daughter of Kenneth and Jo-Ann Pilczak of Cohasset. Doug is the son of Richard and Jennifer Fallon of Belmont.

On a perfect summer evening, arriving guests were greeted at the beach by steel drum entertainment. Vocalist Lily Sestito of Cohasset, accompanied by her son Joey on guitar, provided music during the ceremony. A reception followed at Atlantica on Cohasset Harbor.

The bride was escorted by her father down an aisle lined with white hand-painted sea shells towards an arbor made by her father. She was presented in marriage by her parents. Her bouquet was made of blue hydrangeas, white and peach roses and calla lilies wrapped in lace from her mother's wedding gown. A matching spray of flowers accented the arbor.

Maggie wore an ivory boat-neck lace wedding gown featuring delicate scalloped edging along the neckline, hem and train and hand-made covered buttons along the back. The waist was accented by a vintage Swarovski crystal and beaded satin belt sash with similar crystals and beading sprinkled throughout the veil and lace for a sparkling effect in the setting sun. As "something old" Maggie wore a locket her maternal grandmother brought with her from Russia in the early 1900s.

The bride was attended by life-long Cohasset friends Emily Nash as maid of honor with Brooke Allen and Joanna Hamilton Montanari, who currently resides in Plumas Lake, Calif. as bridesmaids. Also serving as bridesmaids were cousin of the bride Keri McMahon of Weymouth; sister of the groom Libby Fallon of Belmont; Caitlin Marquis of Hingham; Chiara Kovarik of Washington D.C. and Sara Lefebvre of Portland, Ore. They wore knee-length dresses in navy chiffon, rhinestone starfish earrings, coral sandals accented with a rhinestone starfish and blue sea glass pendant necklaces.

The groom wore a seersucker suit with navy bowtie, matching fedora and a calla lily boutonniere accented with a white starfish. Groomsmen were similarly attired in seersucker suits with coral bowties, fedoras and white rose boutonnieres accented with a starfish.

David Sherman of Venice, Calif. served as best man. Groomsmen included the bride's brothers Matthew Pilczak of Braintree and Timothy Pilczak of Quincy; Joseph Harvey of Washington D.C.; Alexander Hubbell or Des Moines, Iowa; Adam Kundishora of New Haven, Connecticut and Patrick Sullivan of Belmont.

A 2006 graduate of Notre Dame Academy, Maggie graduated from Harvard College in 2010. After serving for two years with "Teach for America" in Arizona she returned to the Boston area and is currently a first year medical student at Harvard Medical School.

Doug graduated from Belmont High School in 2005 and Harvard College in 2009 and was a Project Manager for Taser in Phoenix, Arizona until 2012. He is currently completing his final year at Harvard Business School.

After honeymooning on the island of Sint Maarten, Maggie and Doug are residing in Cambridge, Mass.

Remembrance Service to be held on Sept. 11

All personnel are invited to attend a Sept. 11, 2001 remembrance service beginning at 9 a.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 11 on Cohasset Common. Cohasset police and fire and the veterans organizations of the Town of Cohasset are coordinating the service.

The service will pay homage to the men and women who lost their lives and those that were affected by the acts of terrorism on that day. The flags will be flown at half-staff acknowledging those who lost their lives at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and in Pennsylvania.

All personnel are encouraged to attend.

- 8:30 a.m. Assembly at the Town Hall parking lot.
- 8:45 a.m. Units will march to the common flagpole.
- 9:00 a.m. Prayers by local clergy.
- 9:05 a.m. Ringing of the church bells.
- 9:10 a.m. Taps.

A reception will follow at Cohasset Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St.

THE LOCAL BEET

Summer veggies and fall crops abound at Farmers Market

Here's what's happening at the Cohasset Farmers Market next week.

September is here, and the beautiful bounty of fresh produce available at the Cohasset Farmers Market is colorful and overflowing. Summer vegetables still abound as we look forward to fall crops such as winter squash, carrots, beets, potatoes, sweet potatoes, rutabagas, Brussels sprouts, kale, kohlrabi, cabbage, broccoli, Asian greens like Pak Choi and Tatsoi.

One of the most attractive of the winter squashes is Delicata, a small, yellow and green striped oval vegetable, available in the late summer and fall. Its yellow flesh is sweet and the skin is soft and tasty.

Another popular summer/fall vegetable is the beet, which comes in red and gold varieties as well as candy-striped! Rich in Vitamins A and C, this versatile root vegetable can be grated raw into a salad or cooked in various ways.

One of the more unusual and unique vegetables available in late summer/fall is kohlrabi, a bulb-type relative of cabbage and broccoli. There are many ways to prepare and eat kohlrabi. Once you remove the outer skin, the white crunchy flesh can be sliced and eaten as is, and it has the texture of a radish. Add it to salads or slice and add to other crudités like carrots and celery for a healthy snack. You can also add kohlrabi to pots of vegetable soup.

While all these vegetables are still in abundance at the Cohasset market, you might think about storing some for future use. For tips on storing fresh produce, go to www.farmfreshtoyou.com and click "storage tips" in the drop-down menu under "produce."

Serving fall veggies

Here are a few recipes from the Cohasset Farmers Market using in-season vegetables.

Roasted Beet Salad

- Roast whole beets wrapped in foil in a 400-degree oven until tender when pierced with a fork (the time varies with size).
- Cool and slip or peel off skins; dice or slice.
- Toss with a little balsamic vinegar, salt and pepper. Sprinkle with crumbled feta cheese.

Baked Delicata Squash

- Preheat oven to 375 F.
- Scrub a few delicata squash, dry them and place on an oven rack in the middle of oven.
- Bake 35-45 minutes, depending on the size. Squash is done when a sharp knife can easily be inserted into the flesh.
- Let the squash cool a bit, then cut in half lengthwise and remove the seeds with a spoon.
- To mash, scrape the flesh from the skin. Mash with butter, salt and pepper.
- Otherwise, slice baked, seeded, unpeeled squash crosswise into slices, arrange on an ovenproof dish, dot with butter, add salt and pepper. Warm in oven until butter is melted.

CFM Scholarship

Shoppers at the Cohasset Farmers Market may not know that every year, and for the past 10 years, two or more scholarships of $500 are awarded to graduating seniors. The scholarship monies come from the sale of hot dogs at the Market, plus vendor fees.

The scholarship is awarded to a member of the senior class who shows evidence of good citizenship and an involvement for the betterment of others and plans to continue their education at an accredited college or university.

Special consideration will be given to those students who have shown an interest and concern for the environment and plan to pursue a career in a related field.

The following Cohasset students have received CFM scholarships over the years:

- 2013: Andrew Barrett, Dallas Purcell
- 2012: Michaela Rattenbury, Spencer Wakefield
- 2011: Tara Goodwin, Sarah Mavilia
- 2010: Margaux Donze, Jack Murphy
- 2009: Margaret Goodwin, Torey Hart
- 2008: Meghan Anderson, Nate Porter
- 2007: John Coffey, Colleen Richardson
- 2004: Laura A. Marks, Michael Rasmussen, Anthony Truglia

Save these dates:

Sept. 19, 4 p.m.: Talk on "Food and Mood: Why Eat Local?" by behavioral expert Julia Swartz, co-owner of Renaissance Cooking, a popular vendor at our Market.

Sept. 26, 4 p.m.: Annual Pet Parade. Start thinking about a creative or outlandish costume for your pet! Professional judging; prizes will be awarded.

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. through October 17. For more information, see: cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

OUR VIEW

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school next week, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasset residents of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news at Town Hall.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax (781-741-2931) and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Peel Pizza Company.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: editor Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com

Email: staff reporter Erin Dale at edale@wickedlocal.com

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Sports news: Will Wassersug at: wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Obituaries: obits@wickedlocal.com (our obituaries are handled through classifieds advertising)

Advertising: Claudia Oliver at coliver@wickedlocal.com

Please have your news to the Mariner by noon Wednesday for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime. Between issues of the Mariner, you can check us out online at: wickedlocalcohasset.com

Beacon Hill Roll Call clarification

A note of clarification to readers concerning the Beacon Hill Roll Call's reporting of 2013 per-diem payments (Volume 38, Report No. 34, August 23, 2013).

The number listed in parentheses under "Representatives' 2013 per diems" only refers to the number of days on which a representative or senator actually claimed a per-diem payment. These are payments a representative or senator can seek reimbursement for as part of their salary for days worked at the State House. If there was a zero listed it is because the representative or senator has chosen not to take a per-diem payment. I have chosen not to and that is why there was a zero listed next to my name.

The wording was poorly chosen and does not account for the representatives who are constantly at the State House but do not submit a per-diem reimbursement. I have asked Beacon Hill Roll Call to correct this in the future so as not to confuse the reader.

It continues to be an honor and a privilege to serve the residents of the Third Plymouth District, and to be an effective and responsive legislator for the voters and taxpayers of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate. Thank you.

Garrett J. Bradley,
State Representative,
Third Plymouth District

Chief Bill Quigley appointment supported

In early 2013 I participated with George Chamillard and Trish Morse in an ad-hoc committee to determine the cause of and suggest solutions to overtime as a percentage of the police department budget. In that connection, we met numerous times with the acting police chief, Bill Quigley. I came to know him well and to appreciate what an upstanding individual, excellent police officer and respected leader of the police force he is. For the past 15 months he has been running an effective department that is characterized by professionalism and high morale. Bill has received high marks from Public Safety Consultants LLC, who did an independent evaluation of his performance, and from Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski. I believe it is in the best interest of the town and of the police department that Acting Police Chief Bill Quigley be appointed our permanent police chief.

Under our current Town Manager Act, the selection of the police chief is the responsibility of the town manager, and his appointment becomes effective 15 days following the notice of appointment unless the Board of Selectmen, by a majority of its members present, votes to reject the appointment. The acting town manager is expected to appoint Bill Quigley police chief within the next two weeks. Please let the Selectmen know either directly or by signing one of the on-line petitions that you support Acting Police Chief Bill Quigley for the permanent position of police chief.

BRIEFS

CPC to meet next week

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) plans to meet on is Monday, September 9.

Planned agenda items include the board's annual public hearing, for which the CPC invites various town boards to attend, elections of officers, and whether the board will bring articles to the fall Special Town Meeting or wait until Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

The CPC also plans to discuss the Fox Run neighborhood dispute over creating open space on the White property, a private way off of Forest Avenue that the Cohasset Conservation Trust is in the process of purchasing from the White family. The transaction is currently in limbo as neighbors fear encroachment on their properties via public trails.

Town Meeting voted to approve $100,000 in Community Preservation Committee (CPC) funds to purchase a conservation restriction, protecting the land from further development. The sale is not a done deal, however, so the money is still in the CPC account.

The CPC will address this issue further at their Monday night meeting.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

OPEB committee in progress

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski reported that Cohasset's OPEB committee is hard at work. The committee was formed to tackle the town's outstanding liability to pay for Other Post-Employment Benefits (healthcare retirement benefits) to town employees, a number that currently hovers around $32 million.

The committee has met twice since its formation earlier this year and is currently studying an actuarial report on OPEB and will soon make recommendations to the Board of Selectmen. The committee is "aggressively working on this project," said Milanoski.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Road closed for picnic

St. Stephen's annual parish picnic should go off without a hitch.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve a road closure for the event, to be held on Sunday, Sept. 22.

Robert E. Jason Road by the common will be blocked off from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. to accommodate the picnic.

COHASSET SEPAC

Meet specialists, learn about initiatives

The Cohasset SEPAC is inviting all parents and guardians to "Meet the New Specialists and Learn about the New Initiatives in our District" on Tuesday, Sept. 10th at 10 a.m. in the Community Room on the lower level of high school near the district offices.

At the coffee, Lori Villani, Cohasset's Director of Student Services will be discussing new initiatives in the district for the 2013-14 school year. These initiatives have been created to help our students better access the curriculum and aide in them becoming more independent learners.

Also, Villani will be introducing the new Students Services staff to parents. This includes the district's new Team Chairs, the Adjustment Counselor for the Middle-High school, and Special Education teacher and grade level liaisons.

There will also be an opportunity for parents to ask questions to Villani, the new staff and the SEPAC board.

The SEPAC board will be introducing the new board and reviewing their goals for 2013-14 school year. Also, the board will discuss the new topics of the monthly speaker series this school year and the quarterly parent-to-parent coffees.

For more information regarding Cohasset SEPAC, please visit: CohassetSEPAC.org. Coffee and pastries will be served. As always, the meeting is free and open to the public.

COMMENTARY

Town Manager search process tainted

STEVE GAUMER

Dear Citizens of Cohasset:

It can be very disappointing to find out the secret to a magic trick because we all want to believe that what we think we see is the reality of the situation.

Two weeks ago, the Board of Selectmen reviewed a town profile draft, prepared by the Collins Center, a search consultant hired by the Board. The profile also contained the screening criteria for selecting candidates for the town manager position. The criteria will be used by a screening committee as the basis for identifying qualified candidates for the town manager position. The Collins Center submitted two criteria to the Selectmen for discussion and review. The Selectmen were asked to select one of the options to use in the recruitment efforts.

Citizens may know that the options presented (A & B) differed remarkably. Option A was the more restrictive profile of the two and focused more on job title, educational levels and function. Option B was a more expansive profile and placed its emphasis on candidate skills required for this position.

After the meeting, several residents approached me alleging that option A was crafted by a member of the Board, specifically to eliminate the Acting Town Manager from consideration. I was disturbed by this information and called the search consultant in charge of creating the draft. I related the allegation I'd heard to the consultant. He did not deny the substance of it.

Not knowing who had worked with the consultant to prepare option A, I brought this news forward during the Selectmen's comment period Tuesday evening so that the Selectmen were informed of the potential bias in the preparation of the profile. The comments of one of our board substantially confirmed the veracity of this claim, in my opinion.

Maybe we are all so jaded that we believe that this is really how government works; don't count me among the cynics. I still believe that we should be held accountable for what we do on your (the voters) behalf. We will do nothing as consequential this year as conducting the search for a permanent Town Manager. It is not too much to ask that this search be conducted in a fair, transparent manner. A Selectman who uses the power of their position to manipulate the town manager profile to further their political objectives is not good governance.

Citizens may recall that the Board has encountered significant difficulty in moving forward with the town manager search. From the outset, I have asked, and the Board has affirmed, that we are seeking the best available candidate for the position. All along I have had concerns surrounding the Board's acceptance of the Acting Town Manager as a candidate. I raised my concerns this summer at a Selectmen's meeting. The members confirmed that Michael Milanoski would be accepted as a candidate.

Why is the struggle over the job description and the inclusion of the Acting Town Manager important the citizens of Cohasset? It is important because the Acting Town Manager, under any objective measure is a highly qualified candidate who has earned the right to be included in the search. I can attest that he has achieved more, beneficial results for the town in 18 months than any previous TM had done throughout their entire tenure. He also achieved this in an atmosphere crowded with short deadlines, fiscal pressures and political discord.

As the search process moves along, the Acting Town Manager may, or may not be, the best available for the position. A fair and transparent search process will ensure the Board arrives at the appropriate conclusion. It is clear to me that Option "A" was crafted in order to prevent that choice. The Board members who are working to exclude the Acting Town Manager from the search presented option A as a legitimate choice and went out of their way to make sure that no amendments to option A were allowed by the majority.

As citizens of this town, you should be angry that your money is being spent on a search consultant who is willing to change the search criteria so that the results can be predetermined by a few individuals, away from the scrutiny of public meetings. You should be angry and disappointed in a search process that excludes one specific capable, qualified candidate, and for unspecified reasons.

You should be angry because your elected representatives are again, not looking out for your best interests, which in this case, is to find the best candidate possible.

Steve Gaumer is a member of the Board of Selectmen.

COMMENTARY

Support Bill Quigley for Police Chief

A group of concerned citizens [see names below] has launched a campaign urging the Board of Selectmen to approve the pending nomination of Bill Quigley for Police Chief in Cohasset.

Bill has served Cohasset with distinction and integrity for 18 years, starting as Animal Control Officer and working himself up to Lieutenant and Deputy Police Chief. Since May 2012 he has served as Acting Police Chief. By all accounts, Bill has done a great job in a very difficult and politically charged environment. He has the support of the members of the Police Department, almost all of the citizens of the Town, the regional police chiefs and the Norfolk County District Attorney. Bill has also received the support of the Cohasset Mariner in an editorial published in the August 30 edition. He also has the expressed public support of former selectmen who have worked with him: Gary Vanderweil, Ralph Dormitzer, Ted Carr, Leland Jenkins and Paul Carlson.

Bill does not just sit behind his desk and issue orders. He gets out and works with people. Many people have told us how he made a difference when they were having a difficult time.

We believe Bill is highly qualified for the job. No outside candidate will have the in depth knowledge of Cohasset and the long-standing respect of the residents. Cohasset should reward town employees who have demonstrated leadership skills. As former Selectman Chair Gary Vanderweil wrote: "Cohasset should be sticking with its winners. We should pay more heed to demonstrated capability and accomplishment, all of which is difficult to assess in an outsider."

Unfortunately, his nomination has become embroiled in town politics with a faction opposing his candidacy and asking for a lengthy search process.

We urge residents to support Bill Quigley for Police Chief by signing the online petition. Simply enter ipetitions.com in your browser. In the search box in the lower right of the home page, enter Quigley Cohasset and our petition will be on the top of the list. All you need to do is enter your name, email address and zip code. You may also add a comment. No personal information will be collected. After your name has been posted, the website will ask you for a donation. If you prefer not to donate, you can leave the petition web page.

Supporters are also urged to send an email to Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed at FKoed@cohassetma.org with "Support Bill Quigley for Police Chief" in the subject line.

Paul Carlson, Ralph Dormitzer, Peter Decaprio, Jack Keniley, George Chamillard, Thomas Killilea, and Bill Burnett.

3A corridor study is underway

Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing highway) is currently being studied by the state to explore safety improvements and other traffic concerns.

Cohasset's Planning Board sought input from Cohasset and Scituate residents earlier this summer during a public forum in which many concerns were raised. The board incorporated these comments to the Mass. Department of Transportation. The state's Central Transportation Planning Staff (CTPS) prepared a draft report this month.

The Planning Board will hold another public presentation in the near future to discuss the findings, according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Fill 'r up and kick me

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Just two towns in either direction, there are numerous stations with prices 15 to 20 cents less a gallon than what we pay here...

Remember the old gag of sneaking up behind someone and sticking a note on their back that read, "kick me"? The end result was always the same; one person would feel foolish while others would laugh at the person's expense. It was a prank that I never really found funny, but I think of it every time I fill my car up with gas here in Cohasset.

While the pluses far out way the minuses here in our cozy little hamlet-by-the-sea, there are a few things that I'd change if I were "King for a Day." One of those things is the inflated price of gasoline at the stations in town.

First of all, the price of gas has become a bit of joke, with the cost doubling over the past 10 years while oil companies roll in record profits. After topping off at more than $4 a gallon in 2008, the average price of a gallon of gas in the Boston area (as of two weeks ago) was $3.66 a gallon — but you'll be hard-pressed to find that number anywhere in town. (Source: Bostongasprices.com)

Back in 2007 when we moved to town from the Metro-West, I knew there would be certain sacrifices we'd have to endure when we moved to Cohasset, mainly proximity. Proximity to our favorite restaurants, proximity to Jordan's I-max, and easy in and out of Boston were all things I knew we'd be giving up, but I didn't anticipate losing access to reasonably priced fuel.

Originally, I thought the increase may be associated with Cohasset's distance from the fuel depots. However, one doesn't have to travel too far on Route 3A to disprove that theory. Just two towns in either direction, there are numerous stations with prices 15 to 20 cents less a gallon than what we pay here (and in Weymouth they actually pump the fuel for you). Then I thought maybe Cohasset had an added tax per gallon, and perhaps the town was using the funds to underwrite something wicked cool; now that's something I could live with. I checked with acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, and he informed me that there was not a town-imposed tax on fuel. Later, I realized that I forgot to ask if the town was in the midst of planning something wicked cool.

So the local inflated price isn't based on distance, nor is it based on a local tax. I checked, it's not based on a higher commercial tax rate. Hmm, anyone want to guess why fuel companies are charging more for gas here in Cohasset than almost everywhere else?

For the past 5 years I've grumbled every time I filled up the tank here in town. I even got excited when I read that Stop & Shop, known for reasonably priced gas would be opening a station, on Route 3A. Bravo, I thought. The arrival of a Stop & Shop gas station is basically on par with the cavalry showing up, just as the settlers had run out of supplies. Surely Stop & Shop will drive the cost down around town, and there will be much rejoicing.

As you may know, Stop & Shop gas stations are scattered throughout the Boston area, and typically offer prices among the lowest in the region. Given the fact that the Stop & Shop station just up the road in Quincy charges 20 cents less a gallon, I figured that we the fine citizens of Cohasset were on the verge of seeing a much needed market adjustment. Wrong. Instead of coming in and knocking the other stations on their keisters, Stop & Shop came to town, participated in a gas station group hug, learned the secret handshake and jacked up their prices — so much for rejoicing.

Two weekends ago (August 25th) while successfully attacking my honey-do list, I decided to take note of posted credit card prices per gallon at each of the four stations. The range here in town was a low of $3.75 a gallon at both Stop & Shop and Hajj Auto Care (who for the record, is the only one of the four stations that actually pumps the gas for you) and a high of $3.89 at the Mobil station, with the Gulf station roughly the same as Mobil. (Both Mobil & Gulf post cash prices that are closer to the others). So the bottom line is, for the privilege of filling up here in town you could be paying $5 more per tank than the regional average.

Let's go back to the supposed cavalry for a moment. Just 10 miles away, the Stop & Shop in Quincy consistently has a listed price that is close to 20 cents less per gallon. This discrepancy has bothered me for a while, but it wasn't until last month when I found myself in Abington that I finally had enough. Thirteen miles away, the Abington Stop & Shop station has fuel for 30 cents less and the Mobil station for 28 cents less a gallon than their counterparts here in town.

Thirty cents a gallon from the exact same chains — think about that for a moment and then grab the calculator. It adds up doesn't it? What are we getting for that extra money? Check under the hood, check your tire pressure, clean your windshield or perhaps a cold bottle of water? Nope, no, sorry and definitely not.

I strongly believe in supporting local businesses, but shouldn't that support be a two way street? Its one thing to pay a higher price to a local merchant, but to do so with a multi-location retailer shouldn't be acceptable. I have to wonder, if the chain gas stations along Route 3A are inflating their prices, are the chain stores on the same stretch doing the same?

As always, thanks for reading and perhaps I'll see you at the gas pump ... in Weymouth.

FOR THE RECORD

Looking for team players

GREGORY MATHIS

With the fall high school sports season about to kick off, it's a good time to revisit our game plan for covering local sports.

For those familiar with our newspapers and websites, you know local sports coverage is one of our priorities. We lead our second section with sports and emphasize sports coverage on our Wicked Local homepage.

Several factors contribute to what we cover and how we cover it, especially in print: space and time.

Our sports editors are responsible for covering several towns each, which means they have several high schools to focus on. They generally write stories themselves and have a few stories contributed by freelance sports reporters. So they are basically working with 6-10 stories per week generated by staff or freelancers spread out over three to five towns and/or newspapers.

In terms of space, sports has anywhere from two to four or five pages, depending on the number of stories available and the size of that week's newspaper.

If you follow high school sports, you know each high school has six or seven sports going on in any one season. That's anywhere from 24 to 28 teams in any given season for our sports editors to cover. So the math would indicate there might be stories for less than half the teams in a given week.

We try to rotate our coverage as much as possible so we don't miss a team two weeks in a row or more, but sometimes that does happen because of circumstances. Sometimes it's a matter of a coach being unavailable to talk about the team since it's impossible to get to every game. Sometimes weather comes into play, especially in the fall and spring when sports are mostly played outdoors.

We not only rely on coaches for quotes and game stats, but also to provide us with written recaps of their teams, sometimes in lieu of staff or freelance reports. We've had some success with that type of coach cooperation in many of the towns we cover.

In addition to relying on coaches, parents are another great resource for providing recaps to help fill in the gaps. This, too, has been effective in making sure teams and athletes get a deserved mention from time to time, especially at the youth sports level, but also for the junior varsity and freshman teams. We know there's more to local sports than what goes on with varsity teams at public high schools. There are also many private high schools in our coverage area with terrific sports programs and several colleges that wouldn't mind a little coverage in the local press as well.

In addition, there is a plethora of youth sports and adult recreational activities that could and should find their way into our sports coverage in print and online.

We know you count on us for local sports coverage. We're counting on those involved with school and community sports programs to help us make it as comprehensive as possible.

You can always contact your local sports editor directly if you have questions about submitting articles or photographs.

Game on!

available for qualifying town projects, including recreation.

The CPC provided $60,500 seed money to pay for the playground installer and agreed to match the PSO's fundraising efforts dollar for dollar in order to meet the entire $160,000 for the project. The PSO raised most of the funds between February and June and hired playground vendor John LaRue from Big Toys and installer Peter Bethanis from Probuilt Construction.

Brendan St. John, a Cohasset mason and parent, volunteered his time to help install the playground's tables, benches, and dedication patio.

Phase one of the project – installing the playground equipment – is nearly complete, barring a few manufacturing delays. The second phase involves refinishing the basketball courts, which should occur sometime this fall.

Arnold, former PSO president, got the ball rolling on the project two years ago, when her son brought home a handful of grass on his last day of fifth grade. Arnold asked him why.

"He said, 'Mom, it's my last recess," Arnold recalled.

It's vital that students who work hard also get to play hard, Arnold explained. "These kids work really hard in school and need to blow off steam."

And while it might look like all play, recess is a valuable part of a child's development. "Between grades three and five, it's a magical time; they're developing a bit more independence but still value recreation," said Arnold. "If that's their last chance [for recess], they should have something enjoyable."

The new playground is ADA-compliant, meaning it meets government standards for accessibility for those with disabilities. However, it's also "everyone-compliant," said Arnold.

The idea was to include equipment that offers physical fitness and is challenging enough for the big kids but still safe for the little ones. The playground is geared toward eight to 12-year-olds, but the sandbox area allows for younger children, age five and up, to participate.

There are also game tops on tables so kids can play checkers or chess; the playground committee canvassed the elementary school students, parents, staff, and community at large seeking input on what should be included.

One thing remained from the old playground — the swings.

The playground committee plans to have a special ribbon-cutting ceremony with Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara and each grade level in the coming weeks to commemorate the playground's opening. Arnold said that deChiara has been especially supportive since the project started two years ago.

There will also be a special playground event for the current sixth-grade class students, who were in fourth grade when the project started, but will not have the chance to enjoy recess now that they're in middle school.

"They were part of this and knew all about it," said Arnold. "It's a nice way to say thank you to them for their patience and input."

CHIEF

The town is in the midst of a town manager search, with the selectmen voting last week to approve a town profile prepared by the UMass Collins Center that describes Cohasset's background, challenges a town manager would face, and what the town is looking for in a town manager.

Milanoski announced during the August 20 selectmen meeting that he intends to appoint Quigley as chief. However, the appointment is not yet official.

Milanoski gave the selectmen a packet containing letters of recommendation from Cohasset Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon and Boston Police Lieutenant Detective Robert Harrington, along with an evaluation by retired police chief Wayne Sampson. Milanoski also penned his own letter of recommendation for Quigley.

Sampson, a public safety consultant, met with the selectmen earlier this year to give guidance on how to conduct a chief search, recommending that the selectmen only look for an outside hire if they are unhappy with how the police department is being run.

The board did not vote on the pending appointment, as Milanoski stated during the Aug. 20 meeting that he did not intend to make the appointment that night, but would do so at the next meeting. The selectmen wanted time to absorb the documents Milanoski had given them.

Two weeks later, the appointment has been postponed (the selectmen met Tuesday, Aug. 27 only to discuss and vote on the Collins Center draft of the town profile). Milanoski said during the Tuesday, Sept. 3 meeting that he wanted to wait on making the appointment in order to hold more discussions with the selectmen, and to meet with Koed and Acting Chief Quigley in private.

Koed said he was uncomfortable with the idea of a one-on-one meeting on this subject.

"There should be discussion with the full board," said Koed. "I don't know why I'm so important, I deserve a one-on-one meeting... it should be discussed in the open."

Milanoski responded that there have been several meetings on the matter, and said he wanted to meet with Koed as chair of the board. Koed stated that he and Milanoski have weekly breakfast meetings to discuss the selectmen agenda, and asked why they couldn't simply discuss the matter there.

Milanoski agreed, adding, "There are processes in place that I want to go over with you."

Koed hinted that he would not be swayed from his position on the matter, reiterating what he has said publicly in the past, "I'm for a level playing field search, on principle... I have nothing against anybody. That's been the consistent theme of where I've stood."

Gjesteby reminded Milanoski that the board took a vote in June to stop the search, and thus had a process in place. "The new town manager, whoever it may be, hires his team," said Gjesteby, "whether he wants [Acting Chief] Quigley or hires somebody else."

Gjesteby added that she thought Quigley would be among the candidates.

Selectman Steve Gaumer thought the selectmen were overstepping their boundaries.

"The law's not on our side; we have no say in this. We cannot direct the town manager to not make an appointment," said Gaumer, adding that he thinks it's foolish to leave the chief's position unfilled after all this time.

Where the selectmen do have a say, Gaumer continued, is in rejecting appointments. "That's what the law supports... The existing and amended town manager act says that this is a town manager's appointment."

Koed said that Gaumer was "implying we can't control it," when in fact the selectmen have veto power. "We voted a policy," said Koed, which "implied that we may reject any appointment that doesn't meet that policy."

Gaumer challenged that there is no "policy," because the vote to stop the search was simply a recall vote (the selectmen originally voted to support the search process when it was launched).

"I don't believe we drew up and voted on a policy," said Gaumer.

Koed said the "intention" was there.

Gaumer cautioned his fellow board members from saying any more on the matter that evening. "There is no appointment; anything we might say will lead us down the path of discussing the employees of this town."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Group petitions to appoint Bill Quigley as chief

A group of Cohasset citizens is backing Acting Chief William Quigley as the town's next Police Chief.

Calling themselves the Voters for Good Governance, the group has set up an online petition at www.ipetitions.com and is encouraging Cohasset citizens to sign it and send an email to selectmen chair Fred Koed voicing their support of Quigley.

As of press time, the online petition had collected 156 signatures. The petition, which describes Acting Chief William Quigley as a "good cop caught in the middle of a political battle" will be presented at the next selectmen's meeting.

Historical Society Clambake Sept. 14

The first president of the Cohasset Historical Society, Oliver H. Howe, once wrote "Cohasset has a picturesque and interesting shore. Guarded by bold rocky headlands, it is diversified by sandy and pebbly mellow stretches of salt marsh and beaches."

Noting that the entire shore had been enjoyed by generations of Cohasset residents and that the gradual development of shore property deprived townspeople of the use and access to the water, a group of citizens purchased the stretch of shoreline known as Sandy Beach in 1917 for the use of Cohasset residents. While there have been some changes to the beach over the past 96 years, the 1,000 foot-long beach as described by Oliver Howe "in the form of a graceful curve, with a safe and gradual slope for bathing and with a footing of fine white sand" continues to be enjoyed by Cohasset residents of all ages.

As we swim, sunbathe, or merely drive past Sandy Beach we should take the time to thank those forward thinking individuals who saved a piece of the shore for all to enjoy.

On Sept. 14, join the Cohasset Historical Society at its clambake on Sandy Beach. Take a moment to reflect on how different Cohasset would be without Sandy Beach.

Build a whole new you

Now in their 27th year, the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is beginning preparations for their 2014 trip to help the poor with home repair and new construction. The theme for this year's trip will be: "Build a Whole New You." The Information Meeting with details relative to next summer's week long trip, will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15, at 8 p.m. at the 2nd Congregational Church (next to Town Hall).

The actual nine day trip (June 28 – July 6) will be described along with procedures for registering. The 2014 Handbook, which includes registration forms, the 2013-14 calendar and other important information, will be distributed; and time for Q&A provided.

The new playoff rules explained

Here's a handy guide for what to expect

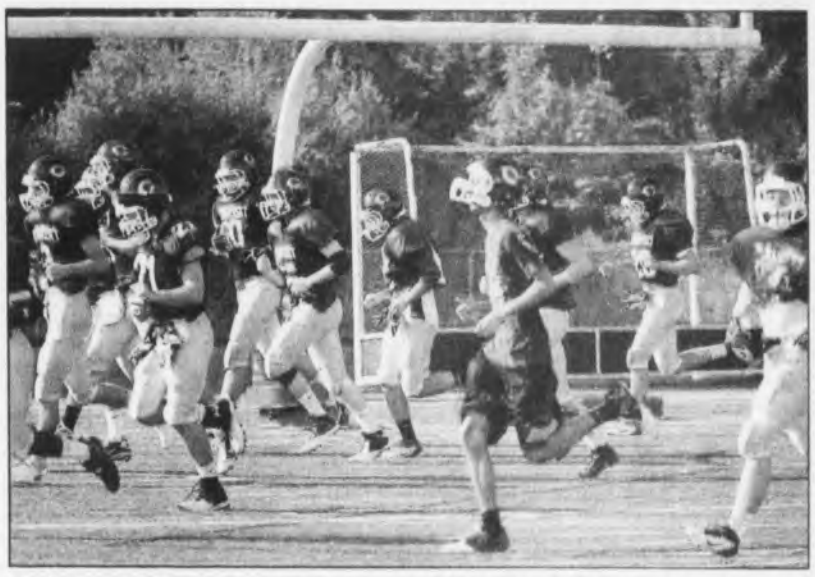
By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Let the games begin – and the confusion as well. As you'll see by reading the rest of this section, one of the big elephants in the room this high school football season is in the rule book.

While not much should change on the field, off the grid a brand new MIAA playoff format has already begun.

At first glance, the new format looks like a difficult maze to navigate, but it can be simplified a bit.

For one thing, league play still counts, but it will be a bit easier for teams to get through to qualify for playoffs, as the top two teams in each league, or sub-division (large school/small school) will get two entries into a new playoff system that aims to create true state champions and allow all Super Bowls to play at Gillette Stadium.



This year, the games will be played Dec. 7, and players should know to not schedule SAT's that day.

In the past, to qualify for playoffs, teams had to win their league.

That put them into the playoffs, but created many issues, beginning with the limited number of teams that qualified.

Too many times, teams that

Boys edge EB in season opener

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis felt a sense of relief after his team's 1-0 season opening win over East Bridgewater on Wednesday.

"We scored with six minutes to go," Willis said. "It was a big relief. We played 70 percent in their end. We dominated possession, but weren't taking shots. It was great to get the goal because the way we dominated possession, it would have been a shame to end in a 0-0 tie."

Sam Morris scored the game-winner for the Skippers, with an assist by Adam Benson and Ryan McKean.

"Ryan started it," Willis said. "He split two defenders and hit Aaron with a perfect feed. Adam took the feed and fired a laser."

Senior goalie Pat Federle notched the shutout.

Willis, who won his 100th career game last season, and is in his seventh year as head coach for the boys, praised East Bridgewater, a team that tied for the South Shore League title last year.

"They were solid," he said. "They had a good defensive back four."

Willis is expecting to have another strong season and to potentially contend for the SSL title.

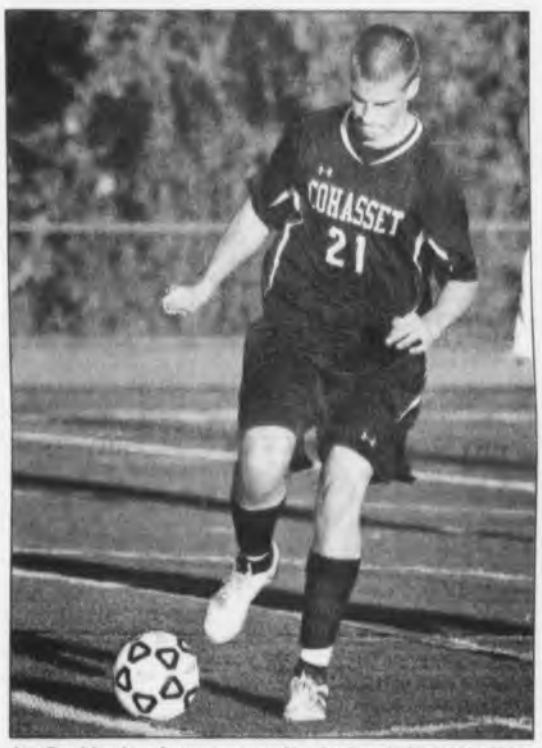
"I have high hopes," he said. "We lost a lot of seniors. We had 13 seniors graduate, but we still have seven starters back and 11 who played on varsity. There are some good young kids. I'm excited."

The team will be led by a trio of senior captains.

Joe Buckley is a four-year starter.

"Joe started on defense the past three years," he said. "He'll move to mid this year. He has an offensive side to him. He scored six goals from the back last year."

McKean is another senior captain.



"Ryan scored nine goals last year from the midfield," Willis said of the third-year starter. "He was our second leading points scorer. I hope we can get him a little more offensive minded."

Brendan O'Connell is the third captain. He'll play defense this season.

The team's fourth senior is Chris Cohen.

"Chris is a two-year varsity player," Willis said. "He's very

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

The 2013 preseason poll

Let the games begin

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Welcome back to the fourth year of the Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings. Each week, I'll rank the top six boys and six girls teams in the region. With a number of players moving on to the college level, this fall may be even more unpredictable than last to start the season.

Once again, I am grateful to have a professional soccer player offer insight about high school soccer. Forward Danielle Foxhoven, fresh off winning the National Women's Soccer League championship with Portland Thorns FC, recalled the years she played at J.K. Mullen High School in Denver, Colo. Foxhoven, a NSCAA All-American at the University of Portland, has also played internationally with the U.S. U-23 Women's National Team and professionally in Russia with FC Energiya Voronezh.

"What I remember most about high school soccer is the pride that I had in playing for my school and in front of my friends," Foxhoven said. "When you play for your club team, like most of us did growing up, many of our friends in high school weren't able to watch us play and support us, so playing for our school gave us the chance to play for something that they could come support us in."

Foxhoven also stressed the importance of coming into the high school season well-conditioned.

"Fitness going into preseason was extremely important. Before high school, fitness is not really an issue when it came to soccer; girls could all last an entire game, and you didn't have to worry too much about being fit," Foxhoven said. "But playing for your high school, you were playing against girls who were older, faster, and stronger, and so fitness became really important going into preseason. If you wanted the opportunity to play for your school, you had to separate yourself by being more fit. It made a huge difference and set you apart."

Taking Foxhoven's insight and applying it to your respective team may lead to success on the field this season.

The 2013 season begins this week for most teams, which leads us to the first rankings of the year, the preseason rankings. These are likely to change after the first week of the season, given the opponents each team faces to begin the season. Without further ado, here are the 2013 preseason rankings:

Boys

1. Weymouth – The Division 1 South Sectional runners-up are no joke. They lost some key players from last year's 17-2-4 side, but this program reloads every year. They'll no doubt contend for the Bay State title and have a legitimate shot at going deep into the postseason.

2. Hingham – Word on the street is that the Harbormen are in store for a stellar season. The 2012 Division 2 South Sectional quarterfinalists earned high praise from opposing coaches just coming into preseason.

3. Silver Lake – The Lakers are poised for another successful season and ready to challenge yet again for the Patriot League title. A three-loss regular season a year ago could be matched, if not bettered, in 2013.

4. Marshfield – One of several new coaches in the region, the highly regarded and highly successful Paul Turner takes the reigns at Marshfield High after leading the Canton High girls to years of success. Turner has a great bunch to work with this year in Marshfield.

5. Hanover – Success is contagious, which is why last year's 11-3-2 regular season record will carry the success of 2012 right into the start of 2013 for the Indians.

6. Norwell – A handful of juniors that have started as freshmen, coupled with a solid three-year varsity keeper, look promising for the Clippers, who closed out the 2012 regular season with just one loss in their final 10 games.

On the bubble: Duxbury, Braintree, Pembroke, Carver

Girls

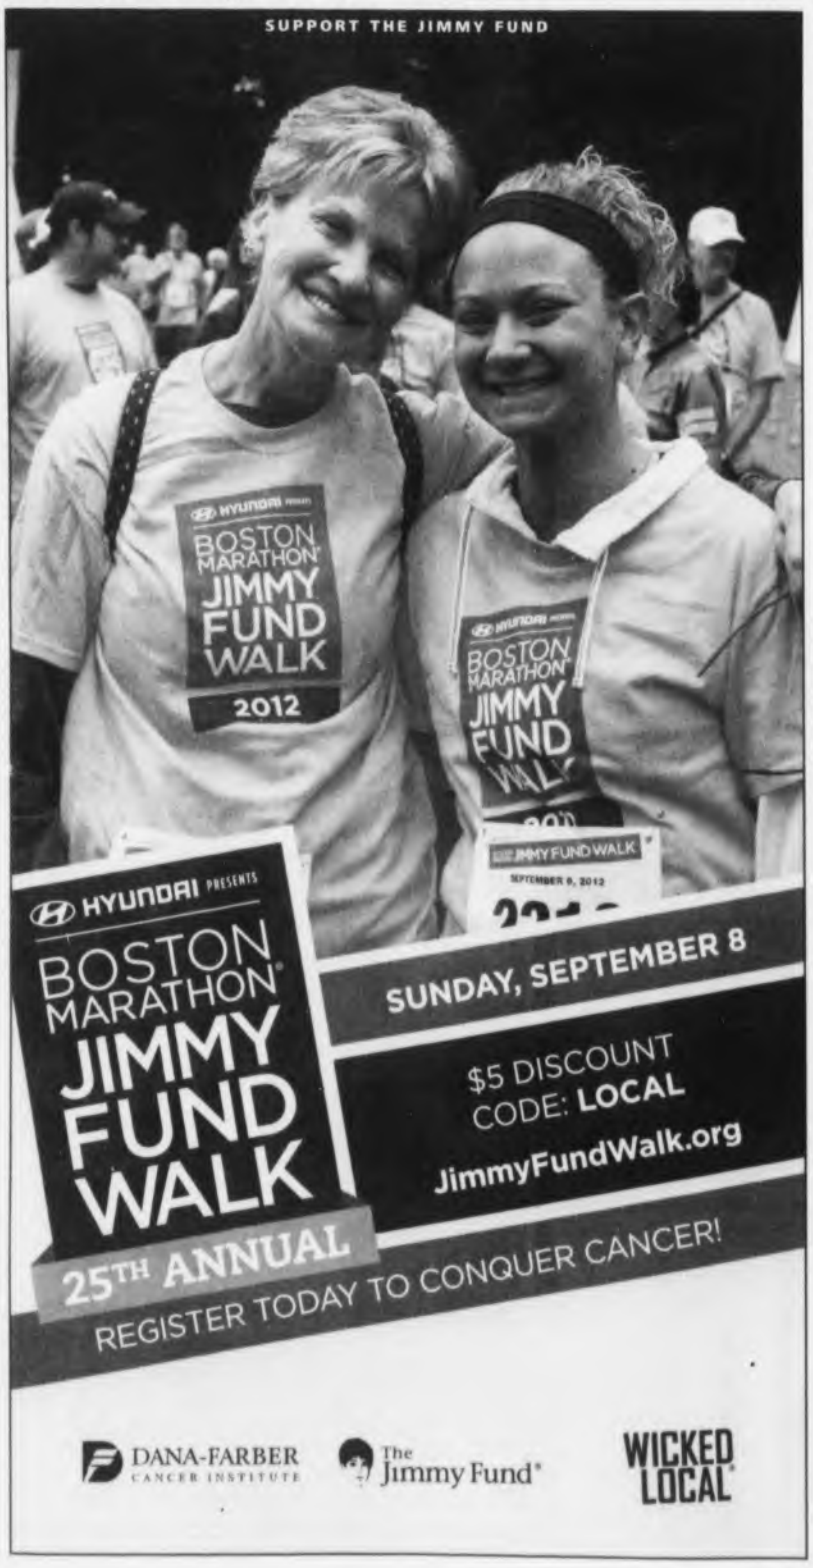
1. Duxbury – Despite a season-ending injury to junior captain Nicole Gavin, don't expect the Dragons to collapse. A few seniors, who have started since freshmen year, combined with a veteran presence at key positions and an experienced keeper have the 2012 Division 2 South finalists on top entering the first week.

2. Weymouth – Don't let last year's .500 record confuse you as to why the Wildcats are ranked No. 2. The returning players have experience and are very skillful on the ball, proving a lethal combination heading into this fall.

3. Marshfield – The 2012 Division 1 South Sectional semifinalists did lose quality players who have taken their game to the next level in college, but the Rams return a solid group that is capable of producing another great run in 2013.

4. Norwell – The defending Division 3 South Sectional champions are poised for another run despite losing key players. Several starters who played in the Eastern Mass. final return to lead the Clippers in 2013.

Cohasset's Teddy Craven and his Skipper teammates hope to break into the Inside the Six rankings soon. FILE PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD



5. Carver – Some say this is the year the Crusaders strongly state their case not only in the South Shore League, but in the postseason. The 2012 Division 3 South quarterfinalists had a young team last fall, which has only gotten stronger heading into this season.

6. Braintree – This may be a head-scratcher pick for some, but remember, these Wamps showed flashes of brilliance a year ago, contending with arguably the best Division 1 teams on the South Shore and beyond. My gut is saying the Wamps are poised for a great run, as long as they remain consistent.

On the bubble: Hanover, Scituate, Silver Lake

2012 Final Rankings:
Boys: 1. Weymouth, 2. Marshfield, 3. Braintree, 4. Silver Lake, 5. Hingham, 6. Cohasset
Girls: 1. Norwell, 2. Duxbury, 3. Marshfield, 4. Scituate, 5. Plymouth North, 6. Abington

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

aggressive and feisty at midfield. He's a hockey player and he plays like it. He has great intensity and energy. He runs, runs and runs more. He doesn't stop."

Adam Benson is another hockey player.

"Adam played defense last year," Willis said. "This year he'll play mid. He's got a lot of energy as well. He's another go-go-go guy for us."

A strength of the team is the defense, and they have one of the best in that last line with Federle.

"Pat is in his third year starting in net," Willis said. "He's fantastic. He's experienced and has fun playing. He really gets into it."

In the middle of the defense, junior Teddy Craven is a third year starter.

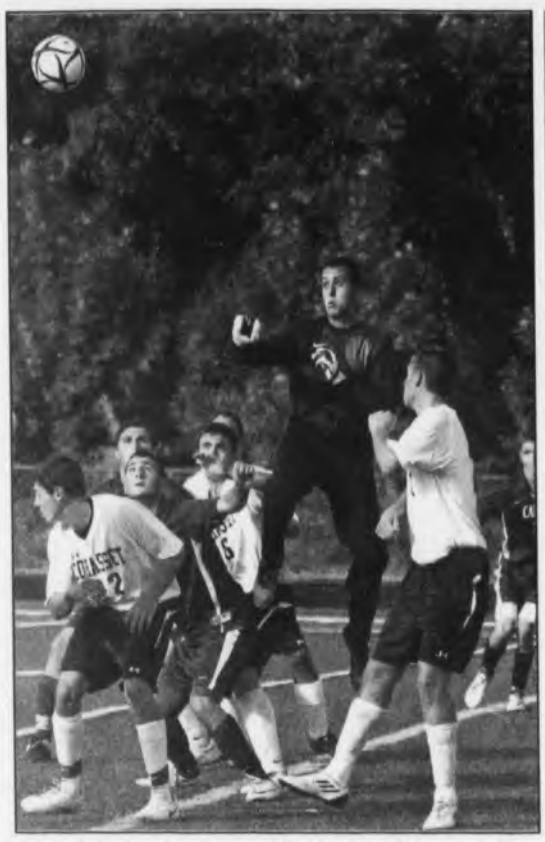
The team's third starting defender is Schuyler Van Pelt.

"He just moved to Cohasset from Holliston," Willis said. "He's a strong junior defender."

Morris, a junior striker is expected to do some of the scoring.

"We hope Sam will be big up front on offense," Willis said. "He's strong up front."

One thing that will help is familiarity.



"In all my years I never had three freshmen starting," Willis said. "Now I have those three kids still together as juniors."

Cole Morrison will play in the midfield with McKean and Buckley.

"Cole played last year mostly on the JV, with some varsity," Willis said. "He got bigger, stronger and faster. He'll be a good addition to the midfield."

Freshmen Mattias Loft and Mitchell Buckley should have a good amount of playing time this season off the bench.

Sophomore Matt Legge will be in the mix to start, as will junior Dan Surkovic.

Pat Federle is not only one of the best goalkeepers in the area, but also a senior captain for Cohasset. He'll be in net this afternoon at Scituate. FILE PHOTO

Willis was pleased with his team's preseason.

"We played big-time division foes and upper division teams like Hingham, Dedham and Arlington," he said. "We held our own. I was pleased with the preseason."

As far as the league goes, Willis doesn't know what to expect.

"Last year East Bridgewater and Mashpee tied for first. We beat E.B. the last game to keep them from winning outright. This year it should be wide open. The league was senior-heavy last year. There were a lot of graduations. When you look at the League All-Stars there weren't many underclassmen on it. It was all seniors."

Willis doesn't mind the challenge. He just loves coaching and working with the kids.

"It's a blast," he said. "We have great depth in the program. We have 44 kids in the program and our JV has been undefeated two-years straight. It's fun. We have a great soccer tradition. We want to do well."

The Skippers are at Scituate this afternoon at 3:30 p.m.

"Scituate is always a great game," he said about the school where he spent his first eight years coaching. "It's always a one or two goal game (or tie). It's very competitive. They have a new coach this year (former Scituate girls coach Ross Maki), so I don't know as much about them. It will be fun."

FOOTBALL

had outstanding seasons were knocked out with one loss.

There was also the issue of playing two games in six days as the playoff opener was scheduled for the Tuesday after Thanksgiving that tested team depth and health.

The new format allows for more teams to qualify for playoffs, with six divisions, with two broken up in the north and south (in Div. 3 there are four, with NE, NW, SE and SW).

Out of each division, eight teams will qualify for Sectionals that begin November 1 and 2 with the quarterfinal round.

Sectional semifinals are next the week of Nov. 8 and 9.

Sectional finals are scheduled for Nov. 15 and 16 in all divisions.

After that, Div. 1 teams have a break before their State Championship game Dec. 7

All other divisions play the weekend of Nov. 22 and 23 in State Semifinals.

A big change that affects all is the regular season, where teams must get their league schedules finished by Week 8. Teams in the North, South and Central must play a minimum of six games, and a maximum of seven before playoffs, while West teams must play seven, but no more than eight games.

Thanksgiving Day rivalries will stay the same, but teams that play league rivals on Turkey Day could face each other twice, once in the regularly scheduled game, and again on Thanksgiving.

The Thanksgiving Day game would not affect playoffs or league championships.

There is also the potential of a third game against that team if teams either advance deep enough in the playoffs to meet, or after playoff elimination, when the rest of the schedule is filled with divisional teams set by committee.

As far as the qualifying goes, league champions get the automatic invitation, with a second invite from each league with five or more teams in it.

That includes big-school, small-school leagues that can qualify two in each division (big and small).

Power ratings are also involved when it comes to ties or situations where more than eight teams in a division are eligible. Seedings for playoffs will be set through power ratings.

The ratings are a bit complicated, taking into account records, opponents records, games against different divisions or out of state matchups.

The best way for a team to pick up big power points is to beat a team in a higher division, a feat worth 12 power points.

Beating a team in the same division, whether North, South or out-of-state is worth 10 points. Beating a team in a lower division is worth 8 points.

After that, teams pick up 3 points for every win a team it has beaten notches and one point for every win by an opponent that defeated the team. Finally, ties are half the value.

Power-rankings foe Central and West teams are slightly different.

A couple of things to note are home teams (also higher seeded) will wear their colors, while lower seeded teams wear white.

Tournament games will have 11 minute quarters, except Gillette games, which are 10 minutes long.

SWIMMING

Green wins bronze at Dubai

Connor Green, a 17 year old senior at BC High, who grew up in Cohasset until moving to Milton last year, represented the United States at the World Junior Swimming Championships in Dubai, UAE, August 26 to August 31.

He joined 17 other boys and 18 girls as members of the U.S. National Junior Swim Team in the competition among 900 swimmers aged 18 and younger from 95 countries.

Connor won the bronze medal in the 200 meter backstroke, in which all three medalists including Connor beat the Junior Championships record set two years ago.

Racing against several dozen international swimmers in each event, Connor also placed seventh in the 100 meter backstroke and 13th in the 50 meter backstroke. In addition to the backstroke, Connor excels in the 200 and 400 meter individual medley events as well, and enters his senior year as one of the overall top high school age swimmers in the country.

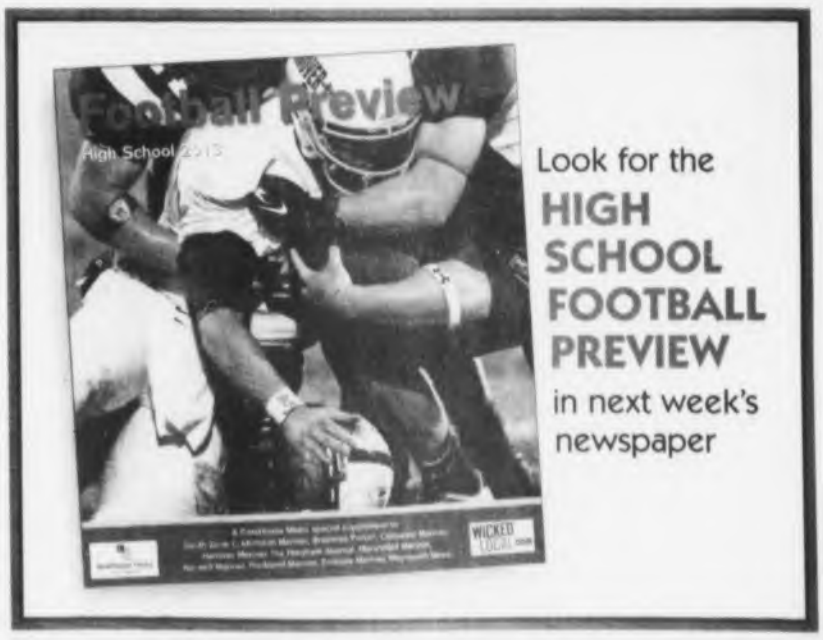
BASKETBALL



N.E. Colonials tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club is accepting applications from Cohasset players for the program's April 2014 Ambassadors Tour to the Netherlands.

This boys basketball team will accept ten players (going into grades 10 and 11) for its ten-day spring tour. New England Colonials teams have been traveling the world to play basketball since 1981 and the program has an international reputation for excellence. The team will visit and play in Amsterdam, Leeuwarden, Utrecht and The Hague while in the Netherlands.

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club was founded in 1980 and is a nonprofit, volunteer-run program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world. The team does not hold tryouts. All applicants must be in good academic standing and capable of handling a high level of competitive play and the demands of overseas travel.

For additional information, please contact Scott Bryson at 508-734-5660 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol.com. Interested parents and players may learn more about the Colonials' program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net.

$30,000 FOR LOCAL CHARITIES

Raising money in memory of PJ

Dan Trendowicz, Paul's younger brother, wearing the 7th Annual Hat.

Nicki Slagh bids at the Silent Auction,

By Greg Smith
Special to the Mariner

On Friday Aug. 16, The PJT Memorial Foundation held its seventh annual Memorial Golf Classic and Silent Auction. Picturesque weather paved the way for a record 132 golfers who made their way down to Pembroke Country Club for an 8:30 Shotgun Start. The golfers were then joined by dozens more at the post-tournament reception in Cohasset. Record attendance numbers empowered the Foundation to raise an all time high of $30,200, surpassing the previous record amount of $23,000 set in 2012. All $30,200 will be given out to local charities.

Incorporated in July of 2001, The PJT Memorial Foundation serves as an eternal tribute to the life of Paul Jacob (PJ) Trendowicz. PJ passed away in a tragic swimming accident on Aug. 13, 2002, in Cohasset at the Atlantic Avenue Bridge.

By raising and distributing charitable funds, the PJT Memorial Foundation seeks to support those charities whose missions coincide with Paul's commitment to community service, youth outreach, and local sports. Past recipients of the funds raised are Charlestown Lacrosse and Learning Center, Exceptional Citizens Week at Camp Fatima, The Cohasset Appalachian Service Project, and Toys for Tots. Most recently, funds have been donated to Savin Hill Little League, who had their equipment stolen the night before their season began, and the Social Service League of Cohasset.

PJ was the kind of kid who lit up a room when he walked in. He had an uncanny ability to bring people together regardless of age, hometown, or background. He clearly still possesses that power. Our 160+ golfers and guests came from all over the South Shore, the State, the Northeast, and Country. I personally could not think of a better tribute to a young man whose life was taken away far too soon. It is through this annual gathering and the monies we are able to distribute to local organizations, that we are able to remember PJ's spirit in the most positive of lights.

None of this would be possible without the support of our local community and our generous donors. On behalf of our Board of Directors, I would like to thank local businesses JJ's, Bridgeman's, Jake's Seafood, Gulf Electricity, Richardson & Co, LLC, Matt Lovetere at The Carpet Workroom and Reclamation Center, ETS International, John Winter at The Ink Spot, Jay Landscaping, All The Best- Natural Foods, Sheerin Construction, Debbie and John Flanagan- Edward Jones Investments, The Boston Red Sox, The National Football League, Fenway Sports Group, Pink Tulip, Bonobos, The Red Lion Inn, California Paints, Dunkin Brands, Dahlia Salon, The Afshar Family & Panache Rentals, Twist, Executive Transportation Services, InStep Dance Studio, Darilynn's, Earth Tones Salon, Michael's Salon of Brookline, and Jesamondo Salon and Spa of Natick for their generous support this year.

I would also like to recognize our Tournament Sponsors Bob & Alyson Silvia, Cohasset Harbor Marina, Oracle, Ben Kinch, John & Patricia Gately, Scott R Lucas of Quality Yacht Care, Arianna & Brad Desilets, Dan & Karen Noonan, Tern Harbor Marina, Karen & Joe Sugar, Kyle Wilson, Braiden & Tom Digan, Matt Winter, Matt Verrocchi, Boston Yacht Sales, Sorin Capital, Beacon Hill Financial Corp., and Coastal Marine Management. These Silver, Gold, and Platinum Level donors made significant contributions to this year's event that eliminated all overhead costs, allowing us to have a much greater financial impact on the charities we support.

We are taken back each and every summer by the breadth of the support from the local Cohasset and Greater Boston communities. A simple "Thank You" does not adequately convey how grateful we are for the annual commitment from our benefactors.

We are proud to see that Paul's legacy has touched hundreds of people. I encourage you to visit: thepjtfoundation.org for more information about his story, our Foundation, our mission, the Memorial Golf Classic, and ways to contribute to our cause. You can also email us at: thepjtfoundation@gmail.com.

It has been 11 years since we lost our friend. PJ may have left all of us too soon, but he certainly remains a prominent member of our community.

GIMME SHELTER

Young sisters want to stay together

PAULA J FATERSIK

Family ties are so important, and keeping siblings together is our goal. This week we have two sweet, softhearted and bonded sisters looking for a fabulous, forever family and a loving home that will last a lifetime. Fenway and Mittens are new to the shelter and we are thrilled to be helping them in their search for a special, person or family with whom they will feel secure and know that there is lots of love, attention and commitment awaiting them. Hopefully, it will be the beginning of a new chapter and happy life for both of them. Sweet girls like these will certainly bring joy, entertainment and contentment to their new owners.

Mittens and Fenway are not sure why they are suddenly here, and they are feeling somewhat scared with new four-legged roommates and strange surroundings. This happens with all new cats who come to a shelter, and it is never easy to watch. The uncertainty, the craving for the attention and love they knew, and anticipating looks that say, "Please, can I come home with you?," pull at the heartstrings all the time. It will be the happiest of days when these delightful girls are off to a new home.

Both have very unique, black patterning on their predominantly white coats. Mittens has symmetrical black shading above both eyes. Fenway's coloring is just slightly asymmetric. And speaking of eyes, both of these cats have the most beautiful green/gold eyes that shine brightly; a prominent feature, which just increases their beauty. At just under four years old, they have been well raised and are wonderfully behaved little ladies.

Peaceful and affectionate, Mittens and Fenway will no doubt be very devoted and interactive members of their new family. When you get close to them, and they are feeling comfy, they will come right up for petting and you will hear little meows and then the fabulous rubs and purrs of a happy cat get started. All they need is someone to spend time showing them how much they care, share some fun playtime with them and provide a safe and gentle environment.

Need a pair of loyal, friendly companions? Well, Mittens and Fenway may be just the pets you have been waiting for. Their perfect match is out there so please consider making their dream come true or share their story.

To learn more about these beautiful sisters please call Judy at 781-534-4902. They are waiting to meet you! A real forever home where they can give lots of love and receive even more will be perfect for them so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

You can see more of our terrific adult cats who are waiting for the best matches and homes by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

The Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin' is booking up already for Thursday, September 19th, so please call to reserve an appointment. There are still incoming litters of kittens both in the shelter and foster homes. We want to help them all, but space is limited so having adult cats spayed and neutered is essential. If you or someone you know has a cat who needs to be altered please call us at 781-925-3121. Our thanks go out to the dedicated Veterinarians and vet techs who serve our cats as well as those from our neighboring cities and towns. We are all committed to helping control the feral population.

Since we still have quite a few kittens coming in, please consider adopting from HSAR. They are little bundles of fun and full of energy guaranteed to bring smiles and love. If you have time to raise a new pair of frisky family members, please call or come to see them. They are simply irresistible. Our older cats are just as wonderful and will love you for brightening their lives by bringing them into a warm and caring forever home.

Like many shelters, we are still in need of wet and dry kitten food. If you are planning on donating to a shelter, please consider ours or another 501(c)(3) nonprofit. We survive on grants, gifts and donations and our incoming cats and kittens rely on all of us to keep them safe and healthy. Laundry detergent and cleaning supplies are also needed to keep clean living quarters for them. We appreciate your help in this area.

The town of Hull Stem to Stern yard sale is happening on Saturday, September 7th from 9-3 so why not spend a few hours here. HSAR volunteers will be on the block diagonally across from our shelter on Nantasket Ave. at L St. Please look for us and help our kittens and cats while finding fabulous treasures!

We are also looking forward to Endless Summer on September 21st. Please join us at our booth on Nantasket Avenue for fabulous raffle baskets, Kittendale's Calendars, T shirts and other items. Visit our Facebook page for more updates and information.

Things are getting back to normal in the laundry room as we have our new washer up and running. But honestly, all of the volunteers who took bedding and linens home to help keep a clean home for our kittens and cats, are the ones who deserve the greatest thanks for stepping up and going above and beyond for the last 2 weeks. You are the best!

Looking to make volunteering with an animal shelter a part of your week? Have 2 hours to spare? Please call Sue at 617-733-2986 for more information or drop by the shelter during Open Hours for a visit and pick up an application form. We all work hard to make a better life for our feline residents and it is rewarding in so many ways.

Paula J. Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Both Mittens and Fenway have very unique, black patterning on their predominantly white coats. Mittens has symmetrical black shading above both eyes. Fenway's coloring is just slightly asymmetric.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Getting a flat tire while driving can be dangerous. If your tire suddenly goes flat remember to hold the steering wheel tightly, slow down gradually, then pull fully off to the side of the road as soon as possible. If one of the front tires goes flat, expect your car to jerk violently toward the side with the flat.

ROTARY CLUB

Cohasset club 'walks the talk'

The Rotary Club District Governor came last Monday to speak to its members and update them on Rotary International. He informed the 17 Cohasset members of the goals set by Rotary International for the 2013-2014 year.

"The Rotary Club of Cohasset is a small but mighty club", says Dietrick Bilger, Rotary Club District Governor, "and we want to help you to grow and become even stronger."

In accordance with Rotary International regulations, Cohasset Rotary members typically meet weekly on Monday evenings at the Lightkeepers Cottage for dinner and a speaker or monthly business meeting. Rotary clubs may have a reputation of a 'good 'ol boys dinner club' but Cohasset and many other clubs are anything but! It's membership ranges many generations and 25 percent of its current members are female. Rotary International recognizes weekly meetings are a challenge for young families and members with a busy work schedule and long commutes. For those who cannot make meetings or hold back due to the weekly dinner fees, the Rotary Club now accepts members by being 'Engaged in a Project' with no weekly meetings or weekly dinner costs.

The Rotary motto is "Service before Self" and the Cohasset club walks the talk. We know that the citizens in Cohasset are generous with their money and their time. "We would love for the involved Cohasset citizens to become members while continuing their work on their community focus and take advantage of the Rotary connections," says President Ken Roth. This means that many people in Cohasset may now become members and appreciate connections locally and internationally to help them with their passion and not feel that they must attend weekly meetings.

International

If you are working on an international medical mission or delivering books to an underdeveloped country, promoting maternal care or children's health in a local city, we can help you. There are rotary clubs in every country and major city. We can help a person connect with Rotarians in that city who may be teachers, doctors, hotel managers, restaurant owners, bus operators, etc. and use the power of the Rotary Club to further your cause. Rotary Clubs require their new 'Engagement in Projects' members to work at least 12 hours every six months on their focus which aligns with Rotary International's goals. This year the Rotary Club focus is on six areas: Disease Control, Peace and Conflict Resolution, Water and Sanitation, Maternal and Child Health, Basic Education and Literacy, and Economic and Community Development.

Rotary International's original goal was elimination of Polio world-wide and the Cohasset club consistently donates toward the funding of that goal. The UN and Rotary International estimates it is five years from completing Rotary International's goal of eliminating Polio worldwide. Currently it works with a matching grant from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which is contributing $35 million dollars over the next five year.

Peace

The Cohasset club has been actively supporting people at an international and local level in Peace and Conflict Resolution. After meeting with the Rotary Club of Cohasset members, they unanimously voted to support the work of Padraig O'Malley who is the University Of Massachusetts Moakley Professor of International Peace and Reconciliation and works on Divided Cities with Rotary International. He is currently heading to Kaduna, Nigeria to assist in the Muslim/Christian conflict. BC students will be joining O'Malley and filming a documentary of the Cities in Transition to further educate us back home as to the dire conflicts abroad. Locally the Cohasset Club had awarded a grant to Cohasset resident Fran Noble in promoting peace while working in Africa.

Earlier this year Noble learned she won the Rotary International Peace Fellow which is a full scholarship to further her studies on peace. Rotary Club of Cohasset Treasurer Rich Fitzpatrick, was instrumental in assisting Noble in applying for and recommending her for the 15 month master's program in Bradford, England. Fran says, "I hope to work with larger humanitarian projects to help protect families." We wish Frannie the best as she heads off to England this week!

Water and Sanitation has been a concern of the Rotary Club of Cohasset. In 2012 members Ed Fox and Wayne Sawchuk along with two children of past Rotary Club member Mike Spirito flew to Constanza, Dominican Republic on a medical mission and installed 100 water filtration systems, which were funded by the Cohasset club. Clean water is one of the simplest ways to eliminate disease and death in young children.

Engaged

Maternal and Child Health, Basic Education and Literacy, and Economic and Community Development are all ways Cohasset stays engaged and supports their immediate community and communities far and wide. Each year tens of thousands of dollars are awarded to graduating seniors in Cohasset to assist them with college tuition expenses, personal dictionaries are given to Cohasset third graders, and middle school African studies are funded by the club. In the last year the club has additionally financially supported computer labs in South America, Cohasset Historical Society, multiple Eagle Scout projects and community activities promoting healthy living such as the Deer Hill playground and Sailing Club.

There are many ways we can all serve others thru health, peace, education and economic development. If you are a high school student Rotary Club of Cohasset gives two Rotary Youth Leadership Association (RYLA) scholarships every spring. If you are out of college and would like to become part of a strong international community and want to know how you as a single person can be part of the big 'We' of Rotary, making a difference thru Service before Self, please contact one of our officers - President Ken Roth, President-Elec Peter Pearce, Treasurer Rich Fitzpatrick, Secretary Diane Herth, or leave a message on our Facebook page: facebook.com/cohassetrotaryclub. Interested public and prospective members of any age, are always invited to our weekly meetings at Lightkeepers Cottage, Mondays, 6:30 to 8 p.m.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Sloane C. Staszko

COHASSET – Sloane Cameron Staszko, age 26, of Cohasset, passed away suddenly Aug. 31, 2013, at home.

Beloved daughter of Donald E. Staszko and Dr. Barbara L. O'Pray, she was the sister of Ryan L. Staszko of Cohasset, and Calla W. Staszko of Tarzana, Calif.

Sloane had a tremendous impact on those around her with a smile that would light up her face and a sunny disposition that drew people to her.

She loved to ski and was part of NEDS at Loon Mountain for 20 years.

Likewise, she cherished the week during the past seventeen summers that she spent at Camp Jabborwocky on Martha's Vineyard.

A funeral service will be held Saturday, Sept. 7, 2013, at 10 a.m. in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Highland Ave., Cohasset. Visiting hours will be held Friday, Sept. 6, 2013, from 3-7 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset.

If desired, contributions to honor Sloane may be made to New England Disabled Sports at Loon Mountain, P.O. Box 26, Lincoln, NH 03251, or to Camp Jabborwocky, MVCPC, Inc., P.O. Box 1357, Vineyard Haven, MA 02568.

PROCTOR GUARDIANSHIP

LEGAL NOTICE
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Norfolk Probate and Family Court
35 Shawmut Road
Canton, MA 02021
Docket No. NO13P1481GD
CITATION GIVING NOTICE OF PETITION FOR APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIAN FOR INCAPACITATED PERSON PURSUANT TO G.L.c. 190B, §5-304

In the matter of: George D Proctor

Of: Cohasset, MA

RESPONDENT
Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by

Brenda C Proctor of Cohasset, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that xxx is in need of a Guardian and requesting that

Brenda C Proctor of Cohasset, MA

(or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve Without Surety on the bond.

The petition asks the court to determine that the respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M., on the return date of 11/19/2013. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. John D Casey, First Justice of this Court.

Horoscope

SALOMES'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 16, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Aspects favor new romances for unpaired Ewes and Rams. Already-paired Arian twosomes experience renewed harmony in their relationships. Money matters also take a bright turn.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Use that strong Bovine determination to help you keep the faith with your convictions while you move through a period of uncertainty. Things begin to ease by the week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Pay attention to your intuition. It could be alerting you to be more careful about accepting a "statement of fact" simply on trust. Don't be shy about asking for more proof.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Concern for the well-being of someone in need is admirable. But don't forget to take care of yourself as well. Ask a family member, close friend or colleague to help you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's OK to focus on the demands of your career. But try to avoid misunderstandings by also reaching out to family and friends. Your sharp intuitive sense kicks in by midweek.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Keep a rein on that green-eyed monster. Jealousy is counterproductive. Instead of resenting a colleague's good points, concentrate on developing your own abilities.

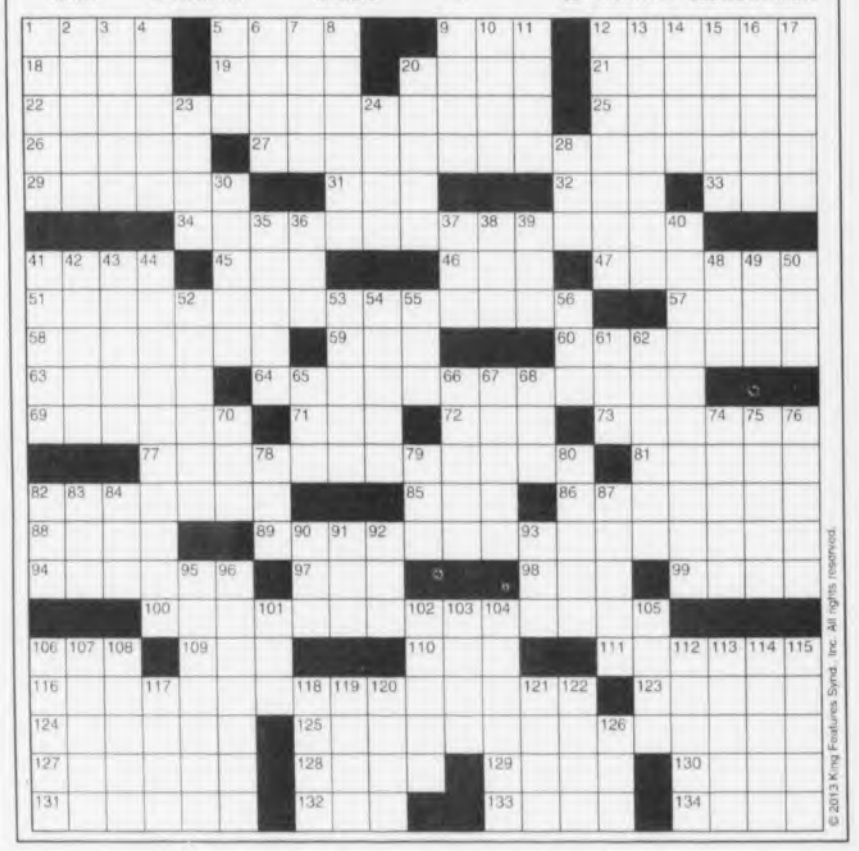
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Spending time on a creative project during this high-energy week can pay off both in emotional satisfaction and in impressing someone who is glad to see this side of you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Now is a good time to start planning that trip you've put off because of the demands on your time. Be sure to choose a destination that is new and exciting.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That upbeat mood in the first part of the week makes you eager to take on new ventures. A more serious note sets in later to help you assess an upcoming decision.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A high energy level gives the Goat the get-up-and-go to finish outstanding tasks before deadline, leaving time for well-earned fun and games with friends and family.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Dealing with disappointment is never easy. But the wise Aquarian will use it as a vital lesson and be the better for it. A close friend has something important to say.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Best bet is not to get involved in an argument between colleagues until you know more about who started it and why. And even then, appearances could be deceiving. Be alert.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have creative gifts that inspire those who get to see this sometimes-hidden side of you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

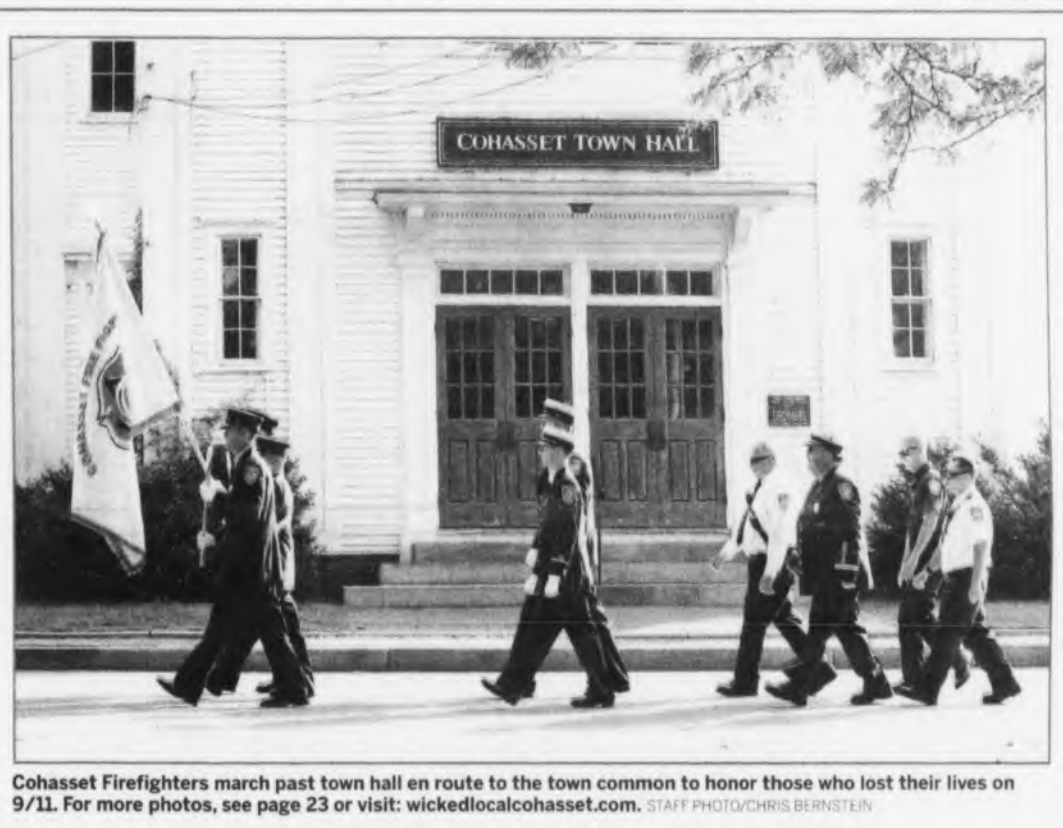
POLICE CHIEF UPDATE

Petition drive ramps up

Group plans to deliver signatures Tuesday night

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Petitioners for William Quigley as Cohasset's next Police Chief have made waves around town this week.



The group, calling themselves the Voters for Good Governance, which includes former and current town officials such as former selectman Paul Carlson and Capital Budget chairman Jack Keniley, canvassed various parts of town throughout the weekend seeking signatures for a petition to the selectmen to approve the town manager's appointment of Quigley as chief.

According to Carlson, between the online and paper petitions, over 400 signatures have been collected so far.

Quigley is currently the town's Acting Police Chief, a role he has fulfilled since March 2012 when former chief Mark DeLuca was placed on paid suspension. DeLuca's employment contract was not renewed when it expired in January 2013.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced on August 20 his plan to appoint Quigley. This followed a June vote by the selectmen to halt the police search, which started in February. The selectmen had issues with the job description Milanoski had published in the advertisement, along with

COHASSET REMEMBERS 9/11

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We've kept it going, and we'll keep it going in the future."
Thomas Wigmore, Sons of the American Legion

Twelve years later, the world remembers the tragic events of 9/11.

In the dozen years after the terrorist attacks in New York City and Washington, D.C., Cohasset has not forgotten, either, continuing its tradition of holding a commemorative ceremony on the Town Common.

Every year for the past 11, Cohasset's veterans organizations and the police and fire departments have had an observance. This year's remembrance on Wednesday, Sept. 11, began at 8:45 with police, fire, and veterans Honor Guard units gathering at Town Hall and marching together to the Common.

Clergy opened the non-denominational ceremony at 9 a.m. with prayers and readings. Apart from the clergy participation, no speeches are given during the 15 to 30-minute ceremony, said Tom Wigmore, commander of Cohasset's Sons of the American Legion, who helps organize the event each year along

UPDATE

Fox Run

Public trails must be part of equation

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It seems there's not much to be done about Fox Run.

The term "Fox Run" has become ubiquitous in Cohasset over the past two years. What it is, exactly, is a private way off of Forest Avenue, with eight families at the center of a neighborhood dispute between them and the Cohasset Conservation Trust (CCT), which intends to purchase 34 acres of land - a.k.a. "Fox Run" - from the White family.

In the middle of it all is the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), who voted to place a conservation restriction on the land once the CCT makes the purchase. The abutters to the White's property, calling themselves the Fox Run Neighborhood Association, have appealed to both the CPC and the Board of Selectmen to ensure that once the property becomes conservation land, public trails won't be part of the picture.

The selectmen have deferred to the CCT, asking them to work something out with the neighbors.

And according to the CPC, the matter is out of their hands.

CPC chair Russ Bonetti explained during the Monday, Sept. 9 CPC meeting that the committee cannot place a conservation restriction on land unless it includes public access trails. The restriction would be purchased using funds from the town's Community Preservation Act (CPA) account that includes state matching funds.

"The state is looking for a benefit to the public," said Bonetti. "They lean heavily toward public access when using publicly-generated funds... We're trying to conserve land under the guidelines we work under with the CPA, which includes trails, public access or some benefit to the public."

Fox Run neighbors John Leffel and Keith Van Etten attended the CPC meeting to voice their viewpoint.

Leffel said he's lived on Forest Avenue for 11 years, and was shocked when he learned through an attorney's letter that his driveway and mailbox encroach on the White's property, and there's a possibility he would have to reconfigure this part of his property to allow for public access to Fox Run.

"It was a surprise to me,"

PICTURE THIS

This week, the Mariner caught up with new Life at CHS columnist Matthew MacCormack. If you see Matt around town be sure to tell him you spotted him in Picture This. See page 6 for Matt's column. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Matthew MacCormack

Name: Matthew Paul MacCormack.

Occupation: Senior at Cohasset High School, Anchor of CSPN, Professional Dog-walker and Function Worker.

Best day of your life: Getting my dog, Marsea.

Best Vacation: Outer Banks, North Carolina. We went every summer when I was a kid, and my brothers and I absolutely loved it.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite junk food (or meal): French Fries.

Best book (or magazine): "Of Mice and Men," by John Steinbeck.

Best movie: Tie between "Kicking and Screaming" and "The Shawshank Redemption."

Best TV show: "The Wire."

Best music, group, or artist: J. Cole.

Pet peeve: Laziness.

Most embarrassing moment: I had a voice crack while doing the morning announcements over the loudspeaker in Eighth Grade. Still haven't lived that down!

Fun fact: I am the producer and co-anchor of CSPN, Cohasset's very own sports show.

Goal: To be happy.

Person you'd most like to meet: Winston Churchill or Nelson Mandela.

Biggest worry: That I will spread myself too thin, and let people down in the process.

Best part of Cohasset: Family, friends, and the beach.

Evacuations after gas main break

At 12:04 p.m., on Thursday (Sept. 5), police officers on traffic detail reported that a contractor hit a high-pressure gas main at the intersection of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Cohasset Engine 2 (Captain Belanger and FF/Medic Martin) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Boudreau and FF/Medic Morrison) were dispatched to the intersection.

Captain Belanger established command of the incident, requested National Grid to the scene and began to evacuate the area. Off duty members were also paged out to respond back to headquarters for station coverage. C-2 (Assistant Dockray) arrived on scene and took over command of the incident while fire and police were in the process of evacuating the Paul Pratt Library, Our World Museum, and the residents of 25 Ripley Road, 56 Sohier St., and 63 Sohier St. Several police officers volunteering at the Elder Affairs barbecue at the Lightkeepers Residence also responded to the scene.

National Grid repair crews arrived on scene pretty quickly and shut off the gas to the area. FF/Medic responded back for station coverage and manned Engine1, which was dispatched to the area of the Osgood and Deer Hill schools to monitor the area due to the odor of natural gas from the broken high pressure main.

Scituate Engine 3 covered fire headquarters while units were tied up at the scene. FF/Medic Pergola also responded back for station coverage and served as a guide for Scituate Engine 3. No one was injured during the incident and all fire department units cleared the scene at 1:39 p.m. National Grid and police remained on scene repairing the broken main and restoring gas service back to the area.

National Grid went house-to-house bleeding lines and assisting homeowners in relighting pilot lights, police said. A total of 16 homes were without gas during the repair.

Outside fire near Lightkeepers

On Wednesday (Sept. 4), at 3:29 p.m., Engine 2 (Captain Trask and Lt./Medic Forde), Squad 1 (FF/Medic Donovan) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Boudreau) were dispatched from headquarters to the area behind the Cohasset Light keepers House for a reported outside fire. Once on scene members discovered an outside fire approximately 30 yards behind the house.

Captain Trask established command of the incident and members began to stretch an attack line off of Squad 1 to knock down the fire. Captain Trask requested Box 3 for station coverage and Engine 1 to the scene to establish a water supply. Captain Bilodeau and Lt. Protulis responded back for coverage and manned Engine 1, which was then dispatched to the scene.

Once on scene Engine 1 crew established a water supply line from the hydrant on Border Street at the entrance of Government Island and supplied the Squad. Once the fire was knocked down members continued to wet down the area and check for hot spots. No injuries were reported during the incident and all fire department units cleared the scene at 4:57 p.m.

POLICE BRIEF

Illegal passing of school bus

Police were unable to locate a motorcycle being operated by a man wearing a gold-colored shirt last Wednesday (Sept. 4) after reports that he illegally passed a school bus while the bus was letting children off at their bus stop on the west end of Beechwood Street. Police also notified Scituate and Norwell police to be on the lookout for the motorcycle.

Police said there is at least a $250 fine depending on the circumstances for a school bus violation. Police can also seek an "immediate threat" from the Registry of Motor Vehicles, which would then revoke the violator's license pending a hearing because illegally passing a school bus is a public safety issue.

POLICE BEAT

Erratic driving leads to arrest

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 51-year-old Hingham woman is facing drunken driving charges following an episode of erratic driving in the village around 9:30 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 8) during which she nearly ran over four pedestrians, police said. The woman, later identified as Lorrie J. Campbell, of 1193 Main St., Hingham, had a male passenger in the blue Mercedes convertible she was driving. An officer patrolling the village saw the Mercedes exiting the lane by the Red Lion onto S. Main Street. Police said as she came out of the lane from the town parking lot, she made a wide left turn onto S. Main and then an erratic left turn into the parking lot of the gas station. Then she nearly ran over four pedestrians on the sidewalk as she exited back onto S. Main, police said. She then turned back up the lane by the Red Lion Inn toward the town parking lot, while her male passenger was trying to climb out the window.

The officer, who had yelled at her to stop, jumped in the cruiser and stopped the Mercedes in the town lot. Police said Campbell exhibited the signs and symptoms of intoxication and failed field sobriety tests. She was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and negligent operation of a motor vehicle. Scituate Collision towed her car. Police said Campbell was not cooperative during the booking process and was held overnight at the station. Police said the male passenger, who is 33 and from Hingham, told the officer he had just met Campbell and wanted to get out of the car.

ID theft

A 56-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Wednesday (Sept. 4) that she had received a call from Comcast billing seeking $500 in unpaid charges that she did not incur. Further investigation revealed that someone with a Stockton, Calif. address had opened a Comcast account in her name. Police said she will not be responsible for the charges and the apparent ID theft is still under investigation.

Vandalism

A 48-year-old Swampscott man reported to police on Thursday (Sept. 5) that someone had damaged the side of his 2004 Toyota RAV4 that was parked on the side of the road near the 200 block of South Main Street. There was a large rock near the dented door. The victim, who had been staying with friends, said the vandalism occurred sometime overnight between 7:30 p.m., Sept. 4, and 6:30 a.m., Sept. 5. Police checked with the neighbors to see if anyone heard or saw anything suspicious. The incident remains under investigation.

Accident

A golden retriever was hit by a car on Norfolk Road around 5:24 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 5). The 34-year-old driver of the Nissan that struck the dog reported that the dog ran out in front of the car and he was unable to stop. The officer helped the owner put the dog into the owner's van to transport the dog to the VCA South Shore Animal Hospital in Weymouth.

Summonsed

A 23-year-old woman from Framingham in a 2011 Chevrolet Impala was slowing to a stop behind cars that had stopped at the lights on Chief Justice Cushing Highway by the train station when she was rear-ended by a 2010 Chevrolet pickup truck operated by a 49-year-old Plymouth woman at around 12:14 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 6).

There was minor damage to both vehicles. A check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed the Plymouth woman's license had expired six months ago. Scituate Collision towed her vehicle. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and for following too closely on a state highway.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident around 5 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 6) in the middle of the intersection at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street.

A 43-year-old Hull man in a 1995 Ford Ranger pickup truck was headed south when he attempted to make a left onto Beechwood Street in front of traffic, police said. The Ranger hit a 1997 Toyota Tercel that was headed north straight through the lights. The Tercel was operated by a 23-year-old Weymouth woman. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Hull man was cited for failure to yield, police said.

Checked out

Police checked on a young woman, who was unsteady on her feet, at 1 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 7) as she walked with two men along Elm Street toward the Harbor Inn. The officer wanted to make sure that she was OK and that the two men with her were not giving her a hard time. The trio, which was coming from a wedding reception, checked out and only had a short distance to go to reach the Harbor Inn where they were staying.

MVA

Police said the 51-year-old Scituate woman operating a 2004 Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck at the top of Sohier Street forgot she had the truck in reverse and ended up backing into the vehicle behind hers.

Police said the woman, who wanted to make a left onto Route 3A, had pulled out too far into the roadway so she backed up. When she got ready to make the left, she floored the gas pedal in the truck, which was inadvertently still in reverse, and crashed into the 2010 Nissan Sentra, operated by a 53-year-old Cohasset man, that was waiting behind her. There were no reported injuries and neither vehicle was towed but the Scituate woman was cited for failure to use caution when entering a state highway.

Schools off to a good start

Principals report on opening day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It seems like the 2013-2014 started with smashing success.

Cohasset principals gave a snapshot of the first days of the new school year during a School Committee discussion on Wednesday night.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that the first day (Tuesday, Sept. 3) was "an energizing day."

Middle-High School

Middle-High School Principal Carolyn Connolly said, "We're off to a good start."

There are 785 students enrolled in the middle and high schools, a number that has led to some adjustments being made for space. Due to an overflow in the cafeteria during the middle school lunch period, eighth graders are now dining in the Skipper Café, traditionally reserved for seniors.

It's one way eighth graders are being made to feel more welcome as they prepare for their last year of middle school and first year of high school. Connolly said that last year, eighth graders were invited to the high school's pep rally during Spirit Week, which she hopes to do again this year.

Connolly is all about helping students transition from one grade to the next, and the principal said that upperclassmen are on board with this mentality.

"The older students are so helpful to the younger ones, shepherding them around when they're lost," said Connolly, praising the school's community spirit.

"Overall, the kids have done a marvelous job" at the start of the school year, said Connolly. "There's tremendous enthusiasm."

That enthusiasm can be showcased a little sooner, with homecoming taking place earlier this fall than in years past. This year's homecoming is on Sept. 27.

"Spirit week will be here before we know it," said Connolly.

Deer Hill

Deer Hill principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara said there has been a lot of excitement at the elementary school as well.

"We had a great day," she said of the first day of school.

Brand-new third graders seemed relaxed and comfortable, despite first-day jitters. The principal said that an orientation in June seemed to help.

"It looked like the little ones were comfortable coming in," said deChiara. "Now they're walking around like they own the place."

One new exciting development is Deer Hill's new playground, which has yet to be officially unveiled. The students have had to exercise patience waiting to play on the new equipment, which deChiara said should be ready by next week.

"Everyone is curious about the playground," the principal said. "I think we're going to be ready to go to have the kids play on it next week."

She thanked the PSO's playground committee, and parent volunteers, for all of their hard work in making the playground dream a reality.

One "really spectacular" feature of the new playground is the brick patio, containing bricks with the names of those who donated them to the playground, emphasizing that this is a "community donated" project, deChiara said.

The Deer Hill principal said that students and teachers are both excited for the new technology available at the schools, including new LCD projectors and laptops for the classrooms.

"It's top-notch, twenty-first century classroom dream stuff," deChiara said.

Osgood

Osgood principal Bob LeCount acknowledged that the school's enrollment has been a focal point of community discussions over the summer, but thanks to some flexibility, the school was able to make adjustments due to an increase in kindergarten enrollment.

A new full-day kindergarten class was added to accommodate the growing numbers. The former half-day kindergarten teacher moved up to teach the full-day class, and a new half-day teacher was hired. This enabled the school to keep kindergarten class sizes to 19 to 20 students per room, rather than 25.

The additional classroom and hiring of new personnel was accomplished rather last-minute in August, the week before teachers were due back. School committee vice-chair Paul Ognibene praised LeCount and Cataldo for this quick thinking.

"I wanted to commend you and Barbara for reacting in a great way to what parents were concerned about," Ognibene said to LeCount. "It was really important to people... we proved the schools are flexible and focused on finding a solution. In this case we were lucky and could accommodate."

However, the extra classroom did cause one snafu in the schedule. Cataldo had warned at a previous school committee that if an additional kindergarten class were added, it would affect the school's Physical Education class.

As a result, P.E. is currently occurring once a week, rather than twice.

"We could've had P.E. twice a week if we didn't add a kindergarten class," said Cataldo, explaining that she felt not adding the class would have been a "disservice."

"We understand there are ramifications with every decision we make, but felt it was important to bring down the class size" in kindergarten, said Cataldo, adding that the P.E. schedule is still being discussed.

LeCount said he was looking forward to the first PSO meeting of the year, inviting parent involvement in the school.

"That, to me, is the kick-off of the school year," said LeCount.

SELECTMEN

AG says board broke the OML

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A member of the Board of Selectmen was vindicated in an Open Meeting Complaint she filed against her fellow board members.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby filed a complaint with the State Attorney General's Office on Feb. 8, 2013 alleging that the board convened in an illegal closed session on Dec. 18, 2012 and also failed to list the meeting's topics in specificity. The topics the board discussed in executive were not appropriate for executive session, according to the complaint.

Gjesteby's complaint originated when the selectmen discussed an email leak in executive session. Gjesteby had forwarded an email written by Town Counsel to a colleague, and the selectmen discussed whether or not this was a breach of attorney-client privileged information.

The selectmen reported the incident to the State Ethics Commission in January, and Gjesteby followed up with her Open Meeting Law (OML) complaint. The ethics board stated in a July letter that they would take no further action on the email leak matter.

In regards to the OML, the state sided with Gjesteby.

"Following our review, we find that the Board violated the Open Meeting Law by failing to identify which union and/or nonunion personnel it would be discussing in executive session on December 18, 2012, and by discussing a topic in executive session that should have been discussed in open session," Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Sclarsic stated in his response letter to Paul Carlson, who was chair at the time of the violation.

What's the remedy for violating the OML?

The first step is admitting to a violation. The AG's office urged the board to review the Dec. 18 executive session minutes and release the portions that should have been discussed publicly. The review must occur within 30 days of receiving notice; then the selectmen must certify, in writing, that they completed the review.

Furthermore, the selectmen must try harder to uphold the OML from now on.

"We order immediate and future compliance with the Open Meeting Law, and caution the Board that future similar violations may be considered evidence of intent to violate the Law," Sclarsic wrote.

The selectmen underwent an OML presentation by Town Counsel Lou Ross and DeRensis during their Tuesday, Sept. 3 meeting. They were told that, when in doubt, they should discuss everything in open session to avoid tripping the OML.

BEST SCHOOLS

Cohasset ranked no. 25

Once again, Cohasset has made Boston magazine's list of Best Schools.

The Cohasset school district was ranked number 25 out of 147 districts in the magazine's annual Best Schools issue, which hit newsstands recently.

The magazine spent months compiling data released by the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, which included information on schools in 147 communities. The schools in municipalities were ranked in 20 different categories, including average class size, student-to-teacher ratio, rates of college acceptance, as well as SAT and MCAS test scores.

Cohasset is in good company with its neighboring towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Norwell and Scituate, all of which landed in the top 50.

with the police and fire chiefs.

"We want to keep politics out of it," said Wigmore. "That's not what it's about."

What it's all about is upholding patriotic values and honoring those who lost their lives that day on Sept. 11, 2011.

Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray said that Cohasset's annual ceremony is nice, but solemn.

"It's a nice traditional remembrance of the attack on our country," said Dockray.

Following the clergy prayers, church bells are rung and a memorial wreath is laid, followed by the playing of Taps. Afterward, folks who attended the ceremony were invited to a reception at the firehouse.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the observance had a fairly large attendance.

"It was nice to see the turnout this year; it looked like it doubled from last year," said Milanoski.

Wigmore estimated that around 75 people attended the ceremony, which is a decent amount considering it was held in the middle of the workweek.

"People who were going by were pulling over and stopping" to join in the observance, said Wigmore. "We had good representation from everybody" from various town departments, he added. "We'd like to see more people, but it was a work day."

The Sons of the American Legion commander said that he would like to see more students get involved.

"I wish the kids from the school would be able to come down," said Wigmore. "It's important to teach our children what it's all about."

The town manager noted that there were quite a few youth in attendance.

"There were a lot of younger people that attended, including some high school kids, which was nice to see," said Milanoski.

Wigmore hopes to keep the tradition alive by continuing to hold a 9/11 ceremony every year.

"We've kept it going, and we'll keep it going in the future," Wigmore said.

AG says board broke the OML

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A member of the Board of Selectmen was vindicated in an Open Meeting Complaint she filed against her fellow board members.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby filed a complaint with the State Attorney General's Office on Feb. 8, 2013 alleging that the board convened in an illegal closed session on Dec. 18, 2012 and also failed to list the meeting's topics in specificity. The topics the board discussed in executive were not appropriate for executive session, according to the complaint.

Gjesteby's complaint originated when the selectmen discussed an email leak in executive session. Gjesteby had forwarded an email written by Town Counsel to a colleague, and the selectmen discussed whether or not this was a breach of attorney-client privileged information.

The selectmen reported the incident to the State Ethics Commission in January, and Gjesteby followed up with her Open Meeting Law (OML) complaint. The ethics board stated in a July letter that they would take no further action on the email leak matter.

In regards to the OML, the state sided with Gjesteby.

"Following our review, we find that the Board violated the Open Meeting Law by failing to identify which union and/or nonunion personnel it would be discussing in executive session on December 18, 2012, and by discussing a topic in executive session that should have been discussed in open session," Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Sclarsic stated in his response letter to Paul Carlson, who was chair at the time of the violation.

What's the remedy for violating the OML?

The first step is admitting to a violation. The AG's office urged the board to review the Dec. 18 executive session minutes and release the portions that should have been discussed publicly. The review must occur within 30 days of receiving notice; then the selectmen must certify, in writing, that they completed the review.

Furthermore, the selectmen must try harder to uphold the OML from now on.

"We order immediate and future compliance with the Open Meeting Law, and caution the Board that future similar violations may be considered evidence of intent to violate the Law," Sclarsic wrote.

The selectmen underwent an OML presentation by Town Counsel Lou Ross and DeRensis during their Tuesday, Sept. 3 meeting. They were told that, when in doubt, they should discuss everything in open session to avoid tripping the OML.

BEST SCHOOLS

Cohasset ranked no. 25

Once again, Cohasset has made Boston magazine's list of Best Schools.

The Cohasset school district was ranked number 25 out of 147 districts in the magazine's annual Best Schools issue, which hit newsstands recently.

The magazine spent months compiling data released by the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, which included information on schools in 147 communities. The schools in municipalities were ranked in 20 different categories, including average class size, student-to-teacher ratio, rates of college acceptance, as well as SAT and MCAS test scores.

Cohasset is in good company with its neighboring towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Norwell and Scituate, all of which landed in the top 50.

with the police and fire chiefs.

"We want to keep politics out of it," said Wigmore. "That's not what it's about."

What it's all about is upholding patriotic values and honoring those who lost their lives that day on Sept. 11, 2011.

Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray said that Cohasset's annual ceremony is nice, but solemn.

"It's a nice traditional remembrance of the attack on our country," said Dockray.

Following the clergy prayers, church bells are rung and a memorial wreath is laid, followed by the playing of Taps. Afterward, folks who attended the ceremony were invited to a reception at the firehouse.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the observance had a fairly large attendance.

"It was nice to see the turnout this year; it looked like it doubled from last year," said Milanoski.

Wigmore estimated that around 75 people attended the ceremony, which is a decent amount considering it was held in the middle of the workweek.

"People who were going by were pulling over and stopping" to join in the observance, said Wigmore. "We had good representation from everybody" from various town departments, he added. "We'd like to see more people, but it was a work day."

The Sons of the American Legion commander said that he would like to see more students get involved.

"I wish the kids from the school would be able to come down," said Wigmore. "It's important to teach our children what it's all about."

The town manager noted that there were quite a few youth in attendance.

"There were a lot of younger people that attended, including some high school kids, which was nice to see," said Milanoski.

Wigmore hopes to keep the tradition alive by continuing to hold a 9/11 ceremony every year.

"We've kept it going, and we'll keep it going in the future," Wigmore said.

CASP informational meeting Sunday

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Remembering

Hi there, Cohasset. I want to keep this opening short this week as really, this past week has reminded us again how precious and borrowed life is and, how all these years later, we will "NEVER, EVER FORGET!" My thoughts are with the families of those who lost loved ones several years ago during the horrific events of 9/11.

UMass Boston

The following Cohasset residents were among the 2,800 students from the University of Massachusetts Boston who made the spring 2013 dean's list: Andrew Bell, and Taylor Bukowski. Great work!

Roxbury Latin

Hats off to Myles Garbarini of Cohasset, who graduated from The Roxbury Latin School cum laude. RL awarded Myles with the Richard A. Berenberg Prize, which is given to a student who possesses a "generosity of spirit and concern for others." Myles also played tennis, sang in the Glee Club, acted, and served as an editor of the yearbook. He is currently a freshman at Yale.

CHS Class of '73 reunion

Hey this is hot off the press! Cohasset High School Class of '73 40th reunion will take place at 6 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 21, at the Lightkeepers House on Cohasset Harbor.

For more information, email marycotterengels@gmail.com, checkout the Facebook page at: facebook.com/CHS73Reunion or call 508-944-7013.

Calling all scouts!

• Cohasset Cub Scout Pack 38 will be holding a registration night on Monday, Sept. 16, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Cub Scouting is open to any boy in grades one through five who is interested in scouting skills, games, crafts, and sports.

New and old scouts are welcome to stop by to register for the upcoming year, enter the pack contest to win scouting gadgets, or simply stop by to learn more about Cub Scouting in Cohasset. Contact Linda Farrag 781-383-9519 with any questions.

• Can't wait to make new friends and learn a new outdoor skill, create an artistic masterpiece, try a science experiment and help the community? At Girl Scouts, members can make friends and have a variety of new experiences that show how exciting the world can be.

Can't wait to make every day the best day ever? Become a Girl Scout. Join now at hergirlscouts.org or learn more at the following free registration event.

Cohasset Girl Scout fall sign-up will take place at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 17, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Girl Scout membership fee is $25 for 2013-2014.

For more information, visit www.hergirlscouts.org.

CASP meeting

The Cohasset ASP (Appalachia Service Project), now planning its 27th mission trip will hold an Information Meeting this Sunday, Sept. 15, at 8 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall). Leaders will share an overview of the 2014 journey and what's involved in the preparation, hand out the Cohasset ASP 2014 Handbook including all forms necessary for registration and provide time for Q&A. The trip is open to all ninth-graders and older (including college and adult advisors). Parents should attend this meeting as well. After nine months of training and fundraisers, the dates for the trip itself will be June 28 through July 6. For more information, visit: CohassetASP.org.

Movie event

On Monday, Sept 16th at 12 noon, the Cohasset Elder Affairs will show the movie, The Way, staring Martin Sheen. When his son dies while hiking in the Camino De Santiago pilgrimage route in the Pyrenees, a grieving father flies to France to claim the remains. Looking for insights into his estranged child's life, he decides to complete the 500-mile trek to Spain. The movie will take place at Three North Main Street. Bring your own lunch and the CEA will provide soft drinks and popcorn. Transportation is available and you may call 781-383-9112 if you need a ride.

Yoga

Don't miss this! Soma Systems is coming this Sunday, Sept 15th from 3-5 pm to the Balance Studio, 16 Depot Court and will be offering their class in Holistic Self Bodywork. This Introduction to Soma Self Bodywork is such a specialty and allows you to refine your yoga practice, using their products such as balls and rollers, and includes introductory and post-assessment. Soma System is a holistic self-bodywork practice premised on myofascial release, trigger point therapy, and mindfulness meditation. It sounds like an amazing experience for all who can take part in it. Enjoy!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Transitioning into 'school mode'

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

The first week brought with it what most would expect; reunions, excitement, and a bit of controlled chaos.

After a wondrous summer that, of course, did not last quite as long as many had hoped, the students of CHS have experienced that inevitable mass migration from sandy beaches to lively classrooms. While some contrarians still helplessly grip to the carefree summer mind state, most of us have transitioned into "school mode."

The first week brought with it what most would expect; reunions, excitement, and a bit of controlled chaos. With throngs of students mobbing the guidance offices to fine-tune their schedules, there was no shortage of schedule swapping in the first few days. As everything has begun to settle in, the potential and promise of this school year has become apparent.

We seniors, not yet ensnared in the stressful maze of college applications, are prepared to make our last year at Cohasset High a memorable one. Planning is already underway for spirit week, pep rallies, and homecoming, all of which will culminate in the final week of September. On the other end of the spectrum, the CHS freshmen are still adapting and getting used to the school. Sophomores and juniors, already seasoned vets, must prepare for important years as far as academic workload.

There are some notable changes at CHS that are worth pointing out. A slew of new classes, from Computer Science, to Video Production, to Origins of Modern Language offer new opportunities for students looking to explore new ideas and concepts. New computers have brought both amazement and technological frustration. A brand new "Utility Period" on Thursday mornings gives students 40 minutes of in-school time to get extra help from teachers, and meet with clubs. Lastly, and much to the chagrin of many CHSers, 10 minutes have been added to the school day, delaying the much-awaited ringing of the school bell to 2:10 p.m. Admittedly, those extra 10 minutes seem like an eternity at the end of a long school day.

What won't last an eternity, however, is the time for seniors here at CHS. As we head into our last year, one which we know will be emotional, exciting, and of course filled with diligent studying, we are excited by what we see at CHS.

So hold on to that last bit of summer folks, and until next time, keep it classy Cohasset.

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

EVENT

Firefighters fundraise for charity

Fill-the-Boot, Touch-a-Truck events

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Once again, it's time to help fill the boot and touch a truck.

Fresh on the heels of the annual Labor Day weekend Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) Telethon comes a Cohasset Fire Department event that seeks to raise funds and awareness for the worldwide research organization.

Cohasset firefighters are volunteering their time to host a Fill-the-Boot drive for the MDA on Sept. 19-22 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on all four days at Stop & Shop.

Kids can also come out to Touch-a-Truck. The firefighters will bring an engine and their gear to Stop & Shop for children to check out. They can try on the gear and sit behind the wheel of the truck.

"They can climb up in the truck and take a picture," said Cohasset firefighter Lieutenant Rob Forde, who has spearheaded the event every year for the past seven. He said the event is fun for all involved. "You forget how awe-inspired a kid can be."

The fire department participates in the charity drive through the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) each year. The department has done a few drives this year at Shaw's and the South Shore Music Circus. So far, $2400 has been raised for the MDA. Forde said the goal is $4200. Any donation amount is appreciated.

While the IAFF has been raising funds to help families facing muscular dystrophy for decades, the issue is close to home for many Cohasseters. Forde has become quite the advocate for the cause because of one very special family in town.

The Smith brothers of Cohasset, 11-year-old Gregory and 8-year-old Daniel, have both had neuromuscular diseases since they were little and have been MDA ambassadors since they were in fourth and first grade, respectively. The Smith boys participate in both the MDA telethon and the Fill-the-Boot drive every year.

Daniel said that Fill-the-Boot is a lot of fun, especially with the fire truck.

"We got to sit in it and take a picture," the eight-year-old said. "We also got to put on [Rob's] equipment, which is really, really big."

Daniel also enjoys his role as an MDA ambassador. "I'm happy to raise money for the MDA," he said, adding that part of being an ambassador means he gets to "talk to people." Daniel and his big brother attend various events and make speeches for the organization.

The monies raised help fund research as well as the MDA's annual summer camp in New Hampshire for kids with muscular dystrophy. Daniel said he has been attending camp since he was 6.

"It's very cool," said Daniel.

Gregory and Daniel's mother, Sharon, said that she is grateful to Forde for all he has done for both the MDA and her children.

"We're so lucky to have Rob in this town as a firefighter," said Sharon. "He uses his days off to raise money for the MDA, which supports my children to go to a fantastic summer camp in New Hampshire for a week; plus the MDA does research on muscle disease. Rob is out there in the heat raising money for this... he's a very special guy, a special firefighter, and a special person. He's very supportive and outgoing and caring for the children."

Forde said that the event is a good one to be part of anyway, with or without a local connection. "It's a great thing anyway; it's one of those situations that's a win-win deal," for the opportunity to interface with the community and raise money for a worthy cause, Forde explained.

Getting to know the Smith family has only cemented Forde's involvement.

"I would've done it anyway, but the Smith family motivated [me]," said Forde. "They're very inspiring."

Forde said that he and at least one other firefighter from the department will be at Stop & Shop from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. all four days of the event. So far two of his colleagues have signed up to help: Jamie Boudreau and Kevin Silva. None of the firefighters on the scene are getting paid to be there, but donate their free time to raising funds and awareness for a cause they believe in.

Forde said he's happy to help.

"I'm happy to be doing the fundraiser," said the lieutenant. "It's a positive thing."

Fill-the-Boot facts

The International Association of Fire Fighters' (IAFF) Fill-the-Boot campaign for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) is a time-honored summer fundraising tradition. Each year, members of hundreds of IAFF locals across the country invite the public at intersections, malls and sporting events to fill a firefighter's boot with donations for MDA. And, in the spirit of service and friendly competition, firefighters vie to raise the most money for MDA.
Founded by the late fire fighter George Graney, Fill-the-Boot began in 1953 when a friend, Charlie Crowley, approached Graney in South Boston. Crowley needed money to take care of his two sons with muscular dystrophy, so Graney rounded up 20 fire fighters and started a door-to-door canister drive, raising $5,000. Since taking up the MDA cause nationwide in 1954, firefighters have raised nearly $375 million for MDA's lifesaving research, services and information programs. In 2011, Fill-the-Boot campaigns helped fire fighters raise $27 million — the highest yearly contribution from an MDA sponsor. The IAFF is MDA's largest sponsor.

About the MDA:

The MDA is the world's largest nongovernmental sponsor of research seeking the causes of, and effective treatments for, neuromuscular diseases such as muscular dystrophy and ALS (amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease). The Association also provides comprehensive health care and support services, advocacy and education.
MDA combats neuromuscular diseases through programs of worldwide research, comprehensive medical and support services, and far-reaching professional and public health education. With national headquarters in Tucson, MDA has more than 200 local offices across the country, sponsors some 200 medical clinics and supports more than 300 research projects around the world.
The Association's comprehensive services program includes diagnostic and follow-up medical consultations, flu shots, support groups, MDA summer camps for youngsters, a national medical equipment program, assistance with equipment repairs and modifications, and resource referrals.
Through its national advocacy program, MDA works to make life better for people with muscular dystrophy and related muscle diseases by providing representation in matters of public policy and research advancement, nationally and internationally; and facilitating active involvement in these areas by the people it serves.

Environmental Forum Wednesday

Watershed focus of event

Balancing the future needs of people living in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset with the needs of the environment is the topic of the second Environmental Forum, which will be held on at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 18, at the South Shore Country Club.

Aquarion Water Company, in partnership with the Weir River Estuary Park Committee and other area conservation groups has committed to hosting a series of environmental forums to educate and strengthen the local network of watershed partners, identify common interests, and prioritize activities.

Samantha Woods, Executive Director of the North and South River Watershed Association and a founder of the Weir River Watershed Association will be the keynote speaker on Sept. 18. Woods will provide examples from Scituate, which has been successful in balancing the needs of people and nature.

At 15,000 acres, the Weir River Watershed makes up one of the largest ecosystems in the Boston Harbor area. It is also one of the most productive, distinguished by its ecological as well as economic contributions to the region. The Weir River extends approximately 5.5 miles and runs through Hingham from Accord Pond to the Weir River Estuary and out to Hingham Bay.

The state has designated the watershed as a stressed basin and the estuary as an area of critical environmental concern. Organizers of the event note that residents of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset, who obtain their water from Accord Pond and eight wells within the watershed, have long displayed a commitment to understanding and protecting the resource.

Other sponsors include the Hingham Land Conservation Trust, Hull Land Conservation Trust, Straits Pond Watershed Association, Weir River Estuary Park Committee and Weir River Watershed Association. More information about the Weir River Watershed Matters campaign, including a video from the first workshop, is available at: weirriverwatershedmatters.com.

Residents are invited to join the conversation and can RSVP to Ronit Goldstein at rgoldstein@aquarion.com. The first forum, held last July, attracted over 100 residents.

Historical Society clambake Saturday

As part of the organization's 85th birthday celebration, the society is reviving the tradition on Saturday, Sept. 14 with a clambake at Sandy Beach. The event benefits the Cohasset Historical Society, allowing them to provide the community with programs and exhibits highlighting the rich history of Cohasset. Call 781-383-1434 or visit: cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

RENAISSANCE COOKING

Prepared fresh for families

Market vendor takes guesswork out of healthy eating

By Mary Jane Hanron
mhanron@wickedlocal.com

It all started with the pickle, according to Julia Swartz.

She is one half of the Renaissance Cooking duo, a farmers market vendor that features foods grown in local gardens and items prepared in a local kitchen each week. The colorful array of edibles ready for purchase is the culmination of a desire held by Swartz and husband Rick Fagnant to help patrons create a unique menu of exceptional food for any occasion.

The search for a pickle without preservatives or dyes inspired the couple to cultivate their own pickling cucumbers.

"It all grew from there," she said. "We made three kinds of pickles and (added fresh side dishes that change weekly)."

Approaching the table at the farmers market, shoppers can choose from jars containing treats like pickles, hot pepper jelly, zucchini relish, ginger lemon marmalade, or onion jam.

Expansion of the menu followed and blossomed into a storefront in Pembroke where Swartz and Fagnant operate a commercial kitchen and take home meal and catering business featuring local fare.

The business is a marriage of Swartz's career in the behavioral health industry to Fagnant's in food. In her clinical work, Swartz noticed times when medication and therapy were inadequate treatment and began to focus on the effects food had on the brain and moods.

"I began to see that people who ate a lot of processed, highly refined food were not responding as others had to treatment," she stated. "We decided to offer all natural scratch made foods, canned and jarred products catering and take home meals."

A major roadblock to many people eating more healthy food, Swartz explained, was that they were so busy with work, children and daily activities.

"We thought, 'let us do the cooking for you,'" she said.

Since its birth in 2003, the business has grown to operate tables at farmers markets in Marshfield and Cohasset, a catering business and a storefront where patrons may call ahead and place orders for meals. Fagnant said though some items are prepared in advance, the ideal scenario is for people to become accustomed to calling ahead and meals can be prepared to order. When an order for three or more meals is placed, local delivery service is also available.

The commercial kitchen at 808 Washington Street in Pembroke is also rented to other small food businesses.

"We remember how hard it was for us to start up," said Swartz. "We want to make it a little easier for others."

Swartz described the couple's philosophy about food. "We want to eat foods that our grandparents would recognize," she said. "We like to eat foods that are in season so we cook that way as well. Food is to be enjoyed with good friends and family."

In their grandparents' time, food canning and jarring came out of necessity, Swartz said. Food could not be wasted and a means to extend the life of harvested food was a requirement of survival. The preserving processes they use remain faithful to the practices' beginnings, she explained.

"We want to stay true to the nature of the food," Swartz said.

In addition to the colorful jars lining the table at Renaissance Cooking, coolers stood by brimming with fresh grass fed beef tips with marinade, free-range chicken, sweet potato, lentil and quinoa burgers and macaroni and cheese.

"Now that school is back in session, I'll start having more prepared foods for people to pick up and warm up for dinner," said Fagnant, listing the Shephard's pie, buffalo chicken mac and cheese and lasagna with Renaissance Cooking marinara sauce as some of the most popular take home meals.

The take home menu also includes what Swartz describes as " fancier selections" including chicken orvieto and beer braised short ribs.

The couple grows much of their own produce. In addition to cucumbers, their harvest includes zucchini, summer squash, hot peppers and tomatoes. When in need of additional supplies they support local growers. They also raise chickens, use the eggs in their cooking and sell what is extra at the farmers market.

"The (Marshfield) market has been wonderful," said Swartz. "It's nice to be surrounded by like-minded people – both the vendors and customers. People are friendly and enthusiastic about our products. We love when that came back and tell us they enjoyed them and that their families raved."

If you go: Farmers market talk

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Who: Farmers market vendors Julia Swartz and Richard Fagnant of Pembroke's Renaissance Cooking (www.rencook.com).

What: "Food and Mood: Why Eat Local?" talk.

Where: Cohasset Farmers Market, town common.

When: Thursday, Sept. 19, 4 p.m.

Why: Learn the benefits of cutting out junk and eating fresh, local food. Through her work in behavioral health, Swartz "started to really look at people's lifestyles and found people who ate a lot of fast food, processed and refined foods" were more prone to sickness, which is why she and her husband launched Renaissance Cooking. Swartz said that next Thursday's talk is a teaser of more to come, and hopes to offer a "Food and Mood" five-week group starting in January. "I think more people are starting to recognize the kids of food that exacerbate health issues," said Swartz. She hopes to spread the word that "whole foods really help people."

Cost: Free.

"I strategically placed our help wanted sign near a payphone."

OUR VIEW

Things to think about

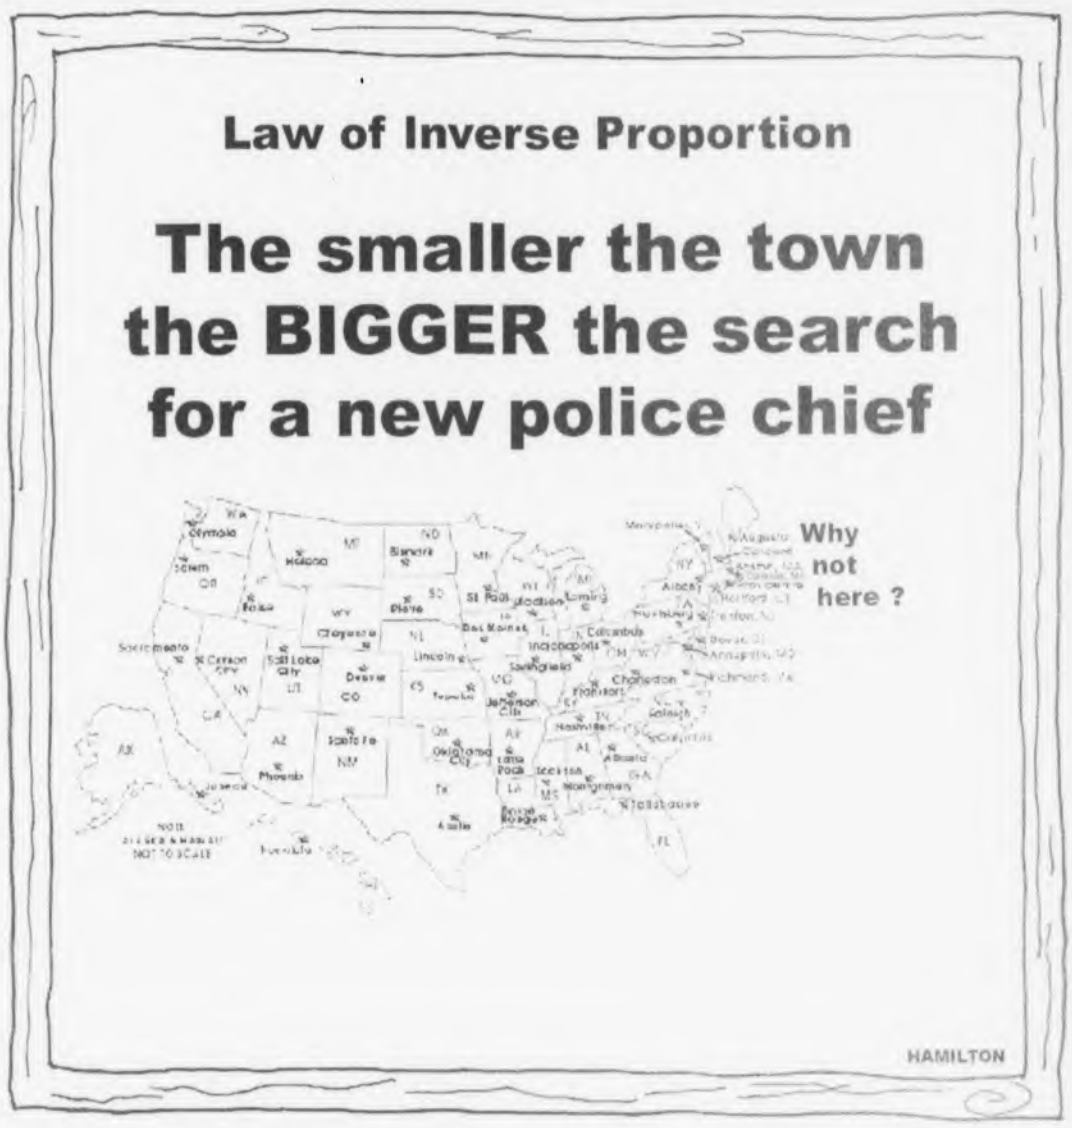
1. Please support Cohasset firefighters who are joining with the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) in their time-honored tradition to "Fill the Boot" drive Sept. 19-22 by Stop & Shop. The drive raises funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Recently Jay Tolman of Cohasset and his family organized the very successful 37th annual Tolman MDA Telethon Party in Hingham.

Cohasset also has two young MDA ambassadors, the Smith brothers, 11-year-old Gregory and 8-year-old Daniel, who participate in both the MDA telethon and the Fill-the-Boot drive every year.

Cohasset can be proud it is making a difference in the fight against muscular dystrophy.

2. Cohasset is one of the few towns that continue the tradition of holding a remembrance ceremony on 9/11. It is hard to believe that 12 years have passed since that terrible day when terrorism and tragedy struck our country. Since then we have fought two long wars and continue to face the threat of terrorism at home and abroad.



Taking a few minutes to remember the events of 9/11 and those who lost their lives that day is really important. We must never forget all those who got on board those airlines or went to work at the World Trade Center or Pentagon on 9/11 and thought they would be home for dinner.

We also appreciate, honor and respect all the firefighters, police officers, rescue workers and servicemen and women who tried so valiantly to help that day or in the global war against terrorism that followed. We continue to be in awe of the brave men and women who run toward danger while the rest of us are trying to escape it.

3. The grassroots petition drive asking the Board of Selectmen to support the appointment of Bill Quigley as permanent police chief continues. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has the authority to make the appointment with the selectmen having veto power.

We hope selectmen will consider the petition drive and the voice of the people. We urge them to put politics aside and do the right thing for Cohasset. Deputy Chief William Quigley has been doing an outstanding job as acting chief of police for many months. Selectmen should wholeheartedly endorse his appointment and give him the opportunity to lead the department on a permanent basis.

If you have not already done so, you can join the petition drive at: ipetition.com or email the selectmen (addresses are on the town website) with your thoughts.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reverse thoughtless irresponsibility

Three of our five selectmen (Gjesteby, Koed and Quigley) have voted to revise the specifications for Town Manager to require more years of TM experience than possessed by our Acting Town Manager Milanoski.

This despite his superb job of reversing the mess left by his predecessors; his demonstrated dedication and ability to provide excellent management; his intimate knowledge and understanding of Cohasset's affairs. The three selectmen evidently have the pipe dream that a more experienced and capable candidate will turn up, and that belief in his or her claims to competence will be realized. (Or perhaps one or more of the three may have some private beef.)

Excluding Milanoski from consideration would leave us in a poor position if none of the candidates are satisfactory (to the degree to which the accuracy of their claims can be determined). Given the restrictions on governmental contracting, could we then turn to Milanoski? Might he by then have escaped to a more rational milieu?

"Number of years of experience" surely is far less important than known and demonstrated abilities.

Concerned citizens should study Selectman Gaumer's Commentary column in last week's Mariner.

Pleased with work of Acting Chief Quigley

A copy of the following letter to Selectman Koed and other Members of the Board of Selectmen was provided to the Mariner for publication.

As a member of the Cohasset School Committee, I've been pleased with the work Acting Chief William Quigley has been spearheading, along with Superintendent Cataldo and Acting Town Manager Milanoski, to ensure that our schools remain safe and that we're prepared in the event of an emergency.

As a resident, I've experienced first-hand Quigley's excellence in the field. Back in November 2009, my family and I were out of town visiting relatives for Thanksgiving when we had a house break-in. Then-Lieutenant Quigley led the charge to our home with amazing speed and proficiency to apprehend the people involved. Less than 10 minutes had passed between the time Quigley and the other involved officers received the call and the time that the suspects were in police custody. Thanks to the dedication and professionalism of officers like William Quigley, Cohasset will remain a safe and wonderful place to live. Quigley and the others officers will always have our respect and gratitude.

Cohasset is blessed with talented residents, volunteers, elected officials, and municipal employees who help make our community the amazing place that it is. Let's look no further than our local talent and recognize a known-entity who has established himself in Cohasset for nearly 20 years, working his way up through the ranks as a patrol officer in 1995 and leading the Police Department for most of the last two years. I believe that the Police Department and Cohasset would thrive under William Quigley's continued leadership and would ask that you and the other members of the Board of Selectmen please support his nomination for Police Chief.

Paul Ognibene,
44 Beach St.

Lt. Abbadessa supports Quigley appointment

A copy of the following letter to Selectman Fred Koed was provided to the Mariner for publication.

It is my understanding there will soon be a vote on Acting Chief Bill Quigley becoming the permanent chief of the Cohasset Police Department and I wanted to share a few thoughts with you.

I have known Acting Chief Quigley for nearly two decades. His dedication to the Cohasset Police Department is unequaled and he enjoys the support of the rank and file of his department as well as his colleagues in surrounding cities and towns. He is well known and respected by the law enforcement community and has successfully stabilized the Cohasset Police Department over the last 16 months after a period of well-publicized internal turmoil.

Now is not the time for personal or political bias or indecision. Now is the time for the Cohasset Police Department to install as chief a loyal and dedicated person that knows the Department and the nuances of the community. Bill Quigley is such a person.

I strongly urge you to do everything in your authority to see that Acting Chief Quigley becomes the next permanent Chief of the Cohasset Police Department.

Lt. Richard G. Abbadessa,
Weymouth Police Department

Support for Bill Quigley goes way back

I first met Bill Quigley in 1996. I have had many interactions with Bill over the years, all of which have been positive. In 2003 I was one of the first to publicly speak out on Bill's behalf when he was placed on administrative leave on allegations that were dropped once it became abundantly clear that the allegations were totally baseless. I am glad to speak on his behalf yet again, though I sincerely wish it wasn't necessary.

Bill has served Cohasset well. When he returned to the force he didn't let what went down back then affect his attitude, which speaks volumes. He dusted himself off, moved forward, and didn't dwell on the past. Bill could have stayed on the force for two or three years and then moved on to another town. He didn't. He stayed here. Gosh, do you think he might actually like it here in spite of what happened? I do.

Bill has never had an arrest thrown out. I work with a lot of Police organizations, and know from firsthand experience that there are but a handful of police officers that can make that claim.

Bill has been active with the students at Cohasset High School, and has done a lot of work to improve the perception some of the students may have had about the Cohasset Police. These efforts have improved relations within the community.

Since he assumed the position of Acting Chief the department seems to be running smoothly. All of the officers I have spoken to hold Bill in high regard. There has been none of the controversies we have seen previous to his assuming the job. He is spoken highly of by all the officers I have had contact with.

One of the characteristics I admire most in a person is loyalty. Bill has shown that loyalty to Cohasset. Another is the respect of your coworkers. The Police Union and various officers seem to have a great deal of respect for Bill based on the endorsement made on Bill's behalf. If you look at the online petition supporting Bill and look at the people who support him, you will see wide spread support from a wide range of people who have a long history of involvement in the Town.

I hope that people will turn out at the Board of Selectmen's' meeting on the 17th to show support for Bill. Don't assume others will show up for you.

I am glad to support Bill, and I hope the BoS will look at Bill's qualifications, judge him by his actions and support throughout the Town, and appoint Bill Quigley as the new Police Chief. He has earned it in my opinion.

UPDATE

Free Cash certification; financial stability; fiscal reform

By Michael R. Milanoski
Cohasset Acting Town Manager

...the speed and accuracy of our certification is a testament to the diligence, professionalism and competence of our new finance team.

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue has certified Cohasset's finances for fiscal year 2013. For the second year in a row, Cohasset's finances are stable. The fiscal reforms, new policies and financial procedures are starting to take hold, promoting long-term financial success of the town. There is more work to do however, as noted in the DOR management review presented to the Selectmen in February 2013.

This will also acknowledge our finance team, which performed admirably, turning around the FY13 balance sheets and closeout reports within two months of fiscal year end. Cohasset historically has been unable to complete this necessary task till November. In recent years, Cohasset maintained a place on DOR's watch list, or had been unable to set a tax rate, delaying tax collections, because this necessary task was so late in completion. By contrast, the speed and accuracy of our certification is a testament to the diligence, professionalism and competence of our new finance team.

Mass DOR certified Cohasset's Free Cash (surplus) to be $1,297,752 for the Town, or 3.4 percent of approved budget. This is in contrast with a deficit of ($82,490) just two years ago. According to Mass DOR, Free Cash is "a necessary component of sound local fiscal management" and "one indicator of fiscal health" that can positively affect bond ratings and reduce borrowing costs. Free Cash plays a role in sustaining a strong credit rating, and the DOR encourages the adoption of policies on its use. Under sound financial policies, DOR states a community would strive to generate free cash in an amount equal to 3 percent to 5 percent of its annual budget. As a non-recurring revenue source, a prudent use of free cash would be to fund one-time expenditures, a capital purpose, or to replenish other reserves, according to the DOR.

Our free cash certification of $1,297,752 results from receiving actual revenue over estimated revenue of about $900,000, and by departments expending $400,000 less than was appropriated. Specific variances include property tax collections increase of $238,000 due to the payment of prior year real estate taxes, deferred property taxes and tax liens. Motor vehicle excise taxes, penalties and interest on MV excise were $178,000 higher than anticipated. Facility, Ambulance and miscellaneous use fees increased $194,000. You may recall that these fees were increased to better reflect the actual cost of delivery of these services. Licenses and permits were also $211,000 higher than anticipated due in part the increased amount of remodeling and new homes that were permitted.

Bond rating

Consistent with the Town's New Financial Management Policies we will continue work toward our AAA bond rating (after our most recent bond rating increase AA+ with positive outlook) and will recommend to Town Meeting that we invest our surplus in our capital needs, and OPEB obligations in partnership with our employees. Most importantly with this surplus, we will be able to meet our Stabilization Fund objective as dictated by Town Meeting, and we will do so ahead of schedule.

As CFO of Cohasset I will be recommending to Town Meeting that $500,000 be allocated into the Town's stabilization fund to meet Town Meeting's balance requirement of $1,950,000. Further, to begin the partnership with employees to fund their future health care obligation I will recommend transferring $250,000 into the town's OPEB trust fund. Finally, I will recommend transfer of $347,752 into the capital stabilization fund, plus $100,000 each into a building maintenance fund and public roads repair fund.

The Water Commission had retained earnings of $400,193 for Water Enterprise Funds or about 8.4 percent of their budget. This is a result of careful cost controls with an eye toward the future according to the Chairman of the Water Commission. The Commission would like to plan for accelerated debt pay downs or pay for more efficiency measures with cash, with the ultimate goal of continuing to improve service, invest in infrastructure while reducing rates whenever possible.

The Sewer Commission has retained earnings of $407,261 for the Sewer Enterprise Funds, though have substantial capital upgrades planned. Their retained earnings should be able to fund the capital projects without requiring further borrowing.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank our staff and committees members for their creation and support of sound fiscal policies and adoption of repeatable, transparent processes that make an effective administration possible. Two years of modest budget surpluses, improving municipal credit and timely, transparent financial reporting support the narrative that the town is moving along a more positive course than in recent years past.

SPEAKING FROM THE HEART

The Unmarked Trail

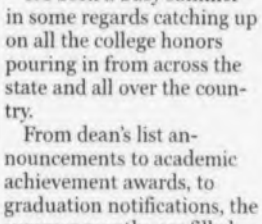
JILL COWIE

Ten miles and 10 hours after we started, we got to the parking lot at 6:30 p.m. With every layer of clothing on, we were cold.

My husband Ben and I traveled this summer to Banff National Park in Alberta, Canada, to celebrate our 25th anniversary that is actually Sept. 10. As I write, Ben is in Indonesia helping to train people on how to establish a Marine Protected Area. By way of celebration, I want to write about a day we spent on an unmarked trail in Banff. We had been doing long day hikes, so we decided to take the day off, just an easy 3-mile saunter down a dirt road to a turquoise-colored lake. We brought books to read, letters to write. But then we saw the narrow, tree shrouded trail with a sign "trail not clearly marked beyond this point." The map at the trailhead suggested it hugged the base of a mountain and promised not one lake but two. We couldn't help ourselves. We set off, books and all, only to trudge up a 1,000-foot elevation gain in less than a mile. I made it up humming the song from "Mulan," "I am going to make a man out of you."

The trail was well marked except for the times it wasn't. We hopped between a boulder field on our left, a swampy bog on our right and quicksand in the middle. Then we lost the trail in one long grassy field and another. I like predictability and this wasn't working for me. We hadn't seen another hiker in 7 miles and I had a melt down. Ben on the other hand had total confidence in the trail. I was torn between thinking he was totally out of touch with reality and just being glad for his complete sense of presence.

My knees were starting to wobble and I convinced Ben to keep walking to a popular and well-marked trail leading down to the highway from Lake Taylor, the second lake of our destination. This meant we had to hitchhike back about 9 miles to our car. His turn for doubts, but I was certain it would be fine, we would see people on the trail and get to know them and they would give us a ride. Except that it took us two hours longer than we thought to get to Taylor Lake, the trail was deserted. Ten miles and 10 hours after we started, we got to the parking lot at 6:30 p.m. With every layer of clothing on, we were cold.



Hitchhiking is a great exercise in the practice of perspective and forgiveness, and for this reason we stayed in good cheer as the cars whizzed by. Forty-five minutes later a couple from Montreal picked us up. They had just finished a 10-day silent meditation retreat. The New York Times had just published the results of a study that found that people who meditate are more empathetic. Yes!

This day was a lesson in letting go, trust and faith. When I was lost in the wilderness, Ben was my compass bearing. When he needed to trust human nature, I was his. Rumi writes, when one of us gets lost, is not here, (s)he must be inside of us. There is no place like this in the world. I am grateful for the unmarked trail, for getting lost and being found with such grace and humor. There is no place like this in the world.

FOR THE RECORD

Making the grade this year

GREGORY MATHIS

With all that happens each and every day in the schools, we rely on principals, teachers, parents and even students to be our eyes and ears.

It's been a busy summer in some regards catching up on all the college honors pouring in from across the state and all over the country.

From dean's list announcements to academic achievement awards, to graduation notifications, the summer months are filled with this type of school news as students step out of the classroom for this two-month break.

But now that summer is over and students are back hitting the books and school buildings are once again bustling, we're expecting to see more news and information coming out of the classrooms.

Here are some of the guidelines we have for getting the best coverage possible this school year. It may, however, require a little homework on your part.

Beyond school lunch menus and honor rolls, which have long been staples of the hometown newspaper, there is so much more to cover that we just don't have the time and resources to keep up with everything. With all that happens each and every day in the schools, we rely on principals, teachers, parents and even students to be our eyes and ears.

If you don't see coverage of your school, there's something you can do about it. Take a picture or two at the science fair, the spelling bee or any school event, and send it along with a detailed description of who's in the photo, what they're doing, the name of the school and any other pertinent information. Ideally, we'd love to have each school mentioned every week in the newspaper in our school news section.

While our resources are limited in terms of dedicated school coverage, we certainly would make the space available in the newspaper and/or on the website if a representative of the school or the PTOs, the special needs advisory councils, or any other specialty group associated with the schools were to provide us with photos and information regarding their activities.

We do devote space and resources to covering local sports, primarily high school varsity sports during the fall, winter and spring seasons. That kind of presence in the paper and online sometimes leads calls from frustrated parents wondering why the same space and attention isn't afforded to students participating in the marching band, or the drama club. And questions concerning why isn't there more coverage of students achieving academic honors, or being named to the National Honor Society, or participating in service organizations such as Key Club?

Those are indeed valid points, especially if your student isn't a star varsity athlete, but is active in other school groups and organization. We would certainly be willing to work with the various clubs to come up with more consistent coverage with a little help from those involved.

Amazing things are happening in our schools every day, every week, every year. So let's work together to make sure the entire community is aware of all the good work being done in the classrooms and schools across town.

Contact your local editor if you have any questions about getting your school information into the local newspaper or on the Wicked Local website, or send me an email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I can help get those questions answered.

SENIOR SCENE

New staffers at the CEA

LOUISE SMULLEN

CEA has welcomed two new full-time staff members. Nancy Lafauce is the Assistant Director. Richard Gibbons is the Administrative Assistant and has a variety of tasks.

Although summer is not officially over, activities of the fall and winter season have begun. Small children are off to school for the first time, young teens in middle and high school, and others beginning studies at various universities. Summer activities are now past – swimming at the beach, boating, and vacations. Of course there will still be time to sneak in some of these things, depending upon the weather. Seminars will soon begin at the Center after a quiet summer, as will other activities such as line-dancing, monthly book club and weekly knitting get-togethers.

CEA has welcomed two new full-time staff members. Nancy Lafauce is the Assistant Director. Richard Gibbons is the Administrative Assistant and has a variety of tasks. Liza Salerno is Services Coordinator and VISTA editor.

On Sept. 5, a large crowd gathered at the Lightkeepers to enjoy the annual end-of-season barbeque. Several Cohasset Police Officers were in charge of grilling the hamburgers. After lunch Acting Chief Quigley introduced each of them to the attendees.

We were entertained by Paul Gookin and his New Orleans Trio. They played songs familiar to us. At one point maracas and tambourines were passed out to some of the partygoers so they could join in. For one musical number Shirley Kehoe, Liza Salerno and Louise Smullen were commandeered to accompany them on the washboard. This made for a lot of laughs. It was a great way to end the summer season.

Be sure to read your VISTA for upcoming events. Be sure to make reservations for lunches. You will be most welcome.

Louise Smullen is a regular Cohasset Mariner columnist.

HAPPENINGS

Lecture series to start Wednesday

This evening's subjects will be Versalius and the Renaissance of Medicine and Harvey, Discoverer of Circulation.

The Cohasset Historical will begin its fall Wednesday Evening Lecture series on September 18th with part two of "The History of Scientific Medicine Revealed Through Biography." This evening's subjects will be Versalius and the Renaissance of Medicine and Harvey, Discoverer of Circulation. This film series explores how each of its subjects has contributed to the body of medical knowledge through the centuries. Each chapter is 30 minutes in length and conducted by Professor Sherwin Nuland of the Yale University School of Medicine.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Historical Society headquarters, 106 South Main St. There is no charge for this program, although donations are always cheerfully accepted. Light refreshments will be available and an open invitation is extended to the community to join us for this first program of the Fall season.

PETITION

"We're just going to present our petitions and express that there's a large number of people in town who support Bill Quigley to be police chief."

Paul Carlson, Old Coach Road

where it was published; they wanted a national search with the ad placed in newspapers and online job sites such as Monster.com rather than just in the statewide police department database.

After many contentious discussions, the board voted to scrap the search altogether. Milanoski decided to move forward with his appointment anyway, citing support from several police professionals who recommended Quigley for the job, including Cohasset Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon and Boston Police Lieutenant Robert Harrington. Quigley was also evaluated by public safety consultant and retired chief Wayne Sampson, who advised the selectmen that they should promote from within if possible.

The selectmen's June vote, which passed 3-2, indicated that a majority of the board wanted to wait until a permanent town manager is hired and let that person appoint the new police chief. Milanoski said during his August announcement that he wanted to hold more discussions about the appointment with the selectmen and chairman Fred Koed.

Koed said that he was still in favor of a search.

Milanoski said in a phone call Wednesday, "I do plan to go ahead with the appointment. I've had two meetings with the chairman since the last board meeting. That's what I stated in the August 20 discussion; I wanted to get more input from the board of selectmen and meet with the chairman, and I have."

While department head appointments, including that of the public safety chiefs, treasurer-collector and finance director, are the town manager's purview, the selectmen have veto power. The board has 15 days to accept or reject an appointment, according to Cohasset's Town Manager Act. It is customary for the board to vote to waive the 15-day veto period, which is something the petitioners for Quigley hope the board will do once the appointment is made.

"That's the way it should be done," said former selectmen chair Carlson.

Petitioners urge folks to sign the petition and also email or call Koed to voice their support for Quigley. In addition to an email campaign, the petitioners spent the past weekend seeking votes in various parts of town, including the dump and last Friday's football game.

Apparently, some of the football game attendees were displeased with the petitioners' presence. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said during Wednesday's School Committee meeting that she got some unhappy calls about the matter.

Cataldo explained that the group of petitioners asked her if they could set up a table at the game, and she consented because she viewed the activity as non-political and agreed with the sentiment behind the petition.

"I know this petition was done with very good intent," said Cataldo.

However, some parents told Cataldo that they found the petitioning to be "aggressive." The superintendent apologized.

"We're not able to support politics with the civics of schools," said Cataldo. "The focus should be and always remain on the students."

There was also a bit of controversy on Sunday when Carlson said that he and petitioners were asked to leave the dump, but Carlson continued handing out petitions.

"I was conducting my business peacefully," said Carlson. "I've been in town 40 years, and people have been collecting petitions [at the dump] all 40 years... It's a way of life for people to meet and see each other in Cohasset."

DPW administrative assistant Mary Snow said that the petitioners were not asked to leave the premises, but move their canvassing to outside the gates of the Recycling Transfer Station. She explained that there is a procedure to campaign at the RTF, but that procedure was not followed.

"You have to have the permission of the DPW superintendent to solicit anything," said Snow, adding that this can be accomplished with a phone call, and the DPW can add it to the calendar.

The procedure is in place to prevent "groups of people flooding the RTF," Snow continued. "It's not safe. Our concerns were for safety. We're not looking to stomp on anyone's free speech, but you have to put safety before politics."

Milanoski said he confirmed this with DPW superintendent Carl Sestito. "People are allowed to get signatures for campaigns" at the RTF, said Milanoski. "They're supposed to do it off to the side, near where the mulch area is, in an effort to stay out of the traffic area."

Carlson said that other than the brief tension, the petitioning was a positive experience.

"Most of the people I saw on Sunday were very enthusiastic about signing" the petition, he said.

The petitioners plan to attend the next Board of Selectmen meeting (Tuesday, Sept. 17).

"We're just going to present our petitions and express that there's a large number of people in town who support Bill Quigley to be police chief," said Carlson.

Quigley said that he is overwhelmed by this unexpected show of support.

"I was both shocked and humbled by the support that I have received from this group. Although I never asked for their intervention, it is wholeheartedly appreciated," he said.

FOX RUN

"We're trying to conserve land under the guidelines we work under with the CPA, which includes trails, public access or some benefit to the public."

Russ Bonetti, Community Preservation Committee said Leffel. This led to Leffel talking to his other neighbors, and eventually a petition was started to prevent public trails from happening.

The May 2012 Town Meeting approved the land purchase in the name of conservation and open space. Leffel and Van Etten attest that trails were not discussed at Town Meeting. Bonetti countered that trails had been discussed as part of the plan for Fox Run at several public meetings, and no one raised the issue on Town Meeting floor.

Van Etten said the abutters were never notified of these meetings, but Bonetti said the agendas were posted publicly and publicized in the Mariner, and further that the CPC is not required to give notice to abutters like the Zoning Board of Appeals is required to do.

Van Etten questioned if people fully understood what they were voting on.

"If they did not know what our intentions were, no offense, but they weren't listening," said Bonetti.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy, who is the board's CPC liaison, said that she only voted to support the land purchase in the name of creating more open space.

"Never in my dreams when I voted on it did I think your driveway might get altered," Kennedy said to Leffel, adding that officials should have asked more questions on the project details. "It's an indictment on all of us in the public process... sometimes we don't know what questions to ask."

Leffel said that the White family wrote a letter to the neighbors seeking a compromise, and the neighbors are in agreement that they would rather see the land used for conservation than sold to a developer.

However, when it comes to questions on what a trail system would look like, Leffel said there has been only silence on the other end of the conversation.

The Fox Run neighbors also wondered why the CCT planned to include public access for this property when several of their other properties have no access.

The CCT's Jeff Waal said he wanted to make a few corrections; the CCT owns 20 properties and only one has restricted access. Some properties have no access by default because they are on a steep slope of land or on swampland. Also, said Waal, the other properties were donated to the CCT, not purchased. If the CCT is purchasing a piece of land for conservation purposes, public access trails must be part of the equation.

And while official plans for trails have yet to be articulated, Waal said that a trail could be placed on the upland section of Fox Run.

CPC member Susan Hoadley thought a study or design proposal should take place to determine how a trail system would work. "It seems very theoretical," said Hoadley. She suggested a "due diligence of a thorough design study that looks at all the possibilities."

CPC and Planning Board member Clark Brewer said that he doubted many people would traipse through Fox Run once a trail is implemented because there is no place to park there. He explained that he lives next to Wheelwright Park, which has its own driveway, but he experiences very little disturbance.

"Once every six months, people walk through my yard because they get lost," said Brewer. "But I've never seen anyone leave trash." Brewer said there are more pluses than minuses when it comes to living next to the park.

Waal reiterated, "We have no plans for a driveway and no plans for parking."

Leffel said that he didn't think his neighbors were all that concerned about invasion of their properties, while they do want to maintain some privacy. "We've been there 12 years, others 30 years... They love the privacy and want to preserve a way of life."

Leffel added that there might be less dissension if the CCT had come to the neighbors with plans upfront. "We felt pushed and left out of the process."

CPC member Susan Sardina asked if the CCT could work with the neighbors on the trails.

"We have tried," said Waal.

Leffel said, "We're perfectly willing to talk these issues through."

"Emotions run high, but the CPC [needs to] move forward," said Sardina. "People want CPC funds to be used wisely."

Bonetti explained that a conservation restriction wouldn't be purchased until the property has been sold. But when it comes to trails, there's nothing the CPC can do at this point; it's up to the CCT and the neighbors to reach some sort of compromise.

"The negotiations are between the two parties," Bonetti said of the CCT and neighbors. "There's not a lot [the CPC] can do; we're not one of the parties."

COMMENTARY

Lack of 'process' not reason to stall Police Chief appointment

STEVE GAUMER

The appointment of a permanent town manager could take 4 months or more, which would delay the Police Chief appointment into the summer of 2014. Should to the town wait more than two years for one of our primary public safety leaders to be appointed?

A growing number of citizens have expressed their opinions regarding the appointment of a permanent police chief. The board of selectmen has received numerous emails on the matter. Some were negative in their views, most were enthusiastic in their support.

The Town Manager intends to appoint Acting Chief William Quigley in the next few weeks. Under the laws that govern our town, the Town Manager has the sole responsibility to make such appointments. The Board of Selectmen can ONLY reject the appointment by majority vote, within 15 days of the appointment. The intent of the law is clear: it allows the town manager to select candidates and make key departmental appointments, free from political influence.

Although the Selectmen cannot appoint a Police Chief they can influence how appointments are made by proposing, debating and adopting policies, which govern the manner in which the Town Manager dispatches his duties. As of the date of this article, no such policies exist.

At the next selectmen's meeting we are going to discuss the appointment. I am sure we will hear Chairman Koed argue against the appointment of Chief Quigley not because they don't support him as Chief rather due to a "lack of process" in conducting the search. The implication is if we don't do a nationwide search we may miss a candidate who is more qualified than Quigley to do the job.

It is clear through their actions that Chairman Koed, Selectman Gjesteby and Selectman Quigley oppose acting Chief Quigley's appointment. By engaging in some political theater and hiding behind the "lack of process" argument, Chairman Koed has not had to give his reason for opposing Quigley and so avoids explaining his opposition to a highly qualified and popular police officer.

Do not be fooled for a moment by the "process" argument; there is and has been a process. Unfortunately the "process" was twice derailed by Chairman Koed's actions.

Consider the facts:

• The acting Town Manager initiated the Chief search in March of this year. While it was underway, Selectmen inserted themselves into the process by objecting to the language in the advertisement for the position. The advertisement stated that there was a strong internal candidate. Then Selectman Koed disapproved of the language because he thought it would unduly restrict the number of people applying for the job. Ironically, this statement was originally included in the advertisement at the direction of the board of selectmen.

No matter, the search was stopped by the Selectmen even though they did not have the authority to stop it and they were responsible for the language being inserted in the first place. No further guidance was given to the Town Manager by Selectman Koed or the board as to the appropriate language to be used in the advertisement, nor did the selectmen discuss how to move forward with the search. And even though selectmen were very concerned by a "lack of process" no policies governing search activity were proposed, debated or adopted. The initial search effort died as a result of board of selectman neglect.

• In a good faith attempt to work with the selectmen to move an appointment forward, the Acting Town Manager presented a restructured search process in June for the selectmen's consideration. The selectmen reviewed and accepted the proposed process by a 3-2 vote. Selectmen Gjesteby, Kennedy and I voted in the affirmative. Chairman Koed and selectman Quigley voted no.

• Three weeks later, in a very unusual procedural vote, Selectman Gjesteby called for reconsideration. Under reconsideration, a selectman that approved the initial vote is allowed to call the vote again. The selectmen voted to reconsider, with selectman Gjesteby switching her vote to no. Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby had stopped the search again. After the vote, the Chairman Koed provided no further guidance to the Town Manager even though he was asked to do so.

If "process" were the reason for stopping searches, then they would have logically proposed, debated and adopted guiding policies to re-initiate the search on terms they would have found more acceptable.

When the appointment of Bill Quigley is brought to the selectmen, I fully expect selectmen Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby to argue that they support Chief Quigley but they don't support the process by which the town manager is conducting the appointment which as you can see, is a laughable argument, disproved by the lack of board action to develop or refine any process. As my parents always said: "Actions speak louder than words."

There are many theories as to why Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby do not want the appointment to go through. One reason has been disclosed by my colleagues in open meeting: They do not want the Acting Town Manager to make any appointments; In fact, my colleagues often slip and state that appointments should await the "new" town manager, which exposes their prejudice against Acting Town Manager's candidacy.

Unfortunately, we cannot delay because these individuals think that the acting town manager should not make appointments. No such limitations on the town managers authority exist either in law or policy. The police department needs a permanent chief. The appointment of a permanent town manager could take 4 months or more, which would delay the Police Chief appointment into the summer of 2014. Should to the town wait more than two years for one of our primary public safety leaders to be appointed?

If Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby support Bill Quigley, as they say they do, what difference does it make who appoints him? Acting Chief Quigley's candidacy is valid and his qualifications are solid. More importantly, we have been fortunate to see his work over the past 15 months and all should be thoroughly impressed with the results. His peers, staff, and contemporaries have endorsed and welcome the appointment.

If you support the lawful conduct of town business; if you support the thoughtful selection of a department head by a town manager; if you are weary of the board's insistence on meddling in detail while avoiding our real work; if you support Bill Quigley's candidacy, as I do, please show your support. Call and write Chairman Koed and demand an answer to why he is blocking the appointment of a highly qualified professional. Don't let him give you the "process" argument as his answer.

COMMENTARY

Bill Quigley: A people's chief

PATRICIA MORSE

He is approachable, reasonable, willing to work with people, is a sharp budget expert, a great communicator, and does not put on airs or have a big ego.

A copy of the following letter to selectmen was provided to the Mariner for publication.

I am writing to add my name to the growing list of Cohasset residents who are in favor of the appointment of Bill Quigley to the position of Chief of Police. I am hoping with all my heart that the Board is beginning to understand that this is an issue that a vast number of people in town feel strongly about, and that we expect that you, as our representatives, will look beyond your own interests at the larger picture, and allow Bill Quigley's appointment to stand for the good of Cohasset.

Regardless of your personal feelings with regard to the Acting Town Manager and the process by which he is making this recommendation, please look beyond the politics at play and do what is right for our town and what is decent and proper for Bill Quigley and for his department. At this point, how the appointment is being made and by whom is no longer the issue. I can only imagine that the Acting Town Manager has decided, "enough is enough" and is sticking his neck out to do what is ultimately right and what should have been done months ago. I am all for process, and would have preferred that it had followed another path, but that ship has now sailed.

I have heard the reasoning "Let the new Town Manager hire his own person" (as though that would somehow be a GOOD thing.) It may sound like a reasonable suggestion on the surface, but as soon as you look just a teensy bit beyond, the long list of negatives become apparent.

It is NOT in Cohasset's best interest for a brand new Town Manager who doesn't even know the names of our streets yet to come in without having any real understanding of our town, its history, its people, the current members of the Police Department or any of their strengths and weaknesses beyond gossip and hearsay, and appoint one of his buddies as police chief. How long does that process take? What does that do to the stability and morale of the police department in the meantime? How is that in any way more beneficial to our community than simply allowing a well-run, high morale department under the leadership of a dedicated and decent person to just be allowed to do its work? Presenting the new Town Manager with as many high functioning, problem-free town departments as possible must surely be of greater benefit to anyone new coming in to a job. This should be your highest objective. Why insert a problem where there isn't one?

In the mean time, Bill Quigley and his team sit in limbo. A dedicated, long-term employee and a very decent man, stuck in the middle of the Board's war within, and the whole department jerked around for perhaps yet another year. In addition, a high morale team of employees (thanks in large part to Bill Quigley's leadership over the past year and a half), who come to work every day to protect us and just want to do their jobs – continue to be played as pawns in a very unattractive power struggle. These men (and hopefully soon to be women) can easily find jobs in other towns where they will be treated with respect and as the professional public safety officers they are. I hope they will all stay with us here, I really do. I know from my work on various committees and projects how difficult it is to identify and hire trained, good people to fill our openings. It takes months. We often have to pay for their academy training and once trained, we must pray that they will stay here. I believe we will be hard-pressed to fill vacancies if they occur, and I don't like to think of what that looks like.

The actions of this board will have a very real effect on this community. Please consider the greater consequences that a negative vote on Bill Quigley's appointment will have on the community and on his department. They have made it very clear that they have confidence in him. Chiefs from surrounding towns have confirmed their confidence in him. The Norfolk County DA has confidence in him. An increasingly vocal number of Cohasset citizens have confidence in him. For the Board of Selectmen to deny his appointment in spite of all of this support would be irresponsible and an abuse of power.

I have worked directly with Bill Quigley on numerous projects over the past 5 years – long before any of this could have been foreseen. He is the kind of police chief that is perfect for Cohasset. He is approachable, reasonable, willing to work with people, is a sharp budget expert, a great communicator, and does not put on airs or have a big ego. He has a great sense of humor and truly cares about his people. Bill Quigley would be the same kind of Chief as he has been an Acting Chief; a people's chief. Judging by how he has run the department throughout the past 15 months, he is capable, respected and deserving of the job. At every opportunity, Cohasset should be looking to promote employees from within.

Let the next Town Manager come into a community where the police department is running well and is one less thing that he or she has to worry about. Bill Quigley can then be judged on his performance as Chief of Police by a Town Manager who has had time to actually work with him and see his strengths and weaknesses.

Please, please, for the sake of stability and for peace in our town, let stand the appointment of Bill Quigley as Chief of Police.

Patricia Morse lives at 78 Forest Avenue.

COMMENTARY

Making a difference at CHS

JACK BUCKLEY

Dear Selectmen and Town Manager,

I know Bill Quigley well and agree wholeheartedly with the petition. Bill has been working closely not only with school administrators over the past few years, but with students and classroom teachers for close to a decade. He has been instrumental in establishing a successful community policing program at CHS by partnering with me to create a highly interactive series of police outreach classes and events. Officers come into my classroom on a regular basis; they instruct, they role-play; they answer hypothetical questions and real questions about parties, drinking, driving, and being a teenager in Cohasset. Furthermore, they host students on tours of the station, accompany students on field trips to court and prison, and put on incredibly interesting presentations for the entire school.

For a number of years now, we have been surveying students about attitudes toward police and student perception about police attitudes toward teens. We find that through this program, follow up surveys tell us that we're doing the right things with the students. They report that they enjoy having a number of friendly experiences with cops. They report that they better understand the perspective of police officers. And they report that they understand that cops aren't out to get kids, but that they have a duty to protect lives – and that it means making sure that kids don't die from alcohol poisoning, auto accidents, and substance abuse.

Bill has been instrumental in making this program successful. We should all recognize the good work that he has done in this town.

Over the past couple of years, Bill hasn't had many opportunities to get into my classroom due to the incremental administrative load that he has taken on as Lt., then Deputy Chief and now Acting Chief. But, with each step he has taken up the ladder, he has made darn sure that officers under his charge were available on a regular basis for participation in the CHS Law class.

Due to Bill's support, and due to the great relationships that his officers develop with the students, my students enter my classroom with one question that they immediately blurt out upon entering the room: Are the police coming in today? That question is always followed by looks out the window trying to spot a police car parked in front of the school; and, if I tell them, "No, you're stuck with me today," they are always disappointed.

I believe that this has been done under his watch within the budget, but without any line item to support it. Some of the officers have even come into class on days off, or accompanied us on a field trip on their own time.

The support that Bill has shown for CHS students is commendable and it is one more reason that makes him the best candidate for the position of chief of police. Though I'm sure that any prospective chief would sincerely tell interviewers that he or she is a keen supporter of outreach, education, and collaboration with the community's students and teachers, Bill and his colleagues have already made it happen. They have a vested interest in sustaining it, too. And they have already established the relationships that make the program viable and dynamic.

We should recognize that this may be lost with a changing of the guard. And we should make it be known to those responsible for creating the program that we value it, commend it, and seek to reward it in one small way by promoting from within the Acting Chief who enjoys, most importantly, the support of his officers.

In closing, I would be remiss to not recognize the good work of many members of the department from dispatcher to detective who have contributed to the education program I have described within this letter. But, Sgt. Jeff Treanor and Officers Patrick Kenney and Patrick Reardon deserve special recognition. Together, with Bill Quigley, they make up the heart of the program and work to make things happen that benefit the education of our high school students.

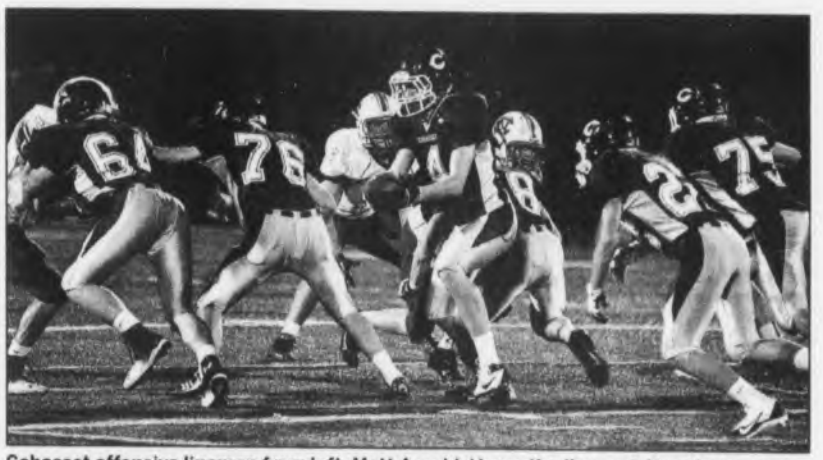
Skippers roll over Norwell

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team knows this season is a totally new format and way to make games meaningful, and the Skippers took it to heart with a fast start in their season opener.

Cole Kissick and Rocco Laugelle each rushed for two touchdowns Friday night as the host Skippers pounded an overmatched Norwell, 49-8.



Kissick scored on runs of 15 and 82 yards, while Laugelle's touchdowns covered 7 and 32 yards. Cohasset also got touchdown runs from Nick Hall (4 yards) and Ryan Gillis (9 yards).

Sophomore free safety Ray Tolosko returned an interception 50 yards for a score, and sophomore kicker Henry Butenschoen booted seven extra points.

The Skippers led 28-0 at halftime.

"We had very good blocking from the fullback position, and our entire offensive line," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Jack McElgunn, Mickey Barry, Will Lucas, John Nolan, Alex Norton and Steven Maher were very solid in the trenches."

BOYS SOCCER

Rough outing

The Cohasset boys soccer team hit a couple of roadblocks in the past few games, with a pair of losses to Scituate and Abington.

The Skippers lost 1-0 at Scituate and lost 3-1 to Abington is a South Shore League game.

Cohasset opened the season with a 1-0 win over East Bridgewater.

The Skippers have a young squad this season that relies on defense while the offense catches up.

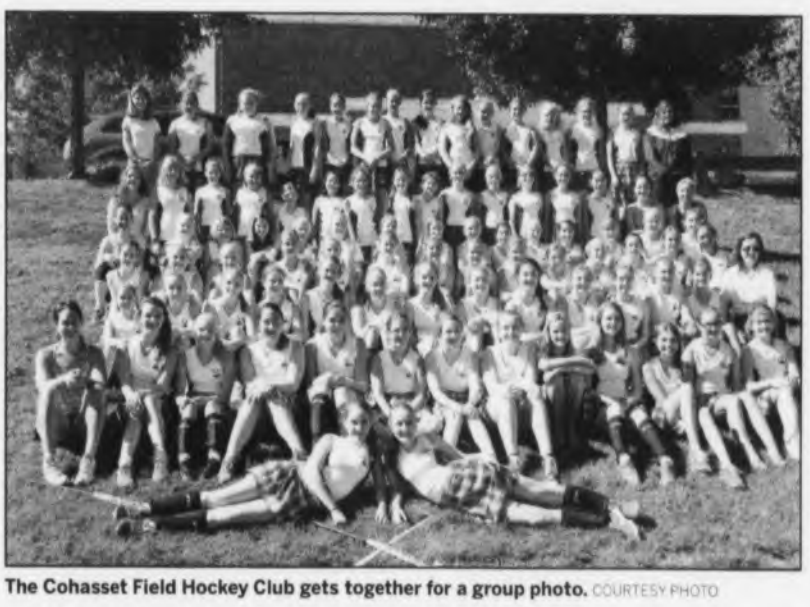
Great time for Scituate's McDonald



Trade to Red Sox an exciting turn

By William Wassersug

Just a few weeks ago, Scituate resident John McDonald was playing baseball in Philadelphia for the Phillies, now in third place in the National League East, 21 games behind Atlanta.

Today, on a professional level, things are looking brighter for McDonald, who was acquired by the Red Sox

FIELD HOCKEY

Field hockey club keeps growing

The club is for girls in sixth to eighth grade. The club has 95 girls playing this year with five teams, including two sixth grade teams and three seventh and eighth grade teams.

The club is led by eight fabulous coaches- all who have played field hockey.

Several played at the collegiate level and one played internationally. The current schedule has over 40 games including several Freshman teams. The turnout of girls is incredible as there is phenomenal growth throughout the state in field hockey with several new towns adding teams this year.

The girls practice twice per week and our first game(s) is this Sunday vs. Foxboro.

Outstanding victory

Cohasset's Rosie Cipolla and Caty Gilman celebrate their team's third goal of the game in a 3-1 win over Hingham on Friday afternoon.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 1: Teams already on the move

New teams emerge after first week of season

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

One thing is evident based on the results from the opening week of the 2013 soccer season – there's a lot of parity. There also are no gimmes, not one team that appears to be dominant thus far (that will soon change as we dive into the heart of league schedules), and any one team is capable of beating a higher ranked or higher division team at any given moment.

The first week of the regular season saw some teams put up impressive results, and goals seemed to be scored at will by others.

There are three changes on the boys' side already, featuring a new No. 1 and a new entry, while on the girls' end, the top six teams remain unchanged, however, their positions do not.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Tuesday, Sept. 3 through Sunday, Sept. 8.

Boys

1. Hingham – The recurring theme over the last couple years goes like this: Hingham and Weymouth continuously slug it out for the top spot. They get challenged here and there by the likes of Silver Lake and Marshfield, but these two teams always seem to be No. 1. This week, the Harbormen steal the No. 1 slot from the Wildcats after opening with two clean sheets: a 2-0 win at Sharon and a 1-0 victory against Atlantic Coast League threat Sandwich.

2. Weymouth – The Wildcats got a pair of results this week, but instead of coming out with two victories, they escaped with a pair of draws, the most eye-opening coming in a 0-0 draw against a young Marshfield side despite playing a majority of the game in Marshfield's final third. Weymouth opened the season with a 2-2 tie against a very powerful Silver Lake team.

3. Silver Lake – The Lakers don't budge an inch in the rankings this week, a light one for the Kingston-based club. A 2-2 draw against non-league foes Weymouth is good enough to keep the Lakers at No. 3. The true tests are quickly approaching for the Lakers. However, despite the strong opposition, I expect them to concede very few goals in the next week.

4. Marshfield – I never second-guessed putting the Rams at No. 4 to start the season, much to some puzzled folks in the region. New coach, young team, limited varsity experience for some. That clearly didn't affect the Rams, who edged Plymouth North, but more impressively held Weymouth scoreless to a 0-0 draw. The Rams clearly lack offense with no definitive striker, but that should soon change.

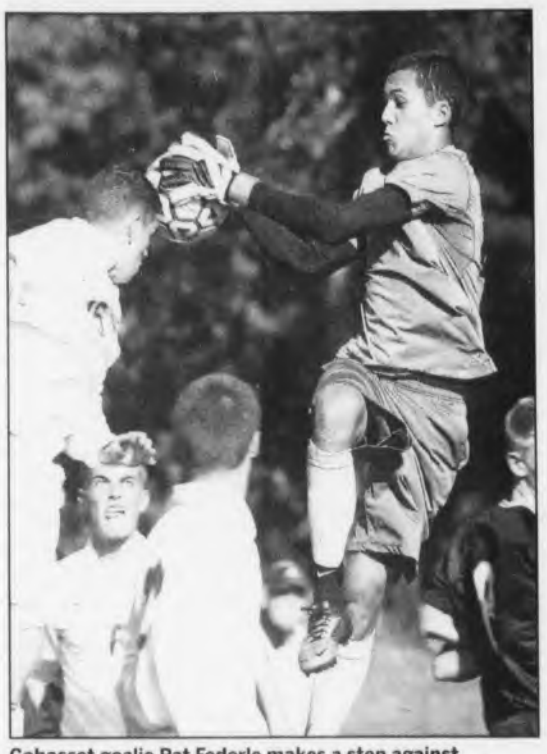
5. Norwell – Up one spot from No. 6, the Clippers did not mess around to open the 2013 season. One could argue they weren't up against the toughest of teams in the first week, but there's absolutely no denying that they have a strong back line and the ability to score, putting up a 7-0 win over Mashpee and a 2-0 victory against Hanover.

6. Scituate – Hanover's plummet from No. 5 to off the charts completely opened the door for a new team this week, and no one proved their worth more than the Sailors. A 5-0 win against Plymouth North was followed up with a 1-0 victory against Cohasset. Two games, no goals conceded. Things are looking good in Scituate to start the season.

On the bubble: Braintree, Pembroke, Duxbury, Carver

Girls

1. Duxbury – The Dragons had a light week, with only one game on the schedule to open the 2013 season, but they caused fits for non-league opponents Barnstable. The Dragons easily secured a 4-1 win at home and registered a hat trick in doing so, coming from senior Emily Weimer.



2. Marshfield – Head Coach Domenic Centorino appeared cautiously optimistic after his team's first win, a 3-0 victory at home against defending Atlantic Coast League champions Plymouth North. Sure, the Rams can tighten a few things up, but they have weapons at all areas. The Rams led twice in a 3-2 loss to Weymouth, but conceding a late goal did them in. No need to panic. This team will only get better and is quite worthy of its No. 2 ranking this week.

3. Weymouth – Hold your anger, Wildcats. Yes, you could argue you belong higher than Marshfield after defeating the Rams, and if you continue to play that way and Marshfield slips, we more than likely will see a change. A season-opening 4-1 loss to Dedham, albeit a very strong Dedham side, put a slight damper on this week's ranking.

4. Carver – Yes, even after just one match in gameweek one, the Crusaders leapfrog their South Shore League foes Norwell. I don't care who you play, putting up nine goals in 80 minutes is quite impressive, and that's what Carver did in a 9-1 victory against Abington.

5. Norwell – The Clippers were dealt a somewhat punishing schedule in the first week. Granted, Mashpee doesn't seem to be a contender in the South Shore League, but the Falcons are no walkover either. The Clippers beat Mashpee, 5-2. The tough part was playing two games in two days. One day prior, the Clippers opened the season with a 3-0 defeat to Notre Dame Academy. Norwell getting shut out is very rare.

6. Braintree – The Wamps remain at No. 6, and I guess my gut instinct was spot on from a week ago. This team deserves to be in the top six and no doubt should remain here if they stay healthy and consistent. A 1-0 win over a very strong Milton side was quite impressive.

Cohasset goalie Pat Federle makes a stop against Scituate on Friday. Federle and his teammates played well, but lost 1-0. The win elevated Scituate into the rankings this week STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

2013 Preseason Rankings:
Boys: 1. Weymouth, 2. Hingham, 3. Silver Lake, 4. Marshfield, 5. Hanover, 6. Norwell
Girls: 1. Duxbury, 2. Weymouth, 3. Marshfield, 4. Norwell, 5. Carver, 6. Braintree

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The first full scheduled week of play had a number of close games in the Classics Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League.

The Maple Leafs appeared on their way to winning their Classics Div. game as they built a 3-0 lead against the Red Wings after the first period on two goals by Marshfield's Steve Mudge and a Jim Bristol goal.

The Wings however, responded with two goals from Kevin Barnard and one by Tom Pipenbrink in the second period as the two teams played to a 3-3 tie. The two teams played to a 3-3 tie in the shootout.

Mike Bartlett of Pembroke had two assists for the Leafs and Duxbury's Harry Mathews assisted on two goals for the Wings.

The Rangers got two third period goals from John Sances as they pulled out a 6-4 Classics Div. win over the Canadiens. Sances also assisted on another goal.

Bob sideropoulos had a goal and an assist, Lou Sideropoulos, Brook Conley of Pembroke and Mike Crisp added a goal each for the Rangers, who overcame a 2-0 deficit.

Clem Fillion had a goal and two assists, while Bob McCabe and Mike Fahie both of Pembroke had a goal with an assist each to lead the Canadiens. Mike Clancy also scored for the Canadiens.

John Dunn, Norwell's Stephen White and Tony Rota each scored a goal and assisted on another one as the Black Hawks held on for a 4-3 Classics Div. win over the Bruins.

Drew Fitzgerald of Duxbury added a goal for the Hawks. Marshfield's John Zimmer scored two goals and assisted on another one, John Dougenik added a goal and Mike Marton of Pembroke had two assists for the Bruins.

Hanover's Dave Christensen scored two goals and assisted on another while Pembroke's Scott Kelly and a goal and two assists as the Stingers are undefeated in their last 14 games over two years against the Crusaders in their 7-1 victory.

Chris Poudrier scored two goals, Pembroke's Ken Wingate assisted on two goals, Michael Cashin on Norwell and John Scag added a goal each for the Stingers while Jim Callahan scored the Crusaders goal in the third period.

Dave Currier, Rockland's Wayne Murphy and Patrick Reynolds each had a goal and an assist in the Toros 4-2 Legends Div. win over the Sharks.

Norwell's James Ward had a goal and Dennis Yates had two assists for the Toros. Hank Mosca of Pembroke and Jay Faherty both had a goal and an assist for the Sharks. Mike Ryan scored two goals while John Currie and John MacLellan of Pembroke both had a goal and an assist as the Saints rolled to a 5-2 Legends Div. win over the Whalers.

Ed Norton added a goal and James McNeill had two assists for the Saints, while Mike Rober of Norwell and Hanover's Jim Toner were the goal scorers for the Whalers.

Afanasiw said it will take some more work to continue to win, but that the Skippers are on the right track, especially when it comes to effort.

"We still have a ways to go with our techique and execution," he said. "But over the kids were ready to play and played hard."

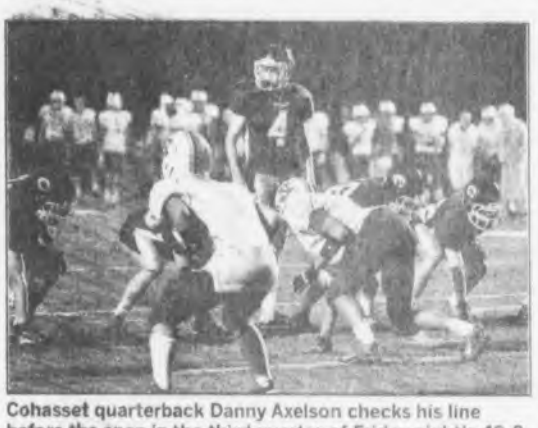
The Skippers have the week off before heading to Rockland for a South Shore League battle next week.

Rockland will open the season Saturday against Hanover.

They'll be led by second-year coach Brian Kelliher and quarterback Joey Reardon.

Cohasset plays Hull, Sept. 27, and follows with a home game against Abington, Oct. 4

Road trips to Monomoy and Carver follow before the regular season finale against Mashpee, Oct. 25.



The playoffs would be next and will lead into the Thanksgiving Day game at Hull, at 10 a.m.

BASEBALL

at the beginning of September to help the Red Sox down the stretch of a pennant race they lead by 8.5 games.

It all happened quickly for McDonald.

"It was really fast," McDonald said by phone from the St. Pete area, where the Red Sox are in a three-game set against the second-place Rays. "The game finished in Chicago and after the game I was called into the manager's office. They said I was being traded back home and into a pennant race."

Many times when a player is traded, there are questions and second thoughts.

That didn't happen for the 15-year MLB veteran.

"It's an awesome feeling," McDonald said. "Any player who is on a team where playoffs are unlikely wants to be in. The fact that I call Scituate home is really exciting."

McDonald has two young children that are just starting school in town. His daughter starts kindergarten and his son starts pre-school.

He has been living in Scituate since Oct. 2010.

"I remember moving in on Halloween weekend," he said. "It's a great neighborhood. People couldn't be more friendly. My daughter already knows a lot of kids in the school, even in kindergarten."

The kids had a moment to enjoy with Dad shortly after the trade.

"Last week was a tease," McDonald said about a short homestand. "It was only three days and then right back out on the road. It was nice to be home."

McDonald said the road trips aren't always the greatest things to do, but with the Red Sox, it has been different.

"Being a part of Yankees-Red Sox in the Bronx was amazing," he said, adding that he grew up in Connecticut on the Yankee side of the invisible line that divides the state between Red Sox Nation and Yankee fandom. "You see it on TV every year. You see the fans. Then you go into New York and take three-of-four. To do it on my first trip was great."

McDonald mentioned the phrase 'living the dream' a few times in differing contexts.

"Just getting drafted is a dream," he said. "Then you try and make it and enjoy the history and tradition of baseball.

"I've wanted to play for the Red Sox for years now. Living here I've met people and love the passion fans have for the team. It's a special feeling to put on a jersey with Red Sox or Boston across the chest. There's a whole different sense of pride. I don't want to let the fans down."

According to media reports McDonald was brought to Boston in part for his outstanding infield defense. He can play shortstop, second base and third base. He had played for Red Sox manager John Farrell in Toronto.

McDonald confirmed the thoughts many have about this year's Red Sox team as they close in on an A.L. East title just one season after finishing with just 69 wins.

"It's a blast," he said. "I was talking to one of the younger players (Xander Bogaerts) taking ground balls at 2:30 and he said he was having a blast taking extra grounders in the big leagues. It's so much fun doing it with the Red Sox."

McDonald was also taking extra ground balls with Bogaerts.

As for the team, there is a good feeling.

"Most teams are like that (players who love the game), but there is a different clubhouse energy from different players. Each team bonds differently. Here, everybody is prepared. Guys like being around each other and love the game. The game takes care of itself."

With the regular season coming to a fast and furious finish, McDonald said the attitude is one of a confident group.

"The guys don't get ahead of themselves," he said. "We take it one game at a time. After a win, we appreciate it, then prepare for the next one. Wins don't carry on. Every game is a new game, a new pitcher. You have to take a game-by-game attitude and take care of today."

McDonald said there was a good feeling after Tuesday's win over the Rays buoyed by the return of Clay Buchholz.

"He pitched pretty well," he said, "It was good to watch."

Over the past few seasons, McDonald has brought a bit of the big leagues to town during the winter when he hosted popular baseball clinics with Scituate Little League.

"The clinics are fun to do," he said. "The people from Little League are great. It's fun to bring a piece of baseball in winter. I look forward to doing it again."

ATLANTIC SYMPHONY

Season opens in Cohasset

Music director Jin Kim has announced the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's 2013-2014 concert schedule that begins with an intimate "up close" musical program on Sept. 19, at Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset.

The ASO's symphonic concert season will kick-off on Saturday, Oct. 12 with an Opening Night performance of Dvorak's Symphony No. 9, "The New World" and Beethoven's Piano Concerto, No. 4 featuring pianist Misha Namirovsky. Namirovsky dazzled ASO guests at the recent Musical Views event in Cohasset.

"Misha is a superb pianist who distinguished himself at the 2013 World Piano Competition. I am very much looking forward to sharing his talents with our audiences," said Kim. "The New World Symphony is familiar to most, highlighted by its hauntingly beautiful 'Going Home' melody."

Executive director Diane Kennedy said, "One of the unique and most-popular aspects of an ASO concert, in addition to outstanding music-making, is audiences are provided brief and informative in-concert commentaries by our music director Jin Kim. These invite audiences into the music and gives the music historical and cultural context."

The 2013-14 concert season will also feature two performances of Joyful Noise, a holiday concert featuring the ASO's first-ever performance of Handel's "Messiah," along with the Atlantic Symphony Choral Consortium, on Dec. 7 and 8; a performance featuring pianist Hung-Kuan Chen at Jordan Hall in Boston; an all-Mozart program in March; and a season finale pops concert in April.

Throughout the year, the orchestra also offers educational and outreach programs. On Sunday, Nov. 10, the ASO will present a fundraising chamber concert at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. Set amid the national juried exhibition "Cool," the ASO's "Cool & Colorful: Salon Ravel" will feature a performance of Ravel's Introduction & Allegro, light fare, and gallery viewing.

Kennedy said, "The ASO is committed to presenting the very best classical music experiences to our South Shore audiences. It is wonderful that the South Shore has the cultural community it does and that we can partner with many of the organizations, including South Shore Art Center. We are also looking forward to working with the Norwell Public Schools for our annual Discovery concert and to bringing a highly competitive concerto competition 'finale' to House of Prayer, Hingham. These 'in the field' programs are helping us build our audience and bring professional, live orchestral music into the communities of the South Shore."

This year, the ASO is introducing a separate price point for audience members between the age of 20 through 30, as well as adult, senior and youth price points. A "Tutti" subscription package, which includes tickets to all concerts and programs, is $255 for adults. Subscription packages and individual concert/program tickets are available online at www.atlanticsymphony.org or by calling the ASO at 781.331.3600.

COHASSET CULTURAL COUNCIL

Grant applications are being accepted

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Mike Reilly, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset; including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,250 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Arts Center Arts Festival, St. Stephens Carillon recitals, Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Cohasset Dramatic Club, Rusty Skippers Community Band, and individuals such as Richard Clarke for his "And Now Mark Twain," project.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Susan Keene at 781-923-0024 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.aspx. The page for Cohasset is www.mass-culture.org/cohasset. Application forms will also be available at Town Hall.

STANDING OVATION!

The coming season will herald the anniversary celebrations of a half-dozen arts organizations that make up Boston's cultural scene

By Jody Feinberg
GateHouse News Service

Arts organizations are proud to grow old, but thrive when they retain a youthful vitality. This fall, Boston Ballet, The Celebrity Series of Boston and Lyric Stage are among the arts organizations celebrating milestone anniversaries with programming that is both classic and fresh.

"Boston is one of the most vibrant arts cities in the country, and the anniversaries are thrilling," said Catherine Peterson, executive director of ArtsBoston, which has 175 member arts groups. "What's special is that these organizations are celebrating both tradition and looking ahead."

For 2013-2014, The Celebrity Series of Boston celebrates its 75th season, the Boston Ballet its 50th, and The Lyric Stage its 40th.

"It's incredibly exciting," said Barry Hughson, executive director of the Boston Ballet. "We've had our challenges over the years, but we're finally seeing the alignment of our artistic visions and a model to support them. That's something to celebrate."

After belt-tightening during the recession, the organizations are thriving. The Boston Ballet audience, for example, has grown about 8 percent in each of the past four years, Hughson said. The company, which had been reduced in size, has been restored. The Celebrity Series scaled back the number of performances and avoided more risky acts, but now has a budget at $7 million and puts on more shows than ever.

FALL ARTS PREVIEW | THEATER

Fall gets its stage face

Autumn season promises to entertain and challenge

By David Brooks Andrews
Correspondent

As the 2013-2014 theater season gets off to a fast start, a number of shows are likely to be big draws, from "The Jungle Book," with its strong family appeal, to romantic favorites like "Miss Saigon" and "Romeo and Juliet."

Other shows tackle tough, compelling issues that should get us thinking and caring more deeply about people, including those with less than perfect bodies ("Elephant Man"), the deaf community ("Tribes"), people struggling to overcome drug addictions ("Water by the Spoonful"), and families trying to put it all together ("Splendor").

September

The Lyric Stage Company of Boston opens their season with a rip-roaring comedy, "One Man, Two Guvnors" by Richard Bean. Packed with satire, slapstick, songs, and one-liners, it's a British comedy based on the 18th century play "The Servant of Two Masters" by Carlo Goldoni. Sept. 6-Oct. 5.

A musical adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's "The Jungle Book" will spring to life with production by the Huntington Theatre with book and direction by Tony-Award-winner Mary Zimmerman. The music comes from Disney's animated "Jungle Book" and will be given new energy by the combination of a jazz, swing band and East Indian musicians. The show is recommended for adults and families with children 6 years and older. Now-Oct. 13.

How does society treat people with abnormal bodies? "Elephant Man" by Bernard Pomerance reveals that the Victorians didn't do very well at it, while raising questions about our own culture. At the heart of this play is John Merrick, a historical figure with a deformed physique who worked as a carnival freak before being moved to a London excitement and appeal of the series," said Celebrity Series executive director Gary Dunning, referring to not just the performing arts, but comedy and poetry.

Although very different from each other, these organizations attribute their success to similar approaches: talented artists performing wonderful material; opportunities for the public to interact with performers and directors; development of relationships with individual philanthropists; and promotion of flexible subscription plans.

"The challenges we've faced during the recession have made us smarter about what we do," Hughson said. "We've worked harder to personalize relationships and show our appreciation. Part of what we can provide is a sense of connection and access, an insider's view of the art form and life of the artists."

Ticket sales typically cover about 60 percent of expenses, which means arts organizations depend heavily on philanthropy. Increasingly, they are looking to individual donors, as corporate and foundation funding has become less certain, they said.

Additionally, they encourage public support with subscription packages that offer shows at less than the cost of an individual ticket and that allow easy ticket exchange for different dates. The subscriptions also come with member benefits.

Lyric Stage artistic director Spiro Veloudos thanks subscribers at each show he introduces. With about 2,000 subscribers, the city's oldest professional theater produces seven shows a season in its 244-seat Copley Square theater. Its eclectic mix includes classic and newer comedies, dramas and musicals.

"Subscribers are our life blood," said Veloudos, who regularly offers audiences post-show talks. "Given the intimate nature of what we do I like to think we're inviting people to our home and making them comfortable. That's one of the reasons why more often than not I'm at the shows."

Arts organizations increasingly view themselves as collaborators, rather than competitors, said Peterson, whose organization this year created a database shared by its members that helps them understand audience preferences and with direct marketing. ArtsBoston promotes its members through marketing and through its two half-price ticket booths and online site, which sell more than 80,000 tickets a year.

"When people ask 'Who are my competitors?' I say 'Staying home.'" Veloudos said. "If people stay home, I'm never going to see them. If they go to other theaters, eventually they will come here. My job is to get them to come back."

In a grand thank you to the public, the Boston Ballet presents a free performance of its annual Night of the Stars gala on Boston Common on Sept. 21. And the Celebrity Series kicks off the season Sept. 27 with its free "Play Me I'm Yours" Street Pianos Boston Festival, staging 75 decorated pianos across Boston and Cambridge for the public to play.

"These events are fun, engaging ways to say the arts are for everyone and a way to engage the community and collaborate with a whole range of groups," Dunning said.

For their anniversary programs, the Boston Ballet has four company premiers – twice as many as usual – including the resident choreographer Jorma Elo's "Close to Chuck" with music by Philip Glass and Sir Frederick Ashton's "Cinderella" with music by Sergei Prokofiev.

The Celebrity Series of Boston presents 75 events, one for each year, and has increased its jazz offerings. Jazz performers include Jazz at Lincoln Center with Wynton Marsalis and the Wayne Shorter 80th Birthday Celebration. The series also commissioned the Mark Morrow Dance Company to create a fully staged production of Mozart's arrangement of Handel's opera, "Acis and Galatea."

The Lyric Stage — celebrating its 40th anniversary — broke its box office record last season with its play "Chinglish," a comic drama about an American businessman and his Chinese partners. COURTESY PHOTO

Some programming reflects the desire of arts organizations to attract more young professionals and a more ethnically diverse audience. The Boston Ballet last year offered for the first time BB at Home, three performances in its 150-seat black box studio, which sold out. The Lyric Stage broke its box office record last season with its play "Chinglish," a comic drama about an American businessman and his Chinese partners.

The upcoming season reflects the theater's wide range: Sondheim's musical "Into the Woods," the American classic "Death of a Salesman," and the Pulitzer Price winning "Water by the Spoonful," by Quiara Alegría Hudes, about recovering drug addicts and the family they create together.

hospital for his protection, where he was just as much on display. At the New Repertory Theatre now-Sept. 29.

Politics is not always a pretty business, especially when it involves characters as domineering as President Lyndon B. Johnson. His tough, nasty side amid efforts to pass the 1964 Civil Rights Act is on full display in Robert Schenkkan's "All the Way," a play about the first year of his presidency. Actors will play not only Johnson but also Martin Luther King, Jr., J. Edgar Hoover, and Hubert Humphrey. At the American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge Sept. 13-Oct.12.

What is it like to be born deaf into a hearing family that expects you to adapt to their world? Billy discovers there are other ways to live in Nina Raine's play "Tribes" when he meets a deaf woman who was raised by deaf parents. Yet she has her own questions about deaf culture. At SpeakEasy Stage Company Sept. 13-Oct. 12.

The tragedy of the 1999 Columbine massacre in Littleton, Colo., and what caused two teenagers to carry it out are explored in "columbinus." The play weaves together material from original and new interviews with survivors of the massacre, townspeople, and teenagers from across the country. The American Theater Company of Chicago stages the show in Arts Emerson's Paramount black box theater Sept. 17-29.

October

William Shakespeare's tragic love story, "Romeo and Juliet," with all of it's youthful passion, feuding families, vengeance, and exquisite poetry is being performed by Actors' Shakespeare Project in the Strand Theatre in Dorchester. Oct. 2-Nov. 3.

What do you do when everything in your life is tanking, from personal relationships to your career? In Stephen Belber's comedy "The Power of Duff," a news anchor in Rochester, N.Y., shakes up his colleagues and boosts his ratings by saying a mild, non-sectarian prayer on his broadcast after his father dies. This Huntington Theatre production runs at the Calderwood Pavilion Oct. 11-Nov. 9.

When three couples, who are each other's best friends, get together for dinner in Stephen Dietz' new black comedy "Rancho Mirage," they finally tell the truth about their pasts. The show is receiving a rolling world premiere, opening at a handful of theaters across the country, including Watertown's New Repertory Theatre Oct. 12-Nov. 3.

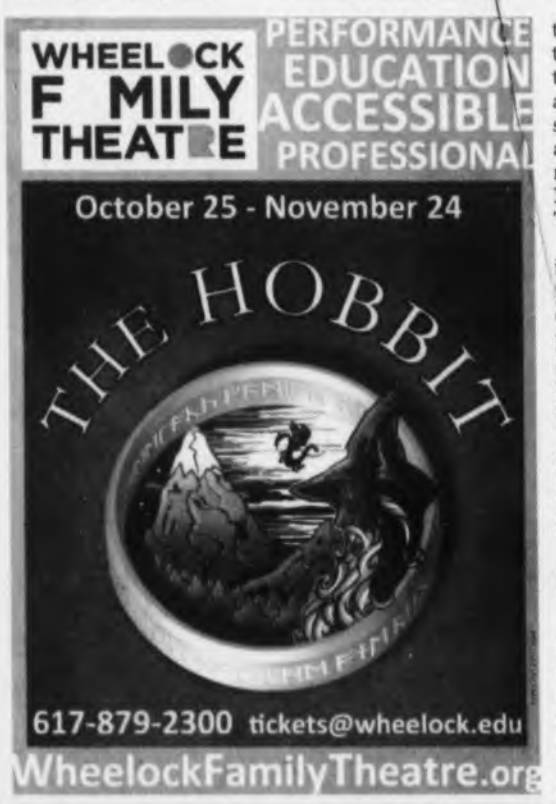
Quiara Alegria Hudes' "Water by the Spoonful" offers a collage of troubled lives that intersect often in an online chat room. Many of the characters struggle with drug addiction, and their new connections sometimes help, sometimes don't. This Pulitzer-prize-winning play is at the Lyric Stage Company Oct. 18-Nov. 16.

"Splendor" by local playwright Kirsten Greenidge is being given its world premiere by Company One Oct. 18-Nov. 16. Fran prepares a Thanksgiving dinner for her mother and older brother in a town north of Boston. The play goes on to offer a collage of local families colliding with each other as issues of race, class, and dreams are explored.

The hobbit Bilbo Baggins, the wizard Gandalf, and a troop of 13 dwarves head off to slay the dragon Smaug and retrieve an ancient treasure in Patricia Gray's stage adaptation of J.R. Tolkien's novel "The Hobbit." Oct. 25-Nov. 24 at Wheelock Family Theatre.

Is life more than waiting for what we most want to happen? Samuel Beckett didn't think so as he explored some of the many games people play to occupy themselves while they wait in his classic, absurdist play "Waiting for Godot." Gare St Lazare Players of Ireland bring their production of the play to Arts Emerson Oct. 31-Nov. 10.

November



The white DJ Huey Calhoun wins over a Southern, white audience in the 1950s to the sounds of black gospel and rhythm and blues in "Memphis: The Musical." The show runs Nov. 1-3 at the Hanover Theatre in Worcester.

Roland Stackhouse opens a business to help the world solve its indecisiveness in Kurt Vonnegut's wild and wacky comedy "Make Up Your Mind." Compiled by Nicky Silver from a dozen versions of the script Vonnegut left, the play receives its world premiere at SpeakEasy Stage Company Nov. 1-30.

A repressive, Orwellian world 300 years in the future is the setting for rebellion, love and songs of the British rock group Queen in the musical "We Will Rock You." Broadway in Boston is producing it Nov. 5-10.

An American lieutenant and a Vietnamese bar girl meet, fall in love, and then are separated by the fall of Saigon in the musical "Miss Saigon," loosely based on Puccini's opera "Madame Butterfly. In the second act, the couple struggles to find each other after the war. At North Shore Music Theatre Nov. 5-17.

GIMME SHELTER

You will fall in love with Summer

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Summer is not gone. Oh no, it certainly can't be. That is because we have one pretty little tiger and white bibbed beauty who happens to be...Summer! Where do we start to describe this young girl? Well, Summer is just one-year-old and if you have seen the past few weeks' Gimme Shelter columns, you have met two of her four babies, Jack and Daniel. Now look back up at her sweet picture. Just a baby herself, she is waiting to be chosen to live with a forever family who will give her the love and attention that a kitten deserves.

This beautiful, green-eyed girl is really quite unique and has a great personality. Summer may be small in size, but oh my, can she walk with an attitude! It is very cute to see her strut her stuff given her compact body. She will seek you out for petting and attention and loves being brushed. But remember, she is young and she loves playtime. Get a laser toy out and you will see some lightning fast, foot action! Toys bring out the kitten in Summer who also enjoys giving her scratching post a workout. One more thing she loves is keeping an eye on the world outside, so a window where she can engage in following every move in the big world beyond the panes would be a perfect part of her daily routine.

Sitting down to watch TV? You just may find Summer right next to you. She may not be in your lap, but she will be right there to keep you company and wait for a little head petting and neck rub for which you will receive some sweet little cat-lick kisses and a love nip. That's her way of showing she loves you and it is so endearing.

Summer was totally loved in her foster home while she was caring for her kittens and a truly loving home is what she is looking for now. If you have lots of love to give and would enjoy interacting with, and giving attention to a friendly feline companion she is going to be a great fit.

For more information about Summer, please call Judy at 781-534-4902. She is waiting to meet you and will be a fabulous addition to a forever single or family home where she can show you just how special she really is. Please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

Summer may be small in size, but oh my, can she walk with an attitude! It is very cute to see her strut her stuff given her compact body.

You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for the best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and profiles. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

Endless Summer is coming soon and is one of our favorite events where HSAR will be promoting all of our available pets. We look forward to seeing old and new supporters. Come by and visit us at our booth on Saturday, September 21st on Nantasket Avenue. It is a great way to spend a beautiful Fall day!

Last weekend's Stem to Stern yard sale was a great time for HSAR! We had lots of wonderful items that were purchased and many people stopped by to make donations to the shelter as a part of their trip through Hull. To all who made it a point to visit our location, thank you so much!

As always, huge appreciation goes out to all who continue to fill the bottle and can bins both at the shelter and at A St. and also to those who drop off much needed canned food for all of our residents. This program has provided much needed funds to help pay monthly bills here at the shelter. One long time volunteer, Jackie G., was instrumental in introducing this effort for the benefit of HSAR and it continues to be essential in helping us every month. Many thanks to her for showing so much dedication to the well being of HSAR felines.

Yes, we still receive the calls and kittens are still arriving so the need for their supplies continues. Canned kitten food is always appreciated. This has been one of the busiest kitten seasons and every adorable, furry bundle here sends a baby meow of thanks to everyone who cares so much about them. Mew, mew, thank you again!

There have been many donations of colorful towels and bedding as well as cat furniture and climbers over the past few weeks. To those people who have come through our doors with these fabulous gifts...you are just awesome! Your generosity is heartwarming for us, and loved by the kittens and cats who live here as they await a forever home. Every new item is inspected and explored thoroughly!

POLICE

Motorized bikes

Police are keeping an eye out for motorized dirt bikes that have been reported in Whitney Woods. Police believe they are entering Whitney Woods across from Stop & Shop and heading to Wompatuck State Park. Motorized dirt bikes are prohibited due to the risk of sparking a forest fire, police said. There have been several recent complaints about the bikes.

Outcropping

Police said a 2004 Acura ATO, operated by a 64-year-old Hingham man, was traveling on Jerusalem Road toward West Corner when the Acura hit a ledge outcropping. The impact deployed both air bags, police said. Scituate Collision towed the Acura and the operator was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

Well being check

Around 9 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 3) police and fire responded to a concerned caller who reported that her husband, who is employed at the post office, had not returned home. Police found the 54-year-old worker, who lives in Rockland, on the ground outside the building after an apparent slip and fall. He was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

Minor MVA

The 42-year-old woman operating a 2003 Audi and the 55-year-old Marshfield woman operating a 2009 Honda CR-V walked into headquarters on Saturday (Sept. 7) around 5:21 p.m. to assistance with a paper exchange following a minor accident. The officer on the desk helped them, police said.

Domestic

A 45-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for domestic assault last Wednesday (Sept. 4) after police, who were called to the scene, could hear yelling inside the home. The officers entered the house and the man's wife reported he was menacing her and calling her names. There was no physical assault. Police also contacted the state Department of Children and Families to look into the matter because there were children present during the altercation.

Sleeping

A man, who was reported as being passed out in a 2013 Chevrolet Equinox parked on S. Main Street in the village at 11:36 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 7), had actually been sleeping, police said. The man reported that he had not been feeling well and had gone outside into the car to wait for his wife. The Texas couple had been attending a wedding reception and was staying at a hotel in Rockland.

Motorcycle

A 19-year-old Hull man called police on Thursday (Sept. 5) around 3:30 p.m. after falling off his motorcycle in the maintenance parking lot at the Cohasset Golf Club. The man, who hurt his wrist, wanted the incident logged; his motorcycle was drivable.

Dead rat

The animal control officer was notified after a call came into police about a dead rat floating in Meetinghouse Pond at 5 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 5). The caller reported that kids were throwing rocks at the rat in an effort to get the animal to sink.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 23, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The changing season brings new experiences as well as challenges for the ever-adventurous Aries. Your social life expands, as do the opportunities at your workplace.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That recent period of uncertainty has passed. You can now feel more confident about making decisions, especially those that relate to an important personal relationship.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although you might be faced with a number of tasks on your to-do list, try to take time out to enjoy the arts. Music, especially, can be soothing to the sensitive soul of a Gemini.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A disagreement with a colleague or friend is best resolved with open and frank discussion. Trying to force the other party to see things your way is bound to backfire.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) That Leonine pride might be ruffled by a colleague's challenge to one of your pet ideas. But stop growling and listen. You could learn something that will work to your advantage.

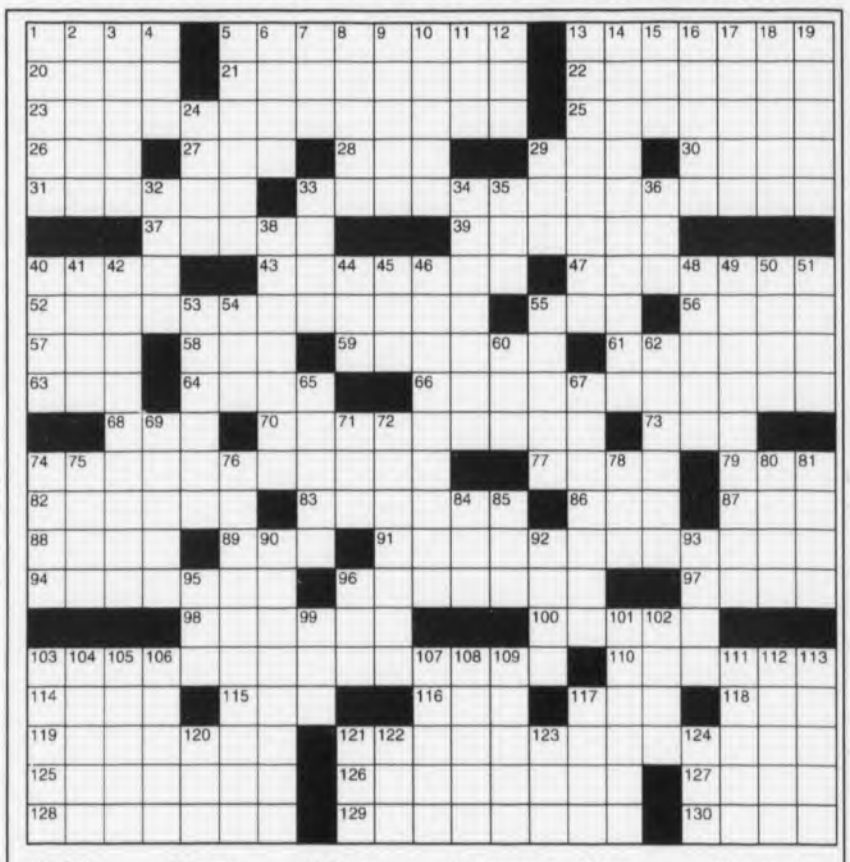
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone in authority might decide to select you as a candidate for a project that carries more responsibilities. Be prepared to show why you're the right choice for the job.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) That new workplace problem should be dealt with as soon as possible. Leaving it unresolved for too long could lead to an even more unsettling and time-consuming situation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might have to do some fancy juggling to keep both your work responsibilities and personal obligations on track. But ultimately, you'll work it all out, as you always do.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might hear some upsetting things about a situation in your life. But don't be swayed by talk. Demand proof before making any decisions on the matter.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't risk depleting those precious energy levels by taking on more tasks than you can realistically handle. Also, remember to ask for help when you need it.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It might be difficult for the Aquarian who is used to giving advice to take counsel when offered. But it's a good idea to listen to what trusted friends feel you should know.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things might be a little unsettled as you move through a period of reassessment. But once you get your priorities sorted out, you should be ready to tackle an important decision.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Chief appointment rejected

Split vote opts for search process

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Six months after launching a police chief search, the board that voted to halt the search nixed the Acting Town Manager's chief appointment during their Tuesday, Sept. 17 meeting.

In a 3-2 vote, the Board of Selectmen voted to reject Michael Milanoski's appointment of William Quigley as Cohasset's next permanent police chief.

Despite a standing-room-only appearance of Quigley supporters, who presented a 650-signature petition to the selectmen, three board members remained firm in their stance that they prefer a nationwide search for a chief, and to let Cohasset's future town manager do the appointing.

Cohasset has been without a chief since March 2012, when former chief Mark DeLuca was placed on suspension following several union allegations of misconduct. Quigley, then Deputy Chief, was appointed Acting Chief in DeLuca's stead. DeLuca's employment contract with the town ended in January 2013.

Milanoski asked the board to agree to launch the search in February. He then posted a job advertisement in March that appeared in a statewide public safety computer database; the selectmen had issues with both the job description in the ad and where it was posted, wanting a broader scope. Milanoski scrapped the ad and started from scratch; the board approved the revised ad.

Then in June, one month after the Town Election and with a reorganized board, the selectmen reconsidered their original vote agreeing to the search process. Then in a 3-2 vote, the board halted the police chief search altogether.

Renting goats for grazing

Animals provide 'green' way to control weeds

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If you've seen goats grazing at the Cohasset Golf Club or at the Planet Subaru car dealership in Hanover, you were not imagining things.

A local "goatscaping" company offers goats and sheep for rent — to help with brush control by eating all of the unwanted weeds and plants that plague landscapes.

Goats are known for their industrial-strength stomachs, and can devour bothersome plants like poison ivy, poison sumac, and poison oak — no problem.

"They metabolize it quickly; they have the largest livers of any herbivores," said Elaine Philbrick, co-owner of The Goatscaping Company.

It all started for the love of goats; Philbrick said that's why she and partner Jim Cormier launched their South Shore-based company, the only one of its kind in the area.

"I really love goats," she said.

The duo started off as volunteers at the Colchester Neighborhood Farm in Plympton, where they keep their herd of 30 goats in the winter.

Philbrick, who grew up in Cohasset, got the idea to offer a "rent-a-goat" service when she read an article in the Patriot Ledger about goats clearing a Braintree golf course.

"I picked up the phone and called three golf courses," said Philbrick. "Cohasset Golf Club called me back and hired me."

The partnership started around a year ago. Now, the golf course has a herd of four goats that live and graze on the property. The goatscaping service will be offered as long as the golf course is open.

At the golf course, the goats have a real field day.

Selectmen to use consulting firm

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The selectmen plan to keep themselves out of the town manager search process.

In a unanimous (5-0) vote during their Tuesday, Sept. 17 meeting, the selectmen decided that an independent consulting firm will choose the final candidates for Cohasset's top job: the town manager position, with no input from the board.

Instead, the selectmen are hoping to appoint one town person to act as a conduit with the UMass Collins Center, the firm the board hired to conduct the search. The selected person will be asked to review the references and background checks of the top five town manager candidates.

The board had one person in mind for this position: the Town Moderator, Dan Evans. Since the selectmen did not have a chance to speak to Evans ahead of their meeting, selectmen chair Fred Koed said he would contact Evans to see if he would be up for the task.

The selectmen all agreed that allowing the Collins Center to winnow down the applicants was the way to go, despite some reservations.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said she was concerned about the center's objectivity after consultant Dick Kobayashi admitted in a conversation with her that he was instructed by one selectman to avoid interviewing town committee members for the town profile he prepared for the town manager search.

The board decided to ask the Collins Center to provide written confirmation that an independent, objective search will be conducted. All five board members also agreed to refrain from speaking to Town schedules fall flu clinics

When: The annual Cohasset flu clinics, sponsored by the Cohasset Board of Health, will take place in the Town Hall auditorium from 10 a.m. to noon, on Tuesday, Sept. 24 and Saturday, Oct. 19. There is no cost to use this service. The clinics are open to any Cohasset resident older than age 9.

What you need: Participants are asked to bring all health insurance cards and to wear a short-sleeved shirt.

Unable to attend? Mary Goodwin, Cohasset's public health nurse, will administer the vaccine in the home of any elderly resident who is unable to attend a clinic. She can be reached at 781-383-2210, ext. 130.

Reasons to get a flu shot at Cohasset's town clinics:

- The Town of Cohasset is reimbursed approximately $15 (net) by private insurance companies for each dose of vaccine administered. The reimbursement goes directly into Cohasset's General Fund.
- Only licensed registered nurses who are trained to give shots administer the vaccine.
- All clerical staff and registered nurses are volunteers.
- Cohasset's flu clinics are a good way for citizens to become familiar with the services of their health department and for Goodwin to connect with the community. In addition to the clinics, the town sponsors free, ongoing walk-in office hours with Goodwin on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 8:30 to 11, where blood pressure checks, immunizations, teaching and discussion of personal health issues are available.
- And finally, the flu clinics provide an opportunity to see neighbors and friends we haven't seen in ages.

COHASSET CULTURAL COUNCIL

Grant applications are being accepted

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Mike Reilly, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset; including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,250 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Arts Center Arts Festival, St. Stephens Carillon recitals, Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Cohasset Dramatic Club, Rusty Skippers Community Band, and individuals such as Richard Clarke for his "And Now Mark Twain," project.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Susan Keene at 781-923-0024 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.aspx. The page for Cohasset is www.mass-culture.org/cohasset. Application forms will also be available at Town Hall.

Cohasset woman apparent victim of identity theft

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

ID theft

A 64-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Tuesday (Sept. 10) that she had been a victim of identity theft. The woman reported that she had received a notice from the IRS that she was due a refund of $6,380. However, the check never arrived. When she called the IRS to inquire, she was told the check had been cashed.

Complicating matters further, the woman had assumed the refund was for 2011 because at the time she received the notification letter, she had not yet filed her 2012 taxes. The IRS confirmed the check was for 2012, police said. Detectives are working with the IRS on the investigation.

Check query

A local bank notified police on Monday (Sept. 9) around 3:45 p.m. after a young man, who appeared nervous, tried to cash a check there. Officers spoke to the 23-year-old Scituate man who said he had sold a gold bracelet that an aunt had given him years ago to a local jewelry store because he needed the money. Cohasset detectives took photographs of the bracelet to email to other detective units and talked to the jewelry store, which purchased the item. The store agreed to hold the bracelet until they hear back from police.

Facebook

A 41-year-old concerned Cohasset mother notified police on Monday (Sept. 9) that a man whom her 15-year-old daughter did not know had "friended" the girl on facebook. The mother was concerned because they did not know who the man was, police said. Although no crime had been committed, police advised the mother to have her daughter "unfriend" this person and adjust her facebook privacy settings.

Medical issue

A 48-year-old Worcester woman was transported to the hospital with blurred vision after she was reported as driving erratically into Cohasset on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) around 9:20 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 10).

Police caught up with her 1998 Nissan Altima after she had pulled into the Stop & Shop gas station. She explained she had a concussion from an accident she had had a few days earlier and that her vision had become blurred. She was unfamiliar with the area and did not know where to pull over until she reached the gas station, police said.

Stonewall

A 58-year-old Cohasset man who lives in the area of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street called police on Wednesday (Sept. 11) after discovering the stonewall in front of his house had sustained heavy damage. Police said a car had obviously hit the wall. The incident occurred sometime between 9:30 p.m. and midnight on the 10th. There were no witnesses and no debris from a vehicle at the scene so currently police have little to go on.

Smashed window

Police responded to the Avalon complex on Thursday morning (Sept. 12) where a 53-year-old Cohasset man showed the officer the passenger window to his 2102 Honda had been smashed. There was broken glass on the street and inside the car. There was no rock or other evidence found, police said. There were no witnesses.

Domestic

A 22-year-old Cohasset man was arrested and charged with domestic assault and battery for alleging pushing his 21-year-old girlfriend and throwing a ball at her, police said. The incident started at around 3:30 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 14) when police were called to the Beechwood area near the ball field on a report of loud yelling. While they were investigating, they received a call about a domestic in progress in the same neighborhood. They responded to the house where the woman reported being assaulted by her boyfriend, who also lives at the house.

Domestic

Police responded to a hang-up 9-1-1 call and when they went to the house, the father reported his son and daughter had had a fight. Police said the 14-year-old boy is addicted to video games, so much so that he does not leave the house or bathe. Apparently, his 17-year-old sister dumped some shampoo on his hair in an effort to force him to clean up and he socked her in the face, police said. The boy was arrested and charged with domestic assault and battery; he was later released to his father. Police notified the state Department of Children and Families about the incident.

Wedding

Police responded to a parking lot accident at the Red Lion Inn on Saturday (Sept. 14) around 11:30 p.m. Police aid a 28-year-old Winchester man, who was a wedding guest, was pulling out of the parking lot at the inn in a 2010 Chrysler when he sideswiped the back of a school bus that was being used to shuttle the guests. There was major damage to the rear passenger side door of the Chrysler and minor damage o the rear bumper of the bus, police said. Neither vehicle was towed. Police said the Winchester man checked out and was not impaired by alcohol.

Domestic

Police helped restore the peace between two brothers, ages 18 and 20, who were arguing over a headphone set on Sunday (Sept. 15) around 8:25 p.m. The brothers' father had called police to seek help in preventing the argument from escalating into a physical confrontation. Police said one of the sons had hid the headphones from the other. They were able to return the headphones to the rightful owner and restore calm.

Parking lot

Police responded to a minor motor vehicle accident in the parking lot of the medical building off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Monday (Sept. 9) around 1:37 p.m. Police said a 2009 Saturn sedan, operated by a 71-year-old Hull woman, backed out of a parking spot into an unoccupied 2007 Chevrolet medical van. There was minor damage to both vehicles but neither had to be towed. There were no citations.

Barking dog

Police have had several complaints about barking dogs recently. They remind dog owners that under the town bylaw, a $25 fine can be levied for a dog that bites, barks or disturbs someone. The animal control officer usually handles dog incidents and issues warnings, police said.

Election 'sign-gate' investigated, police say

Issued raised during Tuesday's meeting

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed raised the issue of "election fraud" during his prepared, formal remarks at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting. He made his remarks during the discussion on whether to reject the appointment of Acting Chief Bill Quigley as permanent chief (see full text of Koed's remarks on page 11).

In the part of his prepared statement about "democracy degraded," Koed said during the last election, the town saw its first-ever case of "documented election fraud with phony election signs designed deliberately to appear as authentic signs from another candidate." He said a police investigation was started but apparently stalled and attributed that information to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Milanoski disagreed with Koed's assessment and immediately sought to have Cohasset. Det. Lt. Gregory Lennon respond to clarify the matter. But, by that time, the lieutenant had already left the meeting.

Milanoski referred to a letter that Lennon sent to Selectman Karen Quigley about the investigation. Karen Quigley was the victim of the false signage when she was running for the board last spring.

The signs mentioned then candidate Karen Quigley and linked her to fired town manager Michael Coughlin, saying that a vote for her would "bring back" Coughlin to Cohasset. Coughlin had filed suit against the town, seeking reinstatement.

In the May 11 election, Gaumer and Quigley won the election with Russ Bonetti, who is chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, a close third. Leland Jenkins lost his bid for a second term.

Reached by telephone, Acting Chief Quigley (no relation to Karen Quigley) said the investigation included:

- Canvassing sign-making companies, including visiting a sign distribution center in Rockland. This center is the hub that produces political signs for multiple smaller shops in the region.
- Contacting a sign making company in Texas that Cohasset candidates use. Lennon sent this shop some photos of the bogus signs to see if they came from Texas.
- Interviewing candidates Leland Jenkins, Russell Bonetti and Steve Gaumer.

In Lennon's July 22 letter to Karen Quigley, he stated in part that "after a thorough investigation and a review of the totality of the investigative facts, collection of physical evidence, witness interviews and evaluation of evidence, the investigation did not establish sufficient evidence to identify the unknown person(s) who placed the signs around the town.

"This office will continue to try to determine who was responsible for your incident, however, all logical and practical investigative leads have been exhausted and the case has been closed. The case may be reopened at any time with additional information or suspects as they develop."

BRIEFLY

Selectmen say no need for fall Town Meeting

It looks like this fall, Cohasset could skip the Special Town Meeting.

At the Sept. 17 selectmen's meeting, the board briefly discussed the need for a special town meeting.

The selectmen asked Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski if a meeting is needed for financial purposes; a fall meeting is typically held to do transfers and close out the books. Cohasset recently had its Free Cash certified by the state Dept. of Revenue ahead of schedule.

Milanoski said he would check with the finance team. If there is a need for a meeting, the selectmen still have plenty of time to call for one; the town needs about 30 days to plan for a meeting, preparing and mailing out a warrant to citizens.

"We can call a town meeting within 30 days," said Milanoski. "If there is a desire for one, it can still be done."

Selectmen Chair Fred Koed said, "If we hear of any real need, we'll reconsider; right now, we're not seeing a need."

The Community Preservation Committee also discussed this topic during their recent meeting, stating that their articles could wait for the spring Annual Town Meeting.

August that he planned to appoint Quigley as chief anyway. He cited several references for Quigley and an evaluation that was done by a professional police chief consultant, Wayne Sampson, whom the selectmen had invited previously for a presentation on how to go about a chief search. Sampson recommended the board promote from within, if possible.

The acting town manager argued that the department is running well with Quigley at the helm, and that Quigley "has everything he needs" to be chief.

Milanoski further stated that Quigley is the reason for the department is doing well. "The common denominator of the police department's success" is Quigley, he said.

"The bottom line from his peers," Milanoski concluded, "is Quigley is the right man for the job."

Several citizens attended the meeting to vouch for Quigley's professionalism, including Kevin McCarthy, Fairoaks Lane, and George Charmillard, Atlantic Avenue, of the Governance Committee, who were part of the petition drive supporting the appointment; Jack Creighton, Conservation Commission and member of the ad-hoc police liaison group; Louis Harvey, King Street; retired Quincy police lieutenant and public safety instruction Charles Santoro, Linden Drive; and Community Preservation Committee chair Russ Bonetti, Parker Avenue.

McCarthy urged the selectmen to "take a step back from the political issue" and approve Quigley's appointment. He felt that continuing to postpone a position that has been vacant for 16 months would lead to more "tension, anxiety and confusion" in the police department, and that not appointing Quigley specifically would cause "uproar and discontent."

"Is it true democratic government when the appointment of our next police chief becomes a rallying cry for one faction's political agenda?"
Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

Charmillard asked the board, "Why not promote from within?" He added that the new town manager, whoever that may be, could inherit a team once he or she starts working in Cohasset, rather than having to "rebuild leadership every time we have a new town manager," which "doesn't make any sense, particularly with public safety."

Rather, Charmillard continued, "It makes sense to promote Quigley now and ensure the continuity of a top notch police force."

Harvey praised Quigley's ability to work through contentious situations.

"He stuck with it," Harvey said of Quigley's longtime work history in Cohasset, going back to 1995. "He stayed in this town; think about this level of commitment."

Bonetti said that Quigley deserves the job after working in the department for so long, working his way up from animal control officer to lieutenant to deputy and acting chief, and sticking with it.

Santoro called Quigley a "polished individual" who faces challenges and "refuses to hide in the shadows."

"Bill Quigley is a man of honor," said Santoro.

The sole citizen who spoke in disagreement of the appointment was Agnes McCann, Doane Street, who said that the appointment should be about the process, not the person.

"It's troubling to me this seems to be about Bill Quigley, who was good at his old job, good at his new job, and may be good as chief," said McCann. "He may be a good candidate, but should he be the only candidate?"

McCann further argued that Cohasset does not "have a town manager" to make the chief appointment. "We have a town manager 'asterisk' acting," said McCann.

The three members who voted against Quigley said like McCann, that it was nothing personal, just a matter of process.

Koed weighs in

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that the search process ensures the integrity of whichever candidate is chosen for the top job. This is the principle he stands by, said Koed, "no matter how many petitions are brought in here, nor how many former officials electioneer in our streets."

Koed referred to "dueling petitions" attempting to sway the selectmen's votes and said that while Americans are allowed to petition their government, "Is it however really true democracy under our system when the policy direction of the town's elected representatives is thwarted by an appointed manager? Is it true democratic government when the appointment of our next police chief becomes a rallying cry for one faction's political agenda?"

Selectman Steve Gaumer, one of the two affirmative votes for Quigley, responded that democracy involved allowing people to petition their government. Selectman Diane Kennedy, who also voted favorably, agreed with Gaumer.

"People want to be heard," Kennedy said.

Over the past few weeks, petitioners have canvassed the town seeking signatures and placing signs in support of Quigley, although the police chief is an appointed and not elected position. According to Cohasset's Town Manager Act, the appointment is the town manager's to make.

The two other dissenting selectmen, Karen Quigley (no relation to the Acting Chief) and Martha Gjesteby, stated that they believe department head appointments, particularly public safety positions, should be made by a permanent, not acting, town manager.

Kennedy said, however, that the selectmen inserted themselves in the process too much, and the appointment became political. Having a town manager make the appointment was supposed to prevent that, she argued. Further, the Town Manager Act does not distinguish between an acting or permanent town manager, Kennedy said.

"The way the town manager act was written, there wasn't an 'asterisk' for acting town manager," said Kennedy. "Like it or not, the town manager has this appointment power."

Kennedy later motioned for the board to vote on starting the police chief search process again. Koed said the board would have to vote to amend the agenda and could do so later in the meeting. When that point came up, it was after 11 p.m.; since it was late, Kennedy agreed to withdraw her motion.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Acting Chief William Quigley responded to recent events.

"This has been an interesting journey," he said. "My focus right now is to continue to do a good job, support the men and woman of my department, and provide the very best police services we can to the good people of Cohasset.

"The outpouring of support has been stunning," he said. "It's like being eulogized while I'm still alive."

Food Pantry drive Sept. 28

Volunteers from the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will host a food drive to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry at Stop & Shop from 9 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Sept. 28. The Food Pantry now serves a record number of residents and is in need of replenished resources at this time. Donations of non-perishable items, cash and Stop & Shop gift cards would be appreciated.

Bowling for great cause

Sons of the American Legion Squadron 118, Cohasset, and Children's Hospital, Boston, will host the Partnership For Kids Bowling Tournament from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 26, at South Shore Country Club, 274 South St., Hingham. The tournament is open to all. Cost is $20 per person/$100 per team.

Send payment and registration forms to: Sons of the American Legion, P.O. Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. Make checks payable to: The Sons of the American Legion. Confirmation of entry forms will be sent upon receipt of completed registration form. Must be paid in full to secure registration.

Call 617-697-2276 for more information.

School budget update noted

So far, the Cohasset School District has expended only 3.8 percent of its annual budget. Of course, the school year is just getting started; the first day of school was Tuesday, Sept. 3.

The topic of a School Committee discussion in June, the Athletic Department's revolving account had an opening balance of over $38,000 after an ending balance of $14,000 in June. School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro has said that the goal is to have an ending balance of between $10,000 and $15,000 at the end of each Fiscal Year.

The larger-than-usual balance will soon "catch up," said DeGennaro, once certain encumbrances have been paid for. The money is already set aside for these purchases.

The athletic budget is around $400,000 per year, which includes the town's appropriation and revenues from user fees and gate receipts. Of this $225,000 is used to pay officials, coaches and provide equipment.

In June, the school board discussed how the sports program budget and booster donations should be handled. Last year, booster clubs donated around $35,000 to school sports. The new process for donations involves the school board voting on a booster donation before the funds are spent; this is to allow for more transparency, avoids extra spending, and acknowledges the funds publicly.

anyone from the Collins Center, and allow the moderator — or another selected individual — to be the single point of contact between the town and the center.

This decision also eliminates a screening committee comprised of townspeople. The selectmen all agreed that this would help keep politics out of the search process.

It also saves the town some money — and shortens the lead-time on appointing a new town manager. By not having a screening committee, the town will spend $1500 less on the consultation fee with the Collins, for a total of $12,000 for the entire search process.

Also, the Collins Center estimates that the town will be ready to appoint a new town manager in November.

"We would have the finalists presented in early November, not early December," said selectmen chair Fred Koed.

A few of the selectmen said they were torn on whether or not to have a town search committee, which is the process that was used to select the last town manager, Michael Coughlin.

"A screening committee reflects not so much the board of selectmen but the town," said Kennedy.

"We would have the finalists presented in early November, not early December."

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed, stating that townspeople "know the nuances of the town."

Selectman Karen Quigley said that while she preferred to have local involvement in the search, she had a "number of concerns" over a town search committee.

"We have such a divided board and divided government," said Quigley, adding that she questioned the board's "ability to come to a consensus on members of a screening committee that would be acceptable to the board as a whole."

Selectman Steve Gaumer suggested that the Town Moderator could be of service, praising Evans' independence and non-bias as "an independently elected official" who is "considered to be apolitical." Koed agreed with the suggestion, saying that he would ask Evans to serve in this capacity as a liaison with the Collins Center.

UPDATE

Town Manager Act moving along

Bill reports favorably out of committee

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said Cohasset's amended Town Manager Act was reported out favorably Tuesday (Sept. 17) by the Joint Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.

Bradley said the bill emerged unchanged from the way it was voted at the Cohasset annual Town Meeting.

He said he talked to the chair of the Joint Committee several times over the summer (the hearing on the bill was July 23) to answer any questions.

The bill next goes to the House Committee on Steering and Policy, then goes to the House floor for a reading and then to the House Committee on Bills for the Third Reading.

If House Counsel has no constitutional issues with the bill, it goes to the house floor for engrossment and then over to the Senate for the same process. The bill then goes back to the House and Senate for enactment and over to the governor for his signature. The governor has 10 days to sign the bill, amend it or veto it. Once signed, the vast majority of bills become law in 90 days, Bradley said.

Bradley said the bill should be on the governor's desk by the end of October.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley said the bill should be on the governor's desk by the end of October.

The amended Town Manager Act was submitted to the State Legislature in May as a Home Rule Petition as voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting.

The petition became a bill with a docket number, H.3486, in June and had a State House hearing with the joint committee on July 23. Many Cohasset residents and officials, including two current selectmen, spoke on behalf of the bill and its merits, while a handful were there to oppose it. According to those in attendance, the majority of speakers were for the bill.

The bill details several amendments to Cohasset's Town Manager Act (TMA), including how the budget process is done and also the removal process for a town manager. The change that has garnered the most attention publicly, however, affects the eligibility of who can apply for the permanent town manager position.

The retooled TMA removes a prohibition for town employees and board members applying for the job; it also changes the cool-off period for selectmen, who are allowed to apply after they have vacated their position for 15 months.

Under the current Act, they only have to wait 12 months. Currently any town employees or board members must also wait a year before they can apply for the job.

AROUND TOWN

Awards, honors for EJ Culhane

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hi there Cohasset, what's going on? I am hoping again that everyone has been able to enjoy the weather, slow down a bit and capture the special moments and take just a few minutes each day to be thankful for what we have in life. Between work, school, schedules filled with activities and just life's daily craziness, it is important to stop and smell the roses!

Loomis Chaffee

Congratulations to EJ Culhane who graduated with honors from Loomis Chaffee in June and is now a freshman at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. EJ was co-captain of the Loomis Varsity Ice Hockey team (leading Loomis to their best season in many years), received the Coaches Award for his leadership, was a Resident Assistant in his dorm, and a Tour Guide for the school. His parents and sister, Courtney, are extremely proud of EJ.

Food drive

Volunteers from the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold a food drive to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry at Stop & Shop on Saturday, Sept. 28, from 8:30 a.m. to12:30 pm. The Food Pantry now serves a record number of residents and is in need of replenished resources at this time. Donations of non-perishable items, cash and Stop & Shop gift cards will be welcomed.

Flower displays

Have you wondered who is behind the beautiful flower arrangements on display at the Paul Pratt Library? It's none other than Henry Rattenbury. He's been gracing the tabletops and counter spaces with bouquets of seasonal flowers from his garden for some time now. Stop by the library to check out his flower displays.

Colby-Sawyer

Congratulations to Samantha Lehr of Cohasset who graduated from Colby-Sawyer College with a bachelor of science degree on Saturday, May 11, 2013. Samantha majored in exercise science.

AP Scholar

Here is some terrific news about a Cohasset resident who was among the AP Scholars for Montrose School. Maria Buckley, daughter of Peter and Emilia Buckley, was named an AP Scholar with Honor. Maria was among the 13 Montrose students – more than 50 percent – of the recently graduated class of 2013, who have been designated as AP Scholars.

As an AP Scholar with Honor, Maria scored an average of at least 3.25 on all AP exams taken, and scored 3 or higher on four or more AP exams during high school. She is currently a freshman at the University of Chicago.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Getting back in the groove

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

Students have generally stopped swapping out of classes and getting lost in the hallways, as the shiny, new luster of the 2013-2014 year seems to be fading just a bit.

This is the week where sports teams begin to find their rhythm, where the homework load seems to mount slightly, where students receive that dreaded first test of the year; that oh-so diabolical packet plopped upon the desk. We can't go back now; we're in it for the long haul. The third week of school is the time when it really begins to hit students that school is in full swing.

Despite the increase in workload, it is certainly nice to establish a routine in the school year. Students have generally stopped swapping out of classes and getting lost in the hallways, as the shiny, new luster of the 2013-2014 year seems to be fading just a bit.

But that certainly doesn't mean that CHS isn't as busy as ever!

Throughout the entire week, colleges from all across the country have sent representative to CHS's guidance office to meet with juniors and seniors. Local universities such as Northeastern were represented, and several other schools, with the likes of Johns Hopkins and Roanoke College in the mix as well. Orchestrated by Ms. Creighton and the rest of our lovely guidance department, these seminars, in groups of usually less than 10 students, are a great way for students to learn about the application process, and get familiar with schools they may be interested in applying to.

With Spirit Week and Homecoming next week, the entire school is filled with subdued excitement and jitters. The student council, under the supervision of faculty advisor Kate McAlarney, has been hard at work mapping out themes for each spirit day. From American Day to Superhero Day, the entire student body, seniors down to freshmen, is prepared to deck out, and make fools out of themselves in the process. Next Friday, what many say is the greatest week of the school year will culminate with the Pep Rally, with each grade getting its own bleacher in the gym to decorate. I will certainly have more in-depth coverage of spirit day for you all next week.

As for now, we encourage you all to relish in the warmth and sunshine of early fall. While we certainly hope that you express your CHS pride daily, we would ask that you not join us in Spirit Day on Monday as you head back to work. Wearing a Superhero costume in the office may not go over well. Anyways, keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

Two American Presidents are entombed at the Church of the Presidents in Quincy: Father and son, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with their wives.

Local historic sites open doors

By Constance Gorfinkle
Special to the Mariner

One of the glories of Massachusetts is the state's rich history, a legacy that is preserved and passed on at numerous sites, from Boston to Hingham, from Quincy to Concord, at house museums, houses of worship, many cemeteries and even a carousel.

Though spread across the state, none of these places exist in a vacuum. They are all connected to one another, through shared beginnings, irrepressible hope despite continuing struggles, deeply held values, and families, all of whom worked hard to make life better for the next generation.

Because these places are so interconnected, a visitor can only learn part of the story at any one of them. Thus, was recently founded Doors to History, a collaboration of historic sites in Massachusetts that together reveal a brilliant tapestry of events and individuals that gave birth to the great idea that became the United States of America.

The notion for such a collaboration grew out of a contest sponsored a few years ago by American Express and the National Trust for Historic Preservation. Partners in Preservation (PiP) came to Massachusetts (as it had in other states) looking for historic sites to compete with one another online for varying sums of money. The goal for each site was to round up as many votes as possible, by making their own site look as interesting, attractive and notable as possible. Twenty-five sites were chosen by Amex and NTHP to participate in the contest, which generated great interest among the public and a big idea among the contestants: Doors to History.

This Saturday, Sept. 21, that big idea is being realized at a statewide event, in which 12 of those sites will hold open houses, including the Old Ship Meeting House in Hingham, the Church of the Presidents in Quincy, and the Paragon Carousel in Hull.

Close to one another and to most of the readers of this newspaper, these three sites have joined Doors to History "because it is the ideal vehicle to allow us to be more effective in serving our visitors, and because it greatly enhances our exposure to our visiting public," explained Kirt Switzer of Hull, speaking for the Church of the Presidents.

Along with the Old Ship Meeting House, the Church of the Presidents was founded in the 1630s, long before there was a United States. While Old Ship is noted for being the oldest wooden church in the country in continuous religious use, the handsome stone building in Quincy is most famous for the fact that two American Presidents are entombed there: Father and son, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with their wives.

The 80-year-old Paragon Carousel that is in the National Register of Historic Places is a beloved reminder of the golden age of Hull.

"What we stress," said Switzer, who happens to be a descendent of the Adamses, "is the strong dedication these two men had to every human being," as exemplified by their support of very unpopular causes, such as in the father's case his defense of the British soldiers involved in the Boston Massacre, and the son's defense of the black mutineers aboard the slave ship Amistad.

Suggested admission is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors and students; children 12 and younger are free. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"At Old Ship, whose open house will run from noon to 4 p.m., guides will be stressing the recent successful completion of an extensive restoration of the 332-year-old building, said Nina Wellford, Hingham resident and member of Old Ship's board of trustees. This first major restoration of the meetinghouse in more than 80 years, "revealed many long-hidden artifacts," continued Wellford.

Those include wallpaper hung in the 1800s, when the church underwent a Victorian makeover, and outside doors that had been covered since 1755, when the pulpit was moved to the wall where the doors were, thus making them unusable. Conservators involved with the restoration believe because these doors were behind clapboard for a couple of centuries they probably are the only outside doors in the country from the Colonial era in their original location.

Admission isn't charged at Old Ship, but contributions are most welcome.

An 80-year-old carousel might not seem to belong in such ancient company, but the one next to Nantasket Beach in Hull indeed is in the National Register of Historic Places, a beloved reminder of the golden age of Hull, a summer playground so popular that a publication called Harper's Weekly drew this comparison in 1882: "What Coney Island is to New York, Nantasket Beach is to Boston." Today, on that beautiful peninsula that clings to the outer edges of the South Shore, the grand hotels are gone, as is Paragon Park and its thrilling roller coaster.

But the carousel remains, spinning to the jaunty rhythms of a Wurlitzer band organ, its horses spruced up in shiny new paint, still bringing joy to generations of children, thanks to the efforts of local citizens, led by Hull resident Judeth Van Hamm, who worked so hard gathering votes during the PiP contest that the carousel was the big winner of $100,000.

"As an added bonus," said Van Hamm, "visitors to Hull during the carousel's open house will be able to enjoy the town-wide celebration, 'Endless Summer,' which includes a petting zoo, delicious treats at 25 restaurants, art on display at various venues, live music and a kids art competition. The carousel will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.; rides are $2.50."

GIMME SHELTER

Fluffy needs a loving, forever home

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Sometimes the story is short, and other times, it takes a little while to tell. Looking at Fluffy, you would think that she had an easy time of it before she came to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue as she is absolutely stunning. But there were some difficult trials between her first home situation, and now. We hope to change all of that.

This gorgeous 3-year-old is somewhat shy here in the shelter, but she is the sweetest and most loving little girl. At one time, there must have been a lot of affection and attention shown to her when she was in a home... but things changed. After having had a litter, Fluffy was, it seems, abandoned. She was taken in by a family who found her outside and has been spayed. That is so much transition for one so young, especially when she is so very sweet and innocent.

It is not the first story like this that we have seen, and we are just hoping that a loving person or couple will come to see her and bring out the playful, loving kitten in her. Of course, she will be shy at first, but sitting with her for a while, talking to her, rubbing her cheeks and petting her will suddenly bring out her gentle and affectionate nature. She needs reassurance and you will be so surprised by her purring and then rolling over for a gentle belly rub. Fluffy loves receiving love, love, and more love. And she shows you just how much with her nudges, tumbles and longing looks.

Fluffy is a very petite little girl and her medium-long, midnight black fur is shiny and silky as can be. When you see her tail, it just fits her name perfectly...fluffy and full. She will certainly enjoy a little light brushing along with the stroking and petting. And those eyes? Green starlights adorn that pretty little face. Playtime will be the best thing for her. Fluffy shows real interest in following and chasing string and toys and being able to play in a safe and loving environment will be perfect. In a home where she can have calm space and loving interaction, she will be in heaven for sure.

You may notice a little clip on her ear. Well, unfortunately, some cats have this tipping down when they are identified as not having an owner. It doesn't detract one bit from her beauty though. As a matter of fact, the little tufts of fur you see crossing Fluffy's ears just add to her unique looks. If you come to see Fluffy, and sit with her for some quality time, you will see just how special she is.

Living in a community of cats here at the shelter is hard for this gentle little girl so maybe this week will be her chance to find the right forever home.

For more information about Fluffy, please call Judy at 781-534-4902. She is waiting to meet you and will be a fabulous addition to a forever single or family home where she can show you just how special she really is. Please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

Endless Summer is taking place this Saturday (Sept. 21) on Nantasket Avenue and Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will be there to share information about our kittens and cats, and guess what? Our 2014 Kittendale's Calendars will be available for purchase! It's the perfect time to get started with a gift for yourself, as well as for friends and family. All proceeds from the sale of the calendars go toward helping the huge number of kittens and cats that come to us throughout the year. Raffle baskets, t-shirts and other pet items will be available as well. We look forward to seeing old and new supporters. Please come by and visit us at our booth. It is a great way to spend a beautiful Fall day!

Once again, we thank Cindy and Jamie for representing HSAR at the DoggiePawlooza event, hosted by Standish Humane Society, which was held at Wompatuck State Park last weekend. Connecting with other shelters is a part of our outreach and the day was wonderful for everyone involved. Volunteers, Jillian, Nancy, Maureen and Karen were all there to help promote the cats and kittens here at Hull Seaside. Thanks to everyone for giving their time to raise awareness about the shelter's mission.

Kittens, kittens, kittens. Yes, we have more. We appreciate all of the help our donators are giving and hope that you will consider helping again. We are still in need of canned kitten food and fresh bedding and toys for these little ones, both in the shelter and in foster homes. Laundry supplies are always a happy find, and to those of you who are making HSAR a destination for "giving", thank you so much from everyone here.

5K race at Holly Hill

Online registration is now available for the sixth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail race and 1 mile fun run / walk on Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. The 5k race will begin at 9 a.m. and the 1-mile fun run will be at 10 a.m. (Not 10:30 as previously published.) The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 3 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook and a pond. Register by Sept. 20 and get a reusable organic cotton produce bag. Adults $25, children ages 12 and younger, $15. Signup online at www.hollyhillfarm.org. Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Proceeds from the races will benefit the Frank H. White Scholarship Fund that was created in memory of the founder of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm to stimulate awareness of the natural world, generate respect for the environment, teach the value of local, sustainable agricultural practices, and promote responsible environmental stewardship. Frank H. White (1932-2009) was an educator, environmentalist, activist, and fifth generation owner of the Holly Hill Farm who began an organic farm with his wife, Jean, in 1998. Frank created the Friends of Holly Hill Farm as a way to ensure that the farm became a community educational resource with school programs, summer camps and adult and family education workshops. This past year, the Frank H. White Fund made school field trips and summer camp possible for many children who could otherwise not afford to experience all that the farm has to offer. In addition, the fund made the Summer Farm Pantry Program possible, a week long experience for teens to grow and harvest organic food that was delivered by the students to the chef at Father Bill's Place in Quincy.

different holes trimming the rough, especially the briars and poison ivy, in often rocky ledge areas that are difficult to mow," Philbrick explained.

The 30 goats are divided into six working crews and rented out to various locations. Customers so far include the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham, the town of Duxbury (to clear the Blairhaven park), Planet Subaru in Hanover, and residents from Bedford to Bridgewater, Hanover to Kingston and Duxbury, and, of course, Cohasset.

The state government has also rented the goats to clear out an abandoned property where "the fire department deems the brush a fire hazard, but the area is too dangerous for people due to crumbling buildings," said Philbrick. "GreenCAPE is proposing our goats as the solution with NStar for the 100-mile Cape corridor to avoid the controversial herbicide treatment. If we are hired and the Cape is spared 100 miles of herbicide and potential groundwater problems, it is all thanks to our first customer [Golf Club superintendent Glen Misiazek] in Cohasset."

With such in-demand goats, one would think the Goatscaping Company is a large-scale operation, but so far there are only three employees. Besides Cormier and Philbrick, there's Henry Dormitzer, a 15-year-old Cohasset High freshman who has become a professional goat herder, working for the Goatscaping Company after school four days a week. Dormitzer feeds and waters the goat and often leads them back to their pen at night.

"He's completely reliable, and that's great," Philbrick said of Dormitzer.

The CHS freshman said that he loves his after-school job — especially since he gets to play with goats.

"They're really fun and energetic," Dormitzer said of the goats. "They're exactly like dogs; they'll walk by your side and rub up against you."

When asked if he has any favorites, the 15-year-old replied, "All goats are good goats." However, there are a few that he's become especially fond of; their names are Skylark, Zoe, Chloe and Geisha.

Yes, the goats have names — and they answer to them, too.

"Our goats are all friendly like pets," said Philbrick. "They love people. They know their name and they're playful, affectionate, curious and intelligent."

Also just like dogs, the goats are sometimes led along by a leash. Dormitzer noted that this can be a tricky way to tame them. He prefers to keep it old school — by using a shepherd's crook.

"It's not a joke," Philbrick said of the shepherd's crook. "It works perfectly for him... it really is very helpful."

"The shepherd's crook is easier," Dormitzer explained. "Early on when I'd take them, I'd use a leash; now I just run with them."

There's little chance of the goats getting loose with Dormitzer leading the way. Then again, when there's grass in sight, the animals know exactly where to go.

"They know where the food is, and they just go," Dormitzer laughed.

The crook also keeps the goats from going astray. Philbrick boasted that she's "never lost a goat," either to wandering off or a coyote. A solar-powered electric fence at the golf course keeps the goats safely fenced in; they also have a small field shelter to sleep in at night.

Cohasset resident Stephen Cifrino can attest to the goats' friendly manner — and their landscaping skills. He and his wife, Tricia, have been renting a herd of five goats for the summer to clear ledge at their Jerusalem Road home. Cifrino is a member of Cohasset Golf Club and knows Misiazek, the superintendent.

"I called Glen and said, 'Talk to me about the goats,'" Cifrino recalled. "He said that they love poison ivy and bramble."

Letting the goats chow down turned out to be an eco-friendly alternative to chemical herbicides.

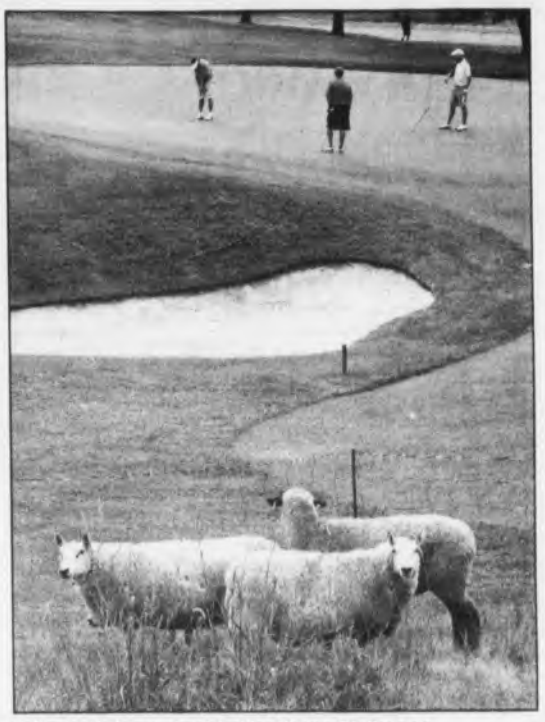
"I was talking to a landscaper about clearing it off, and he said I could clear it off and put chemicals down, but it's just going to come back in two years," Cifrino explained.

Renting goats was the way to go.

"It's sustainable, it's green," Cifrino said of using goats instead of herbicides. "It takes care of what I need, and the kids will be the coolest kids in the neighborhoods — they've got goats."

The goats have been a big hit with the whole family

"They are extremely cool animals," Cifrino enthused. "We've had a lot of fun with them. They're friendly, docile, and playful with the kids. It's been interesting to see how they interact with the children; it's been a ball."



Cifrino said he's already planning to rent the herd again in the spring, praising their clearing capabilities.

"They've done an incredible job," said Cifrino. "I've already booked them for next spring. Next year, we're going to get the ones we can milk and make fresh mozzarella."

He isn't kidding. Cifrino added, laughing, "I'm into the goats!"

Elaine Philbrick greets Cole, a Lamancha breed fixed male (wether), and checks him for any scratches or scrapes as part of a routine check up. Cole is in residence with four other goats at the Cifrino's in Cohasset.

A flock of sheep, provided by Elaine Philbrick's Goatscaping Company, diligently work their way through an area of brush next to the 15th green at Cohasset Golf Club. STAFF PHOTOS/MARK GARDNER

Fifteen-year-old Henry Dormitzer turns on the electric fencing at the Cohasset Golf Club. The fencing keeps in a small flock of sheep that are currently working their way through the long grass in the area just off the 15th green. Dormitzer heads over to tend to the sheep every day, making sure they have plenty of water and food.

Go green with goatscaping

Want to go green and rent goats for brush control on your property?

The Goatscaping Company rents their grazing animals at $10 per goat (or sheep) per day (one herd could consist of four to five goats).

The Goatscaping Company specializes in small jobs at residential or commercial properties, and has been utilized by residents all along the South Shore, the Cohasset Golf Club, Hingham's Black Rock Country Club, the Planet Suburu car dealership in Hanover, and even by the State of Massachusetts. Those who rent the goats are asked to provide them with fresh water and feed them from a locker containing grain and hay, which the company provides.

"They have to have a little every day," Elaine Philbrick of the Goatscaping Company said. "It's simple to do."

Alpine (dairy goats) and cashmere (wool) goats are both available for rental. Yarn is available for purchase.

The Goatscaping Company owners, Philbrick and partner Jim Cormier, also sell dairy shares under the brand name "Colchester Creamery," offering milk and eight varieties of cheeses.

For more information, call 617-283-4088 or visit online at www.gogreengoat.com and www.facebook.com/goatscaping.

11-year-old Jack Cifrino feeds the herd of goats that are in residence at his house. The goats, provided by The Goatscaping Company, spend several weeks or months chomping their way through brush including poisonous plants like poison ivy or poison sumac.

Cohasset resident, Henry Dormitzer, tends to a flock of sheep alongside the 15th green at Cohasset Golf Club. The sheep have been provided by The Goatscaping Company run by Elaine Philibrick and Jim Cormier.

OUR VIEW

In good hands

There is one town department that we do not need to worry about: the Cohasset Police Department.

While what happened Tuesday when the Board of Selectmen in a 3 to 2 vote rejected Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's appointment of Bill Quigley, as permanent police chief is very disappointing — the CPD is in good hands under the leadership of its Acting Chief.

We have no doubt that with the experienced, steady leadership of Acting Chief Bill Quigley, the people of Cohasset will continue to have a police department that not only provides protection and public safety but also is forward-thinking and sensitive to the needs and culture of the community.

We wish we could say that about Cohasset town government.

Two things were evident during Tuesday's selectmen's meeting.

The first being that despite all the ringing endorsements from the community, public safety officials, educators, consultants and more – the 3 to 2 vote to reject Milanoski's appointment of Bill Quigley was set in stone well before the meeting. This rejection opting for "process" over commonsense, in our view, completely ignored the long list of Bill Quigley's accomplishments while he has served as Acting Chief that were clearly enumerated by Milanoski. Chairman Fred Koed politely allowed speakers to share their thoughts, took notes and then summed up their comments – only to read a statement he had prepared beforehand.

The second being the board is deeply divided and suffers from at the very least, a vast philosophical divide on their role and how best to serve the town. Koed's prepared remarks (which are printed in their entirety in this week's Mariner, page 11) included a scathing attack on the motives of Milanoski and those citizens – some who are current or former town officials – behind the petition drives.

The three selectmen, Koed, Karen Quigley (no relation to Bill Quigley) and Martha Gjesteby all reiterated that their vote was "not about Bill Quigley" but rather the process of selecting a permanent chief.

While we disagree with that premise and believe the board should have unanimously endorsed Bill Quigley — we agree: "This is not about Bill Quigley." It is about far more than that.

Eagle Scout Car Wash

Brodie Jackisch, will hold a car wash to raise money for his Eagle Scout project, which will be to make a permanent granite countertop for the Cohasset Food Pantry. The car wash will take place from 8 to 11 a.m., on Sunday, Sept. 22, in front of Good Sport on Route 3A.

Charge for the car wash will be by donations. Brodie will not be charging a specific amount, but will be washing cars if the car owner gives a small to big donation. Friends, family and Boy Scouts from Troop 28 will be helping Brodie.

Current petition drive off-target

We as Cohasset citizens vote for five selectmen in an open town-wide election because the duties they carry out and the town jobs they ultimately fill are not decided by popularity contests or even by what John Adams in 1788 called a "tyranny of the majority." This country would never have equal rights for the sexes or for non-white races if the temporal majority decided every issue.

By our town election process the union of precincts one and two mandates which five people will consider their decisions away from that temporal mob pressure and away from the Internet bullying of the nouveau cyber-bourgeoisie. In the Commonwealth of Massachusetts we don't elect judges for precisely that same reason and as a result judges from Lemeul Shaw to Paul Garrity and Mark Wolf have and can continue to use a higher principle to decide issues.

In the town of Cohasset a petition of any sort under our by-laws cannot overturn an election.

Elections have consequences. It is telling that many of the main proponents fanning the flames of this cyber firestorm are retired or electorally out-voted selectmen. One wonders if they know how to let go of the authority they once so proudly coveted and wielded, and to now allow the duly elected selectmen to accept and exercise that authority according to the existing town laws and bylaws, by which we all live. I read that John Adams shook hands with his then bitter rival Thomas Jefferson at the White House door on Jefferson's Inauguration day and took a public carriage from Washington back home to Massachusetts. Where has that notion of civic duty and selfless sense of community service gone?

It is also telling that the main target of this "drive" is the one selectman, Fred Koed, who has given so many years of service to the office and never once has been accused of, or even given the appearance of, using his office for personal aggrandizement, nor has he abused his position of authority for personal convenience denied to others.

The current petition drive, to force a singular view on the Board of Selectmen's lawful right to a reasoned decision-making process of their design, can only seek to tear apart the very fabric of our town, and a good person would refuse to be a party in it, to it or a proponent of it.

Peter Whittemore,
47 Elm Court

Focusing on 'best interests of the town'

Tuesday evening the Board of Selectmen, in a 3-2 vote, rejected the acting town manager's appointment of Bill Quigley to the position of police chief. In my opinion, this decision was in conflict with the Board's primary responsibility to make decisions that are in the best interest of the Town.

The reasons given by the Board centered around process, particularly the lack of a search (although twice a process was put in place and stopped by the Board), and a desire to wait for a permanent town manager — who may want to bring in his/her own team.

While I am inclined to address these reasons, I instead would like to focus on what is in the best interest of the Town. What is in the best interest of the town, its residents, and its employees is consistent, strong leadership and employees who are valued, respected and allowed to perform the duties of their job to the best of their abilities. The best interests of the town are served by taking politics and personal hostilities out of personnel management. Our rejection of an individual who has the respect of much of the community and all of the rank and file police officers not only creates an environment of instability, but devalues the hard work and dedication of an entire department. Our message that a new permanent town manager may want to bring in his/her own "team" cannot be affirming to the police officers or the many town employees who have had too much management turnover in the past four years.

When the position of Deputy Chief was created for the police department, the Board of Selectmen, town manager and police chief considered the importance of creating professional growth opportunities within a small community police department. The town also acknowledged, in supporting this position, that a second in command must be someone ready, willing and able to assume the duties of chief. Bill easily transitioned to the role as Deputy Chief and has executed his role in the acting chief capacity admirably.

Leadership and management is an art, not a science. There are no metrics to gauge the capacity of individuals to lead, inspire and build a productive, committed and valued department of professionals. We have spent months going back and forth on an acceptable methodology for a police chief search; I would argue that the art — the practical, day to day leadership evidenced by the department's morale and consistent performance should take precedence over a nebulous "process" that could (will) always be called into question. Recognizing and valuing what works is in the best interest of Cohasset.

COMMENTARY

Witnessing a 'train wreck'

JACK BUCKLEY

The following was sent to the Board of Selectmen with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

As soon as the Board rejected TM's appointment of Bill Quigley as Chief of Police, I assume the motion to initiate the search was immediately made, seconded, and approved. The urgency to have the right person in place was unanimously expressed by the board, so I assume the board has acted with the utmost urgency to undertake this critical search.

I assume that you fully comprehend the dire urgency to have the proper person in place as soon as is humanly possible, for no one can expect Bill Quigley to continue to rise above and beyond the highest professional expectations. That is not to say that Bill Quigley will in any way compromise the professional reputation he has worked so hard to earn, nor compromise the safety and security of the citizens of Cohasset. He's a smart guy and he's not going to act foolishly, let alone unprofessionally. But, will he continue to go that extra mile? I wouldn't bet the farm on it. We seem to be taking a bit of a gamble on that one. Either way, tranquil life as we know it may or may not go on without interruption — a thought that shakes me to the marrow. Were the shit to hit the fan in Cohasset, I want the best guy in place NOW with a contract, with the support of the Board, not after it hits. I assume we can all rally around this crass sentiment.

What I witnessed Tuesday night was discussion about a train wreck. There has been an accident on the "rails of process." It makes no sense to try to figure out where the derailment occurred so that we can put the "process train" back on the track and continue on our way.

It only makes sense to reconstruct the train accident when the express purpose is to determine cause so that policies and protocols can be established to prevent future derailments. Mr. Harvey spoke to that issue and the critical review of process seems to have already taken place in the form of the Town Manager Act and the TM debate. That process is running its own course.

COMMENTARY

Standing on principle

It was to be a fair and open search process. Instead, Cohasset got brinkmanship and petition drives. Instead of professionalism, we got the exact opposite.

FRED KOED

The following is the Statement of Cohasset Selectmen Chair Fred Koed, Board of Selectmen Meeting of September 17, 2013. Prepared Remarks on Agenda Item "Appointment of Police Chief by Acting Town Manager."

To my colleagues and fellow town citizens, I come before you to address this important public policy issue about the agenda item "the appointment of Cohasset's next police chief", and to start with these prepared remarks:

Dueling Political Petition Drives

Where are we in Cohasset tonight? We now have dueling petition drives seeking to influence this board of selectmen. Where does that end?

Citizens often petition our governments. It is our democratic right as Americans. Is it however really true democracy under our system when the policy direction of the town's elected representatives is thwarted by an appointed manager? Is it true democratic government when the appointment of our next police chief becomes a rallying cry for one faction's political agenda?

This agenda item should be about the process – about an open, fair, and objective process to select the next professional to lead our police department.

It is not a popularity contest. Under our form of government, we don't elect chiefs of police. The officers sworn to uphold our laws aren't on the ballot, nor should they be.

Law enforcement, is not, and cannot, be subject to political whim, nor to the pressure of voting blocks. It should not, and cannot, be subject to the type of in-the-street campaign tactics we have seen play out over the past several weeks. This behavior, obviously in coordination with the actions of the acting town manager in this regard, is at the very least unseemly.

Given that the Town Manager Act was passed by the town in 1997 to take the politics out of appointments, this coordination with the acting town manager's effort is far worse than unseemly. It is nothing short of disrespectful of our representative form of government that this important decision for our community is now the subject of dueling petition drives.

Brinkmanship Doesn't Belong in Cohasset

The Board of Selectmen is the executive branch of government that oversees the day-to-day operations of the town manager. The manager is the chief administrative officer, who oversees the police chief. The chief, in turn, oversees the police department. The chain of command therefore is clear, as is ultimate control by the elected representatives of the town – the board of selectmen.

The selectmen set the direction and the policy for the town. The town manager is the chief administrative officer to the selectmen, not some kind of chief executive officer.

Integrity of the Hiring Process

The Town Manager Act creates an important balance of power under state law. The town manager has the power to appoint the police chief. The selectmen have the power to reject the appointment within 15 days of the appointment. It is not an "abuse of power", as some have erroneously claimed, for either to exercise their prerogative.

The previous board of selectmen directed the acting town manager to conduct an advertised and open search for our next police chief. Requiring a search means that the manager conducts a professional search. It doesn't mean a job posting tailored to a specific individual. How can that be professional under any definition?

The power to approve or reject the appointment rests with the Board of Selectmen. Therefore a prudent town manager should understand and respect the policy position laid out by the board, as in this instance of a voted direction for a professional search.

Selectmen voted the first time to halt the search because of substantial irregularities in the job posting. Frankly, the exclusionary wording of the job posting brought into question the integrity of the entire search process.

Everyone in Cohasset watching this issue knows where this board stands based on the 3-2 vote to demand a professional search for our next police chief. So the question becomes "Why the brinkmanship"?

Why is it so urgent that this position police chief position be filled now? Why can't it wait until the permanent town manager can pick his or her own team? By all accounts acting police chief Quigley has been doing a good job, and police department morale is high. In the next breath we are told morale is low because there has been no appointment. Which is it, high or low?

This is a Public Policy Decision

If the town manager truly has the power to appoint without any other considerations, why didn't he just make the appointment at any time this year?

The reason is clear: In repeated votes of this board, a clear public policy decision was made. Cohasset's selectmen voted to direct a professional search, to have the position be fully advertised, and to have a search committee be appointed. We voted to have an independent "assessment center" to test the four or five final applicants. The center was to be staffed by several independent Massachusetts police chiefs.

That was a public policy decision. It was to be a fair and open search process. Instead, Cohasset got brinkmanship and petition drives. Instead of professionalism, we got the exact opposite.

Democracy Degraded

This is not about Bill Quigley. I am probably the only selectmen that has supported Bill Quigley every step of the way up through the police ranks, after his initial appointment by a board that included Martha. My support of our acting chief includes the vote to create his current position as deputy chief.

This is not about Michael Milanoski. I am one of two selectmen remaining on the board who supported his coming on board for no pay for two weeks, his first contract, and then his second contract.

In this last election cycle, the center of gravity of the board of selectmen shifted. But something else has shifted in Cohasset. That election saw the first ever case of documented election fraud, with phony election signs designed deliberately to appear as authentic signs from another candidate.

Several of your selectmen spoke out on that, and a police investigation was started. Apparently however, that investigation has stalled according to the acting town manager. Now Cohasset has its first ever "election" for police chief, a direct attempt to block the voted policy of your elected board of selectmen.

Open fair elections have been soiled by election fraud. A professional search process for our next law enforcement chief has been subverted by electioneering for the position. The votes of this board have been repeatedly defied by the acting town manager.

A Government of Laws, Not of Men

Colleagues, and fellow citizens of Cohasset: This evening is about preserving the integrity of the democratic process itself. It is about how your elected representatives are able to carry out your expressed will under law.

It Cohasset, representative democracy has existed longer than our nation itself. Far too many men and women have had to fight and die for our form of government to continue to exist for me to ever think I could subvert its principles.

Tonight I stand by the principle that, unless there are extraordinary circumstances, all high level jobs in the town of Cohasset, are to be publicly posted and professionally selected. I stand by the principle that here elections and the representatives they put in office are sovereign, not any appointed manager. Here in Cohasset, as in our county, we are indeed a government of laws, and not of men.

I will stand on that principle no matter how many petitions are brought in here, nor how many former officials electioneer in our streets. Our town demands we stand for nothing less.

COLLEGE CONNECTION

Choosing the right college for you

Many people rely on these rankings as they choose the colleges to which they will apply, without giving much thought to the things that are really important.

STEPHANIE SEARS

Thousands of students and parents clamored for the US News and World Report's annual college ranking which was released last week. No surprise, Harvard, Princeton, and Yale succeeded in keeping their spots on the list. They also only accepted six to eight percent of their applicants last year, and part of the reason they are on the list is their low acceptance rate.

Many people rely on these rankings as they choose the colleges to which they will apply, without giving much thought to the things that are really important. Acceptance rates and prestige aside, if you are interested in pursuing an acting degree, then find a college in a community with a thriving theater scene. If you are interested in becoming a global leader in industry, find a place that will hone your skills and give you a place to practice them instead of four years in a lecture hall. If you are interested in medicine a solid science program is a must, but if professors don't allow undergrads to work alongside them, why go? If you love playing sports but won't make Division I, find a college with a strong intramurals program.

The Common App has made it very easy to apply to dozens of colleges, especially when one can theoretically copy and paste answers to supplemental questions (as a former admissions counselor I can say don't do it, it will be a transparent flop). My advice to you is love every school to which you apply. Don't bother applying to colleges you will never consider attending or if you cannot articulate anything about it. Time during your senior year is too short to be spent spinning your wheels.

Where to start? Ask people who you respect around you – family friends, teachers, coaches, employers — where they went to college. It may give you ideas of where to look and in the process, you may discover the best college of which you've never heard. Try these programs out – US Dept of Ed College Navigator and College Board Big Future – as a way to narrow down places by geography and interests. Look for virtual tours on college websites and YouTube to give you a better sense of the campus. Be open to looking outside of New England as there are many excellent colleges, which would love to diversify their student population geographically.

It may be that Harvard is indeed a good match for you, but that should then be based on your own criteria for what is important instead of a solitary ranking or the fact that your best friend is also applying. Polonius in Shakespeare's Hamlet said it best when he was advising his son soon to depart, "To thine own self, be true." More than anything else, this should be the driving force in developing your list of colleges.

FOR THE RECORD

You're invited to share opinions

A column focusing on senior citizen issues, preferably written by a senior citizen, would also be a welcome addition to many of our editions.

GREGORY MATHIS

This column, For the Record, first appeared in the opinion section of this newspaper three years ago this week.

The mission of the 500-600 words written weekly is to provide readers with an explanation of what is happening in the media business, specifically the little world we operate in locally with our group of community newspapers and corresponding Wicked Local websites.

The column was intended to be a regular feature in the opinion section that hopefully contained some sort of local relevancy, even if it was just an explanation of a new print initiative or detailing changes online. Hopefully you've gained some insight regarding the numerous changes that have taken place in the industry over that three-year span.

For the Record was also intended to introduce myself to the many communities we serve in print and online. The column began soon after being named editor-in-chief for the 27 newspapers in the South unit of GateHouse Media New England. Knowing that it would be impossible to connect with readers in each of those communities each week, a column focusing on the aspects common with all the local publications and websites would at least get me into people's homes each week and hopefully become a familiar name and face, as well as a direct contact for questions, concerns or general feedback.

The column, however, was never intended to replace local commentary on town issues and just fill space under the Opinion or Forum header. There's still a great need, and plenty of space to devote to local writers who have something to say.

Here are the types of free column ideas we might be looking for (and not looking for!) in the future.

History offers many column possibilities, whether it's a Then & Now type feature with old and new photos; something that details this date in history; or a look back over the last 10, 15, 20 or more years. Be sure to contact us if you're a history buff who likes to write.

Some of our publications have columns written by high school students. Students offer a unique perspective to today's issues in the schools and beyond the classrooms. In the past, we had a column from a local library staffer recommending new books for children, teens and adults. A column focusing on senior citizen issues, preferably written by a senior citizen, would also be a welcome addition to many of our editions.

Local groups and organizations are welcome to write weekly, bi-weekly or monthly columns as well. Some of our publications feature a monthly health column submitted by a local visiting nurse association, while others run a monthly nature column from a local watershed association.

We're not necessarily looking for national political pundits, although we do invite local legislators to write regular columns. We don't want businesses promoting themselves or their products, but we can work with ideas that share a certain expertise that's relevant to our readers and the community.

Send me your idea and I'll work with the local editor to determine if it's something we could add to our local coverage on the opinion pages.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units. He can be reached by email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Governance Committee periodic update provided

The following was provided by the Governance Committee

1. We are, and for the next several meetings at least, will be working on making the required recommended changes to the Town Bylaws called for in the new Town Manager Act.

2. We have nearly completed our recommendation for search criteria and process when the BOS needs to appoint a new Town Manager – to be included in our recommendation for the new bylaws.

3. Our next three meetings are scheduled for Oct. 3 and Nov. 17. All these meetings will take place in the Town Hall basement and commence at 7:30 a.m.

4. Current committee membership consists of: Christine Cunning; Jack Keniley; Mary Jo Larson, Vice Chair; Merle Brown; Ralph Dormitzer; Kevin McCarthy, Chair; Trish Morse, Clerk; Sam Wakeman; and Jack Creighton (pending review and approval of BOS).

COMING UP

BOS workshop to set goals, objectives

The Board of Selectmen will meet to set goals and objectives for the fiscal year, as well as discuss other issues and concerns, in a workshop with facilitator Jeff Nutting, who is also Town Administrator in Franklin, Mass.

The meeting is next Thursday, Sept. 26 at 6:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island and was rescheduled from August 27.

The selectmen will discuss what the members hope to accomplish as a board; their roles and responsibilities; barriers to success; short and long-term goals; and next steps as a board.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Volume 38 - Report No. 37 September 9-13, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on two roll calls from the week of September 9-13. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

PROTECT STRESS MANAGEMENT WORKERS (S 1861) Y *

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that is designed to protect professionals who provide stress management services to emergency responders in cases in which the responder has been affected by a critical incident such as line of duty death or death of a child. The measure prohibits any professional from being required to disclose any information he or she receives while counseling an emergency worker. The only exceptions are if the information indicates there has been child abuse or there is an imminent danger to anyone.

Supporters said it is important that confidentiality be maintained in these situations and that emergency workers be able to talk freely without fear of a breach of confidentiality and recrimination.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

CORPORATE MANSLAUGHTER (S 782) Y *

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would increase the current $1,000 fine to a minimum $250,000 fine for the crime of "manslaughter by a corporation" under which a corporation could be convicted and punished for culpable conduct that leads to a person's death. The measure also allows the state to debar for up to ten years from future state business a corporation convicted of corporate manslaughter.

Supporters said this long overdue legislation would finally crack down on corporations responsible for lost lives. They noted that the $1,000 fine was established in 1819 and has not been amended since.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

REPEAL TECH TAX - In a stunning reversal, Gov. Deval Patrick, Senate President Therese Murray and House Speaker Robert DeLeo have announced they will join the effort to repeal the recently approved 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as modification of prewritten software. The support of all three essentially guarantees repeal of the tax. They have been defending the tax ever since it was approved in July. The most recent effort to repeal the tax was in April when the repeal was overwhelmingly defeated on roll call votes in the House, 54-97, and the Senate, 8-30. In recent weeks, Republican House Minority Leader Bradley Jones and GOP Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr have led a band of GOP lawmakers calling for the repeal.

HEAD INJURIES IN SPORTS (H 1928) - The Committee on Public Health heard testimony on a bill that would require baseline concussion testing of all public and private high school student athletes. Supporters said these test results would be compared to test results following a head injury and would help doctors and coaches determine the severity of a concussion and make an informed decision on whether the athlete should continue to play.

OTHER SCHOOL HEALTH MEASURES - Other measures on the Public Health Committee's agenda included establishing a commission to study the public health risks of video games (H 1892); prohibiting the Department of Public Health from collecting data on students' height, weight and body mass index (H 2024); requiring automatic external defibrillators in all public schools (S 1049); and requiring coaches of interscholastic sports to complete first aid training courses (S 1096).

TAX SOFT DRINKS AND CANDY (H 2634) - The Revenue Committee heard testimony on a proposal that would tax sugary soft drinks and candy, both of which are currently exempt from the state 6.25 percent sales tax. The estimated $50 million plus dollars in new tax revenue would be used to fund grants for physical activity programs in schools. Supporters said the tax would help fight the obesity epidemic in the state and stem the rising tide of obesity-related health issues including diabetes, high blood pressure and heart disease.

OTHER TAX MEASURES - Other proposed legislation at the Revenue Committee's hearing included allowing qualified homeowners and renters to annually deduct on their tax return up to $800 of the cost of home heating oil, natural gas, propane, electricity and wood fuel (S 1362); extending to the video gaming industry the tax credit currently offered to movie production companies (H 2511); exempting non-profit charitable nursing homes from local property taxes (S 1412); and giving taxpayers the option to indicate on their income tax return that they do not want their taxes to be used to pay for abortion services (H 2542). A formula would determine how much of each of those taxpayers' tax liability would be deposited in a special account separate from the state's General Fund. The account would be used to promote the state's safe havens for babies law that allows parents to leave their baby under the age of seven days at a police or fire station or hospital emergency room.

SINGLE LICENSE PLATES (S 1637) - The Transportation Committee heard testimony at a hearing on legislation that would require passenger cars to have only one license plate that would be mounted on the rear of the vehicle. Current law requires a plate on the front and rear of the car.

Supporters say the bill would save millions of dollars by reducing by 50 percent the cost of manufacturing the plates. They note that 19 states currently require only one plate and argue studies show law enforcement has not decreased in those states. Some say front plates interfere with a car's aerodynamics and cooling system and can even reduce fuel mileage.

Opponents say the use of front and back plates is helpful to law enforcement in identifying vehicles and enforcing traffic and other laws. They noted that 31 states require the use of two plates.

OTHER TRANSPORTATION BILLS - A Transportation Committee hearing's agenda included a bill allowing drivers to receive and put on their driver's license a special "do-not-resuscitate" decal (S 1698). Other measures would allow special decals for diabetics (S 1642) and people with autism (H 3003). The committee's list of bills also included raising the speed limit to 70 mph on roads that currently have a 65 mph limit (H 3175); exempting new motor vehicles from maintenance and emissions inspections for the first two years (H 3096); and allowing drivers to purchase "Boston Strong" license plates for an additional $50 or more (H 3503). Proceeds would benefit the One Fund that raises funds for the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings.

Accomplishments as acting chief of police

During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen's meeting, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski read the following list of accomplishments of Acting Chief William Quigley while Quigley has been serving as acting chief for the past 16 months. The accomplishments were part of Milanoski's appointment letter, the entirety of which can be read online at: wickedlocalcohasset.com

In looking at his accomplishments that are very impressive in a short period of time, I have broken them down into four categories that have occurred under Acting Chief Quigley's leadership.

Management, Administrative, and Police Operations

- Successfully reduced police overtime
- Established clear standard for tow operators that were non-existent and issued a fair RFQ
- Brought department to authorized strength for patrolman in 12-month's – five new hires over the course of a year
- Oversaw transition to regional dispatch in August 2012 and upgrades to safety systems at police HQ
- Presented and received approval from Capital Budget Committee to convert police fleet over to Tahoes.
- Secured funding for a live-scan fingerprint scanner, enhancing officer safety and streamlining procedures having to do with processing arrests
- Secured funding from SSRECC to upgrade the police radio system including over $100,000 to enhance officer safety and radio reliability including installing new Mobile Data Terminals in cruisers
- Worked with CTO to replace all computers and servers in CPD to be compliant with FBI standards.
- Led officers and detective who dismantled a Dominican cocaine distribution network operating in and around Cohasset village, seizing several vehicles, a pound of cocaine and $50,000 in cash
- Took down major marijuana growing operation in town.

Training and Liability Avoidance

- Updated and reissued all high-liability policies and procedures (Pursuit, Use of Force, Care of Prisoners, Sexual Harassment, Domestic Violence, etc.)
- Revamped and refocused the entire special police program to a qualifications based program rather than political appointments – where police badges were given away for no show jobs.
- Appointed a sergeant to oversee newly developed field training and mentoring program for new officers that have graduated the police academy and to be in charge of department training, including developing a centralized training record system for each member of the department.
- For the first time in three years began sending officers to mandated in-service training at the regional police academy. Each officer is updated in 1st Responder, CPR, and legal issues. Cohasset Police firearms instructors at least twice per year do firearms' training in-house.
- Signed mutual aid pacts with Hingham, Hull, Scituate, and Norwell Police Departments along with 42 Metro-LEC communities to ensure a proper response to critical incidents that did not exist
- Obtained approval from civil service to conduct pre-employment psychological testing of all police candidates.
- In response to a near drowning in Cohasset Harbor and a drowning in Aaron River, equipped Cohasset Police cruisers with water rescue equipment for officers.

Communications and Outreach

- Created a Facebook page where none existed that has over 1,700 people that turn to it for information on current events, pictures of officers in action, and most importantly minute-by-minute situational updates when a storm hits or other emergencies
- With input from members of the department and community, developed a mission statement and core values for the police department
- Department is now actively involved in the Norfolk County Chiefs of Police Association. This provides mentoring and networking opportunities for command staff from the region to identify best practices for the department as well as link on to regional homeland security grants and funding opportunities, such as a recent grant through the Norfolk County District Attorney Office for Emergency planning with regard to threats to schools. Local chiefs have made themselves available 24/7 to assist with any situation that exceeds our local abilities
- Coordinated the police department's successful response to Super Storm Sandy and Blizzard Nemo.

School Safety Partnership

- Obtained School Safety Grants via the Norfolk County DA's Office.
- Emergency response plan in final stages
- Coordinated two day ALICE training with Superintendent, Principles, and Town Manager
- Signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Superintendent of Schools that outlines our partnership with the school district and guarantees information sharing between CPD and the Schools
- Worked with the School Superintendent to obtain permission to open a "Cohasset Police Sub-station" in the Middle High School.
- Officers will have the ability to write police reports from the Middle High School.
- Provides a random police presence on the campus given recent tragedies in other districts.

BUCKLEY

run its course are not events that need to be linked at all.

The focus now is on putting a chief into place. Why we can't simply do that I just don't get. I know I'm not alone. Maybe brutal honesty is what is needed, like one of those facilitated retreats where wounds are exposed so that healing can take place. But, that's pie in the sky stuff.

Unfortunately, perception is now running rampant, and perception has officially hijacked truth to the point where there is no sense in searching for truth, for each Cohasset citizen believes he or she has already found it. I started getting lost as to what was truth, what was fiction back when TM Mr. Coughlin got fired and Mr. Milanoski was asked to step in as Acting TM. At that point in time, Tom Gruber wrote a highly critical and well reasoned argument that walked the reader through what appeared to be unauthorized actions being taken in town with respect to that whole of the TM debacle. Perception was growing then that things didn't seem to pass the sniff test, but we're going to have to wait for someone to try to write the historical record before anyone comes close to having a lock on the truth.

No one seems to like where we are. Few can make sense as to how we got here, yet many claim to know the truth. I don't get why we can't just appoint the guy that townspeople seem to want leading the Police Department. Opposition seems to come from all corners other than the most important corners regarding public safety and leadership.

I truly don't get at all how and why we are where we are, but I do know that it is time to quickly move on. I just hope that Deputy Chief Quigley is still interested in being Chief of Police for the Town of Cohasset.

Jack Buckley lives at 272 N. Main St.

Bill Quigley is a sound investment

As a Retired Police Lieutenant and a member of the Law Enforcement Community for over 40 years I feel compelled to write the following regarding the controversy that has been stirred up over the appointment of William Quigley to Chief of Police.

Candidates for high office need not only be innocent of unethical behavior, they must also be perceived as people who possess sterling qualities. A car history report was created so car dealers give serious thought before attempting to deceive potential car buyers from investing in a lemon. We all know that there are enough lemons to go around and a simple vehicle history trace has proven its effectiveness over time and solidified many complaints of misrepresentation.

William Quigley is far from a lemon and has proven himself worthy, especially after reviewing his history. William Quigley is a sound investment. He has been a strong advocate during his tenure and has performed his responsibilities with diligence. Over the years he has provided many of us with an understanding of the principles of passion, he is honest, has empathy, is straightforward, and has demonstrated a high degree of loyalty and trustworthiness. Mr. Quigley has always carried out his obligations with vigor and resolve. He takes pride in his sworn position and most importantly pride in his community.

The evidence is clear; Mr. Quigley has without a doubt a superior history, so why give second thought to a sound investment.

President Theodore Roosevelt said, "It's not the critic who counts, nor the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doers of deeds would have done better, the credit belongs to the men and women in the arena, whose face is marred by dust, sweat, and blood, who strives, who spends of himself in a worthy cause."

It's that devotion and commitment that is within us which drives us to do what we are responsible to do, and most importantly it initiates the respect from the fans that we so desperately need in our corner.

Bill Quigley has been in the arena. He is first rate and a take-charge person!

COLLEGE LACROSSE

Murphy named Fairfield captain

Former Cohasset lacrosse star Jack Murphy was recently named a captain of the Fairfield University Stags men's lacrosse team.

Murphy was a starter for the Stags last season.

"The Stags are a Division 1 powerhouse and his play since helping to lead Cohasset High School to a 2010 State Championship has helped him to be considered one of the nations very best goalies," said former Cohasset coach Stew Curran, who coached the 2010 Skippers. "In my view, Jack's efforts during his years at Cohasset HS, once again bears out the truth that Cohasset boys youth lacrosse players are amongst the nations very best. Jack was a great player but a better leader for me in 2010."

YOUTH FIELD HOCKEY

Blue team wins

The Cohasset Club Field Hockey "Blue" team, a mix of seventh and eighth graders traveled to Foxboro Saturday and finished with a 4-0 victory.

Scoring for Cohasset were Jane Hansen and Emily Lengyel with two goals each.

The defense completely shut out Foxboro as there were no shots on goal.

Big game prep

Skippers ready for Rockland

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team finds itself in a good place this week as they prepare for Saturday afternoon's South Shore League game at Rockland.

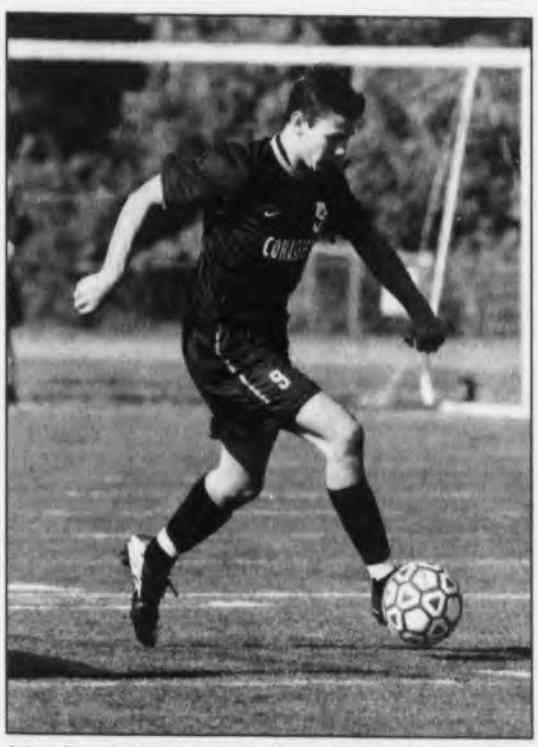
Cohasset rolled in the season opener, and then had time off to focus squarely on the next game.

"Saturday will be a big challenge for us," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Rockland is a vastly improved team compared to last year. They are in the second year under this head coach (Brian Kelliher), and the players are now fully aware of his expectations, style, etc, so they should be much more comfortable, and on the same page."

The Skippers opened the season with a huge 49-8 win over Norwell, a team that is better than the score indicated.

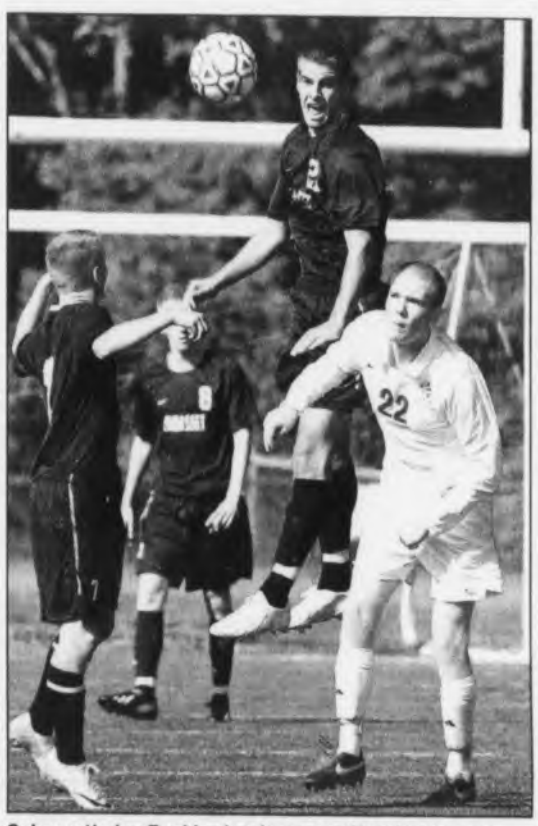
In Norwell's second game, the Clippers rallied from a 21-0 halftime deficit to beat Carver.

Of course, Norwell was in the rear-view mirror after a day or so of celebration and the focus turned to Rockland.



With the off-week, Afanasiw had a chance to scout the Bulldogs personally.

"We were able to see them play last week versus Hanover, and they have a nice mix of talent, speed and size," he said. "Typically, they did not make many mistakes and they protected the football well. I think we match up well with them. We definitely have the athleticism to match them, and our conditioning coupled with the fact that we minimize two-way players should benefit us as the game progresses. Rockland has eight full time two-way players and they were pretty gassed by halftime."



Afanasiw feels his team needs to play well in all aspects of the game if there is going to be a win.

"With regard to getting a win, if we execute and play to

Turning point

Norwell victory a ray of hope

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

When coaches, players or fans talk about turning points in a season, it usually has to do with a big win or defining moment, like the time Jason Varitek stuffed a catcher's mitt down Alex Rodriguez' throat in 2007, or Dave Roberts steal in the 2004 ALCS.

For the Cohasset High School boys soccer team, a turning point came early in the season, with a huge win over Norwell, according to coach Jim Willis.

"We had lost a tough one at Carver on Thursday," Willis said of a 3-1 loss that set the Skippers record at 1-3. "We scored first, then we gave up three goals to one kid. Then we went to Norwell and won 1-0 in a very exciting game."

In the Norwell win, Skipper goalie Pat Federle was injured with 20 minutes left to play, leaving a rookie to try to hold off a solid Clipper team that has given Cohasset lots of trouble at that venue.

"Jack Chamberlain was a football player," Willis said. "He decided not to play this year, but when the season started he realized he missed being a part of a team. He asked if he could try out. He had played goalie in youth soccer and was teammates with some of the guys. He knew he wouldn't be starting. Pat is one of the best goalies in the state."

Chamberlain made his chance count.

"Jack had to step in with two weeks experience and shut down Norwell for 20 minutes," Willis said. "He did a great job and kept them out of the net. Then he made some great stops against Hull and we beat them 6-0. I'm glad he came out to join us."

As for the turning point, Willis explained.

"At that point we were 1-3 and a loss at Norwell would have made us 1-4," he said. "We needed that game. It was an early season turning point. Instead of 1-4, we were

Looking good

Skippers playing well

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Taking a look at the Cohasset sports fall season has been fun in the early going.

Just about anywhere you look, teams are working hard and winning games.

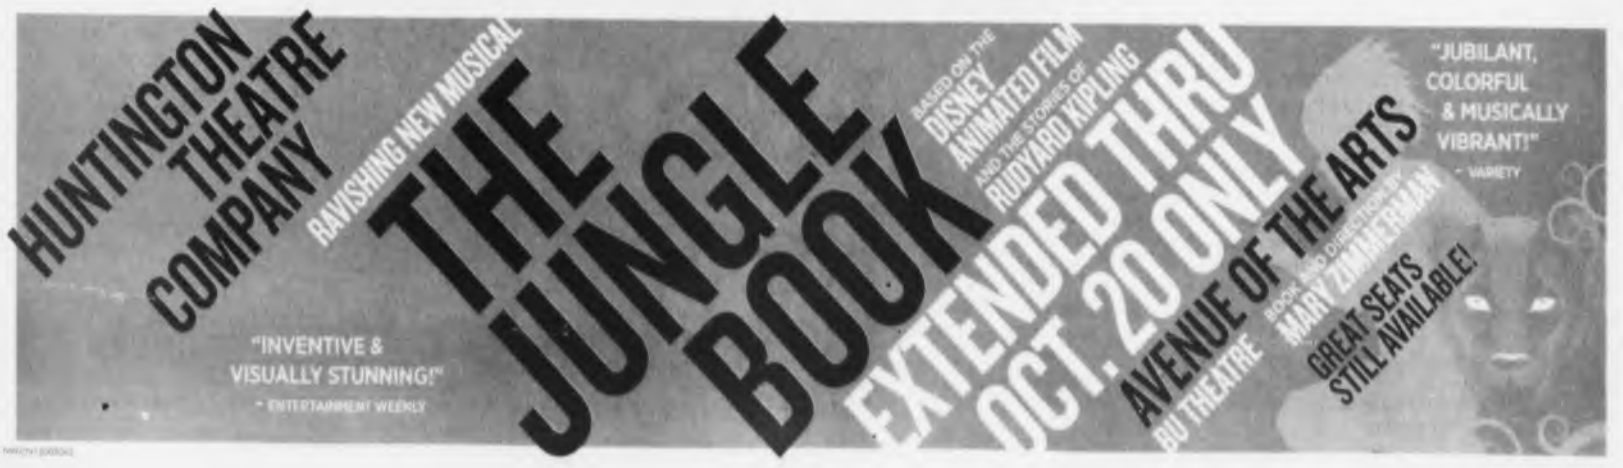
Here's a look at some recent action.

On the girls soccer pitch, Cohasset had a couple of ties during the last week, including a 1-1 tie with Hull and a 0-0 knot with Norwell on Monday.

On the field hockey turf, Cohasset has played exceptionally well, including a dominating 8-0 win over Norwell.

Caty Gilman scored four goals in the win that improved Cohasset to 5-1 early in the season.

Cohasset also beat West Bridgewater 1-0 during the week.



On the links, the Skippers have also fared well, continuing a run of excellence on the way to a 7-0 record heading into Thursday.

Tuesday, freshman Mike McKelvey led Cohasset with a 4-over 40 in a 46.5-6.5 win over Rockland.

Earlier in the week, the Skippers beat Mashpee 44.5-9.5

On the cross country trails, Cohasset has notched race victories by Carly Oremus and Julien Guyer against Monomoy.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 2: The shuffling continues

Silver Lake boys take top spot, while girls teams make debut

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Two weeks into the season, and the temperature's rising. It's also clear that no team is safe to hold its spot from week to week. Despite their divisional placements per MIAA rules, a Division 3 team could knock off a Division 1 side this year and it wouldn't surprise me.

This week, two boys' teams drop out of the rankings, one that has held a spot in the top six seemingly since the debut of Inside the 6 three years ago (I'll get my fact checker on it to be sure). There's a new No. 1 for the boys this week, and I honestly don't see this team relinquishing the top spot for some time. Then again, Burnley beat, and held scoreless, Manchester United in 2009. Anything is possible at any level of soccer anywhere in the world.

On the girls' side this week, three teams completely fall out of the rankings, which in turn marks the 2013 debut in the top six for three sides. This includes one of the most impressive jumps in the history of Inside the 6 (hint: see No. 2). Make that two impressive debuts (see No. 3).

Here are the rankings based on games played from Monday, Sept. 9 through Sunday, Sept. 15.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – Two games, two clean sheets for one of the strongest back lines in the region. The Lakers blanked Patriot League contenders Hingham and then walloped North Quincy, a winnable game, but a shutout nonetheless. Beating this Silver Lake team will not be easy.

2. Duxbury – Second-year head coach Brian Johnson has an excellent and in-form squad this season, and it's shown. The Dragons also notched a pair of shutouts last week, setting down Pembroke and thrashing Middleboro. The latter was a win on paper, but beating Pembroke by five goals is quite impressive. The Titans are playing some great soccer thus far.

3. Hingham – The Harbormen were certainly frustrated against Silver Lake. Known for their scoring prowess, the Harbormen were held scoreless against the Lakers. A 5-1 win over Hanover quickly erased the scoring drought.

4. Braintree – Some contend that the Tri-Valley and Hockomock leagues are the best this fall. Not so fast. The Bay State, always a top class conference, is as strong as ever, and the Wamps have certainly held their own in the early going. Last week, they beat Norwood and Dedham to remain on top of the conference.

5. Marshfield – The Rams have had trouble scoring, but they still have one of the stingiest defenses on the South Shore. They conceded a pair to Nauset in a loss this week, but held Sandwich scoreless in an early week win. The Rams have only allowed two goals heading into the week, both to Nauset.

6. Carver – The Crusaders are serious contenders for the South Shore League title and remained unbeaten on the season with a pair of impressive wins last week. Victories over Cohasset and East Bridgewater, two other teams in contention to challenge for the SSL title, proved this team is legit.

On the bubble: Pembroke, Weymouth, Rockland, Norwell

Week 1 Rankings:
1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Silver Lake, 4. Marshfield, 5. Norwell, 6. Scituate

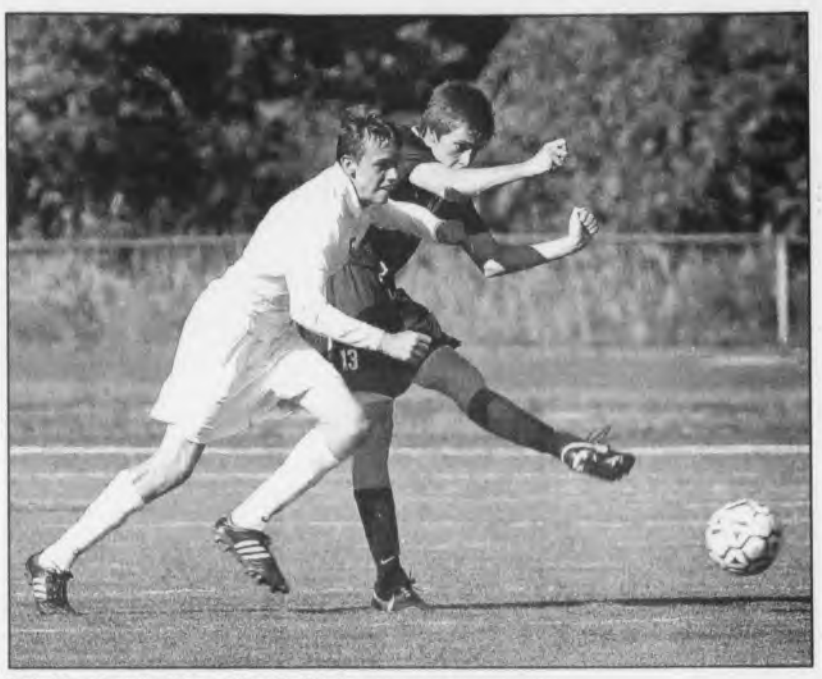
Girls

1. Duxbury – Despite starting the week with a draw, the Dragons retained the top spot after picking up wins over both Pembroke and Middleboro to remain unbeaten on the season.

2. Scituate – Making their 2013 debut, and quite a first appearance at that, the Sailors quickly proved that they have the makings of a championship side. Shutout wins over Hanover and Quincy came after an impressive, come-from-behind draw against Duxbury.

3. Rockland – Here come the 'Dogs. Another Inside the 6 debut this week on the girls' side, Rockland has placed itself atop the South Shore League with its perfect start, which last week included a 2-1 win over Norwell, a massive result indeed.

4. Plymouth South – Head Coach Dave Costa didn't know what to expect heading into the season. He lost some quality players, but knew he had talent. What was unclear three weeks ago was how quickly this team would come together. Well, the question has been answered as the Panthers enter the week in first place in the Atlantic Coast League after beating Dennis-Yarmouth and Falmouth last week. This is the highest-ever ranking for Plymouth South, a well-deserved one at that.



5. Norwell – It was perhaps the most random week for the Clippers. They suffered their first-ever South Shore League loss to Rockland but bounced back with a massive, 5-2 non-league win over Marshfield.

6. Marshfield – The Rams took the biggest dive in the rankings, falling four spots to No. 6 after going 1-1-1. This is becoming a tough team to figure out after just two weeks. The Rams have work to do to remain in the top six, but are certainly capable of staying here.

On the bubble: Hingham, Carver, Braintree, Weymouth

Week 1 Rankings:
1. Duxbury, 2. Marshfield, 3. Weymouth, 4. Carver, 5. Norwell, 6. Braintree

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

2-3, and now with the Hull game we're back to .500."

The Skippers have been led offensively by senior captain Joe Buckley.

"We made a move and brought Joe up to striker," Willis said. "He's scored six goals in five games. He's been a great offensive weapon."

Buckley scored Cohasset's winning goal at Norwell and notched a hat trick in the Hull victory.

"He's a nice offensive weapon," Willis said. "And he can play the position defensively."

Speaking of the defense, Willis said that after his team gave up the three goals in the first half of the Carver game, they have held opponents scoreless.

"We've gone five straight halves without allowing a goal," he said. "The defense has been great."

In the center of the defense has been Teddy Craven.

"Teddy is like a captain back there," Willis said. "He's steady. Pat Federle has been playing great until he was hurt. None of the Carver goals were his fault. There was nothing he could have done about them."

Brendan O'Connell and Schuyler Van Pelt have also played well defensively, as has Cole Morrison.

Willis likes the intensity and effort his team brings to the pitch every day.

"Everybody is working hard and learning to play off each other," he said. "We have a diverse group of players this year. We have four seniors starting, five juniors and two sophomores. Our first two subs off the bench are freshmen. They are beginning to learn to play together."

In the Hull victory, Buckley scored three goals, and his brother Mitchell Buckley, a freshmen, scored a goal and added an assist.

Mathias Loft chipped in with three assists and junior Ben Buckley just missed scoring a goal. Ryan McKeon chipped in a goal and an assist as well.

The Hull victory improved Cohasset to 3-2 in the South Shore League, which is still wide open.

our potential in all three phases of the game, we should have an enjoyable bus ride home, but if not, we could be in for a long afternoon," he said. "Having the bye-week after such a big win, made it easy to redirect their attention to Rockland. They had a few days off, after a long preseason, and came back with a renewed focus and energy. So far we've had a great week of practice and hope it carries over. It should, I have all the confidence in the world in this group. They are tremendous."

The Skippers are led by quarterback Chris Haggerty and running back Ryan Gillis on the offensive end, with help from linemen Mickey Barry, Steven Maher and Will Lucas. Receivers include Rocco Laugelle and Cole Kissick, who also runs the ball.

On the defensive side, the team is led by Jack McElgunn, Will Butenschoen, Brett Dooley, Matt Froio, Danny Tangherlini, Terence Doonan and Steven Iantosca.

SPOOKTACULAR 5K RUN/WALK AND KIDS FUN RUN

Halloween-themed event takes place Oct. 19

The South Shore YMCA Emilson Branch in Hanover is pleased to announce the return of its Spooktacular 5k Run/Walk and invites the South Shore community to participate in its second annual Halloween-themed road race on Oct. 19.

The Spooktacular 5k is a family friendly run through the scenic roads of Hanover and Norwell and is open to runners and walkers of all ages and abilities.

The first Spooktacular 5K was held last October and drew more than 150 runners and walkers. Participants included five Special Olympians, joined by running buddies, from Cardinal Cushing Centers and a group of youth runners from a Marshfield running club for elementary school students. Following the success of the inaugural race, Emilson YMCA Sports & Recreation Director and the race organizer Linda Montoya believes the family focused atmosphere is what makes this race unique.

"As a runner, I've participated in a lot of races," Montoya said. "What was truly an amazing experience for me was when I was able to complete a road race with my son and share that feeling of accomplishment with him. I wanted to give our members and our community the opportunity to participate in a road race as a family and share that experience. At the Y, we're all about family, so we wanted to host a race which was fun for both children and adults and offered that family atmosphere."

This year's Spooktacular will be held Saturday, Oct. 19, and the race begins at the Emilson YMCA, located at 75 Mill St. in Hanover, at 8:45 a.m. Kids ages 5-10 can participate in a free 1/2 mile Kids Fun Run, and adults and youth ages 11 and over may register for the 5K as a runner or walker. Costumes are welcome, but not required. Online registration is now open. Visit the South Shore YMCA website to register and for more information at www.ssymca.org/emilson. Volunteers are needed and sponsorship opportunities are available.

All proceeds from the Spooktacular 5K will benefit the South Shore YMCA Annual Campaign to directly support financial assistance, programs and services for all.

For additional information on the Spooktacular 5K, contact Montoya at lmontoya@ssymca.org or 781-829-8585 ext. 260.

Rangers strike quick in win

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Rangers Bob Sideropoulos of the South Coastal Hockey League Classics Div. can quickly turn a game around in a hurry just ask the Red Wings.

Sideropoulos scored two goals in the span of 76 seconds which included a shorthanded tally to break a 1-1 third period tie and give the Rangers a 3-2 win over the Wings.

John Sances added the other goal while Lou Sideropoulos and Jim Hutchinson both had two assists each for the Rangers.

Harry Mathews of Duxbury and Marshfield's Ron DiCecca scored the goals for the Red Wings.

Joe McCafferty, Jeff Gauthier and Hanover's Sean Cleaves scored third period goals as the Maple Leafs rallied from a 3-1 deficit to pull out a 3-3 Classics Div. tie with the Bruins.

Patrick Sherry had a goal and an assist, Jeff Vancura and Marshfield's John Zimmer added a goal each for the Bruins. John Dougenik added two assists for the Bruins.

Pembroke's Bob McCabe scored three goals and Glen Harnisch of Marshfield had three assists as the Canadiens pulled out a 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks. Mike Fahie of Pembroke also scored for the Canadiens and Tony Rota scored for the Black Hawks in the first period.

The Ryan brothers, Charles and Mike both scored a goal in the shoot out to give the Saints a 4-3 win over the Toros in a Legends Div. matchup.

Pembroke's John MacLellan scored two goals and an assist while John Davey scored a goal and set up another for the Saints.

Norwell's James Ward who had a goal and assisted on another tied the game for the Toros with 53 seconds left. Ray DeGaust added a goal and an assist and Duxbury's Steve Colella scored for the Toros.

Pembroke's Mark Frano posted the shutout and Hanover's Peter MacPherson scored a second period goal to give the Stingers a 1-0 Legends Div. win over the Sharks.

Scituate's Bill McMahon scored a goal in the second period and another in the third to give the Whalers a 4-2 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Hanover's Jim Toner and Paul Flagg added a goal each and Norwell's John Maguire had two assists for the Whalers.

Mike Simon and John Hernon of Marshfield scored the goals for the Crusaders.

N.E. Colonials tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club is accepting applications from Cohasset players for the program's April 2014 Ambassadors Tour to the Netherlands.

This boys basketball team will accept ten players (going into grades 10 and 11) for its ten-day spring tour. New England Colonials teams have been traveling the world to play basketball since 1981 and the program has an international reputation for excellence. The team will visit and play in Amsterdam, Leeuwarden, Utrecht and The Hague while in the Netherlands.

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club was founded in 1980 and is a nonprofit, volunteer-run program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world. The team does not hold tryouts. All applicants must be in good academic standing and capable of handling a high level of competitive play and the demands of overseas travel.

For additional information, please contact Scott Bryson at 508-734-5660 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol.com. Interested parents and players may learn more about the Colonials' program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net.

KOMEN MA

Thousands expected at largest fundraiser

By Jennifer Bray
jbray@enterprisenews.com

As many as 5,000 people are expected to gather in Joe Moakley Park in South Boston to Race for the Cure, on Sunday, Sept. 29.

Susan G. Komen Massachusetts is once again sponsoring the 5K race which takes runners, walkers and participants on a route where each step raises money to support the fight against breast cancer.

Race participants look for pledges from family, friends, co-workers, customers and more.

Over the next 25 years, an estimated 5 million Americans will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and more than 1 million could die.

Ronni Cohen-Boyer, executive director of the Massachusetts Affiliate of the Susan G. Komen for the Cure, said much progress has been made in diagnosing and treating breast cancer.

"The breakthroughs have been enormous," said Cohen-Boyer, 58, a breast cancer survivor. "They are now looking at the breakdown of a tumor and what is causing a tumor to occur. That research will make huge inroads."

Weymouth resident Julie Graham, 39, said she has run in the Race for the Cure the past four years.

"This is my fifth year running," Graham said. "I have a friend who is fighting breast cancer. I'm a young healthy woman and I am running for the women who can't."

Graham said she also takes part in the race because some of her relatives have battled cancer over the years.

"Because of the Komen race there are so many different treatment options that they did not have before," Graham said.

She said funds raised in the Race for the Cure also help provide patients with transportation to treatments so they don't have to rely on public transportation.

"Susan Komen does so much more than raising support for medical research," Graham said.

Pembroke resident Kathryn Maloney, 56, a cervical cancer survivor, said she is driven to take part in the Komen race because her mother died of ovarian cancer.

"My older brother had colon cancer and he passed away," Maloney said. "My best friend had ovarian cancer and breast cancer and passed away."

Maloney said the Komen organization has done much to fund research for treating cancer.

"I'm a survivor," she said. "The survivorship is much greater than it was five years ago."

Maloney said cancer treatments and early detection are providing much better outcomes for patients than in years past.

"With all the funds raised we now have better medicine and treatments," she said. "I just wish we had a cure or a vaccine."

Maloney said there is much camaraderie among the Komen race participants.

"Everyone is supporting everybody," she said. "You have survivors, men and women who are going through cancer treatments. We lift each other up."

The Race for the Cure is Komen MA's single largest fundraiser of the year. And organizers hope to improve upon the $440,000 raised from the race last year.

"People should participate if they want to be certain that their dollars make a difference in our local communities," said Lisa Cascio, spokeswoman for Komen MA.

Up to 75 percent of the net funds raised locally, stay in the state to support local community health and education programs, according to Komen MA. The other 25 percent funds Komen's national research programs.

The foundation recently announced that $4.7 million in funding will go to researchers at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Harvard Medical School.

The race fee is $40 for timed runners, or $35 for un-timed participants on Race Day.

The registration deadline is right up until the race, on Sept. 29, from 6 a.m. to 7:45 a.m.

CMI to host rowing race on Sunday

Left, pilot gigs, banks dories, workboats, and livery doubles, and Pilot Gigs heading to sea on the first leg of the 2012 Minot's Light Roundabout.

Cohasset Maritime Institute will host the Minot's Light Roundabout rowing race on Sunday, Sept. 22 at 11 a.m. This 4-mile race will start and finish at Sandy Beach, making viewing the race great for shore side spectators. The course will run out past The Grampus Rocks, to marks off Minot's Lighthouse and back to a finish line off Sandy Beach. The Roundabout is open to a variety of sea-worthy rowing craft, including the sturdy 4-oared CMI shells and smaller craft rowed by one or two people. Last year's race featured a colorful fleet of 15 ocean-going boats from all over New England, from single-person to six-person boats, with the fastest finishing in 40 minutes.

This coming Sunday should be a festive day at Sandy Beach. CMI is expecting a larger field for the race this year.

This coming Sunday should be a festive day at Sandy Beach. CMI is expecting a larger field for the race this year. Pre-registration indicates a race fleet of whaleboats, pilot gigs, livery boats and sliding seat singles, doubles and fours. These include more than 10 large boats of four to six seats, and more than 80 youth and adult rowers. Racing will take place from 11 a.m. to noon, with boats going off in staggered starts. The Rusty Skippers Band will entertain all in concert at noon.

Registration at Sandy Beach is open at 9 a.m. on the day of the race, but pre-registration is recommended. Links to the registration page can be found at rowcmi.com or on facebook. For more information, contact CMI Roundabout Chair Doug McLellan at:(douglasmclellan@verizon.net).

CMI is a community rowing program that offers rowing to youth and adults of all experience levels, in its four 26-foot 4-oared ocean-going shells, as well as in smaller singles and doubles. CMI welcomes new and experienced rowers every season. Those who want to row next spring/summer can come Sandy Beach on Sept. 22 and meet some CMI folks. Visit rowcmi.com for more information about youth and adult programs.

Pet parade next week!

Here's what's happening at the Cohasset Farmers Market next week.

This week, the spotlight is on spinach.

September ushers in the bounty of fall vegetables, and one of the most glorious greens of cool weather is spinach, with its beautiful, curvy, dark leaves, just waiting to pop into a salad or a stir-fry.

Spinach is thought to have originated in Persia about 2,000 years ago and the name is speculated to mean "green hand." When Catherine de Medici was Queen of France, she insisted that spinach be served with her every meal. She was from Florence, which is where the term "à la Florentine" originates, so if you see this on a menu, expect a lot of spinach!

Vitamins A and C, plus iron and potassium, are just a few of the many nutrients found in spinach. To store spinach, place in an airy plastic bag in the bottom of the fridge. It can also be quickly blanched and frozen. See below for a quick and tasty spinach salad recipe.

Calling all pets!

The Cohasset Farmers Market's annual Pet Parade is coming up on Thursday, Sept. 26 at 4 p.m. The event is open to any and all variety of pets!

Maybe you have a cute goat, a beautiful chicken, or a handsome pig! Of course, dogs are always welcome.

Dress your pet in a creative costume – the wilder and more outlandish, the better – and parade around the Common to the cheers of the crowd. Who knows? Your pet might win a prize.

Judging is by certified professional dog trainer Terry Haskins of The Dog Butler. If he brings his dog Ronin again this year, you're in for a treat— trainer and dog put on quite a show last year!

Spinach Salad with Pine Nuts and Raisins

- 1-1/2 tablespoons golden raisins, soaked to soften
- 1-1/2 tablespoons pine nuts, toasted, coarsely chopped
- 1-1/2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
- 1-1/2 teaspoons minced shallot
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons olive oil

Salt, pepper

6 cups (packed) torn spinach leaves

Shaved Pecorino Romano or Parmigiano cheese

Whisk first 5 ingredients in small bowl. Whisk in oil. Season with salt and pepper. Toss spinach with vinaigrette in large bowl. Top with cheese.

Makes 4 servings.

Coming up at the Market:

Thursday, Oct. 10: Pumpkin Decorating Contest. Create something beautiful, funny, ugly, and original for this fun competition.

Thursday, Oct. 17: Harvest Day. View the market's bountiful Harvest Basket and watch a cooking demo and tasting as Anna Abbruzzese creates a luscious "Harvest Sauté."

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6 p.m. through Oct. 17. For more info, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

Fill-the-Boot, Touch-a-Truck this weekend

Once again, it's time to help fill the boot and touch a truck.

Cohasset firefighters are volunteering their time to host a Fill-the-Boot drive for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) today (Friday, Sept. 20), Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day at Stop & Shop. The drive started yesterday (Thursday, Sept. 19).

Kids can also come out to Touch-a-Truck. The firefighters will bring an engine and their gear to Stop & Shop for children to check out. They can try on the gear and sit behind the wheel of the truck.

Look for Cohasset Fire Lieutenant Rob Forde, who has headed the Fill-the-Boot drive in Cohasset every year for the past seven. The Smith boys Gregory, 11, and Daniel, 8, who are both MDA Ambassadors, also join in the fun while helping to raise awareness and funds for muscular dystrophy.

If you go: Fill-the-Boot and Touch-a-Truck

Who: Cohasset fire department, on behalf of the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA).
What: Fill-the-Boot for charity and Touch-a-Truck!
When: 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20, Saturday, Sept. 21 and Sunday, Sept. 22.
Where: Stop & Shop, 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Eileen M. Howorth

Eileen M. Howorth

COHASSET – Eileen M. (Sorterup) Howorth, age 90, of Cohasset, formerly of So. Weymouth, passed away peacefully Sept. 15, 2013, surrounded by her loving family.

Beloved wife of the late Carlton "Bud" Howorth Jr, she was the devoted mother of Susan Howorth Pritchard, Diane Dooley and husband, Dennis of Cohasset, and the late Carlton "Buddy" Howorth III; Nana of Lauren Dooley Nappi and husband Michael, Michael Dooley Jr., and Elizabeth Howorth; great-grandmother of Sofia Nappi; sister of the late June Buddenhagen, Carole Cochran and Doris Sorterup; special aunt to Linda Smith and Chickie Tolman.

Eileen was born in Malden and raised in Montclair and North Quincy. She graduated from North Quincy High School.

Eileen worked as a welder and a sheet metal worker at the Quincy Shipyard. She was a USO Hostess during World War II.

Eileen was proud of her Swedish heritage and she enjoyed ballroom dancing and jitterbugging.

She and Bud relaxed at Sandy Beach, vacationed on the Cape, and treasured their family time.

A memorial service was held Thursday, Sept. 19, 2013, at 7 p.m. in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset Commons. A graveside service will be held in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Donations to honor Eileen may be made to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Lawrence S. Glass

Lawrence S. Glass

BONDVILLE, VT – Lawrence "Larry" Stephen Glass died suddenly on September 7, 2013 at age 76. He could repair, rewire and fix anything but "stupid." Most importantly, he was known as the master builder and architect of a one-of-a-kind family, using unwavering love and laughter as his tools. Born in Brooklyn, New York, Lawrence Stephen Glass was the son of Lou and May (Chitoff) Glass.

He grew up in Kew Gardens and later went to Lowell Technical Institute and Philadelphia Textile Institute where he was president of every club from golf to bowling. He also served in the Army National Guard as radio technician.

Larry leaves behind the love of his life–the "Cooky" to his "Larry"–impossible to say one without the other--Julie "Cooky" (Raben) Glass. His death creates an irreplaceable void in the lives of his children, Gary J. Glass and wife, Karen Tamarkin Glass of Ardsley, New York and Linda Glass Fechter ("Corker") and husband Michael Fechter of Cohasset Massachusetts.

His grandchildren, for whom he was incredibly proud, include Evan and Jason Glass and Morgan and Jack Fechter. He was brother, sage advisor, friend and "parent" and had the deepest unconditional love for sister Susan Glass Harris and the late Michael T. Glass. He was loving brother-in-law to Rob Robinson, Tibby (Raben) and Abby Ross of Boca Raton, Florida and the late Richard Raben. He was son-in-law to the late Harry and Anne Raben.

Larry and Cooky raised their family in Dix Hills, New York. They lived there for nearly two decades until moving to Stamford, CT en route to their home of the past 20 years, Bondville, Vermont.

The Larry "Rube Goldberg" approach to projects and life meant that he always found a way to make things work. He was a man of few words with his own signature language and way of expressing emotion, if he called you a putz, you were loved. He was most comfortable in a flannel shirt, jeans, and a smile and his grand-dogs were never far from his side. His gift of humor was only surpassed by his devotion to family and friends.

In addition to family, golf, and tinkering in his workshop he also had a talent for marble sculpting. He was on the Winhall Zoning Board and was a former member of the Israel Congregation of Manchester.

Larry's personal slogan was "I Show Up." His phone rang off the hook from those seeking counsel on everything from leaky faucets to lawnmowers. He truly could fix anything, as if he were human duct tape... everything that is, except the broken hearts of all those he's left behind.

A Celebration of Larry's life was held at 11:30 a.m. on September 11 at the Brewster & Shea Funeral Service, Manchester, VT followed by time with family and friends at 1 p.m., Manchester Country Club, Manchester, VT. Jeans were requested.

Memorial gifts in memory of Larry may be made to the Jimmy Fund or Second Chance Animal Center, c/o Brewster & Shea Funeral Services, P.O. Box 885, Manchester, VT 05255.

The family has entrusted services to the care of Brewster Funeral Services, Manchester, VT.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Distracted driving does not always involve an electronic device. Items that hang from your rear view mirror can be a distraction and obstruct your view, especially when turning, and can create a blind spot. This large strip of flowers was found hanging on the rear view mirror and was a contributing factor in this crash. COURTESY PHOTO

WISE TO THE WORD

CARDOON: A cardoon is a vegetable, also known as the artichoke thistle, that looks a bit like celery on a bad day and has a flavor reminiscent of artichoke hearts and salsify. Popular in Italy, Spain and France, the cardoon is related to the Globe artichoke. — Cookthink

EASY RECIPE

Hot Spinach-Artichoke Dip

Makes 16 servings.

- 1 (10-ounce) package frozen chopped spinach
- 1/4 cup reduced-fat Pepper Jack cheese, shredded
- 1 cup imported Parmesan cheese, preferably Parmigiano-Reggiano, freshly grated
- 2 (14-ounce) cans artichoke hearts packed in water, rinsed and drained
- 1/2 cup light mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup fat-free ricotta cheese
- 2 t fresh lemon juice
- 1/4 t ground red pepper
- Vegetable dippers

Preheat oven to 350 F. Spray a 1-quart baking dish with nonstick spray.

Microwave the spinach according to package directions. Drain, let cool, then squeeze dry. Transfer spinach to a large bowl.

To make the topping, combine Pepper Jack cheese and 2 tablespoons of Parmesan cheese in a small bowl until blended.

Pulse the artichoke hearts in a food processor until smooth. Transfer artichokes to the bowl with the spinach. Stir in remaining Parmesan cheese, mayonnaise, ricotta, lemon juice and ground red pepper until well mixed. Scrape into the prepared dish. Sprinkle evenly with the topping.

Bake, uncovered, until the filling is hot and the cheese is melted, about 30 minutes. Serve with the vegetable dippers.

Clear glasses, jars jazz up desserts

By Kathryn Rem

SXC.HU.COM

If you're searching for a new way to impress dinner guests, look around your house for unused jars.

Desserts served in small, clear jars look elegant, are portion-controlled and show off the colors and textures of layered dishes.

"This has become a trend with chefs in restaurants," said Andrea Jourdan, author of "150 Best Desserts in a Jar" (Robert Rose, 2013, $24.95). "Everything is pretty in a jar."

Jourdan, who lives in Montreal, is a chef who noticed the increasing number of jarred desserts on restaurant menus in Chicago, New York and Paris. So she started scouting around her house for suitable dessert jars and found "they were everywhere."

Easiest to find, perhaps, are wide-mouth canning jars. But she also recycles jelly and jam jars, condiment jars and all types of clear glass jars from around the world.

"Don't use any jars that are chipped or very old," she said. "If you have buttons in a jar from grandma, don't use it."

Other tips from Jourdan:

- Select jars that fit the dessert. A layered dish will require a taller jar than a creamy flan.
- Use a funnel, ice-cream scoop or pastry bag to fill jars neatly.
- Mix it up. Serve dessert to each guest in a different type of jar.
- Place jars on a baking or cookie sheet when baking. When cooking in a bain-marie (hot water bath), don't let jars touch.
- Leave extra room for expansion if freezing desserts in jars.
- Label jars with the date it was made and use-by date if giving as gifts.

Single-serve desserts aren't the only dishes that can be arranged in jars.

"Serving jars are a great way to put a different spin on a familiar recipe or to present something new and unusual," Jourdan said.

"I've served just about everything in jars."

Recipes are from "150 Best Desserts in a Jar."

Pink Chantilly with Cranberries

Makes 4 servings.

- 1 1/2 cups raspberries, fresh or frozen
- 3 T powdered sugar
- 2 cups frozen cranberries, thawed
- 1/2 cup maple syrup (see note)
- 1 1/2 cups heavy or whipping cream
- 1 T granulated sugar
- 1 t vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup cranberry juice
- Mint leaves (optional)

In blender, puree raspberries and powdered sugar. Transfer to a fine-mesh sieve placed over a bowl and press mixture through. Discard seeds and set raspberry puree aside.

In saucepan over medium heat, cook cranberries and maple syrup, stirring often, for 15 minutes. Remove from heat and set aside to cool. In large bowl, using electric mixer at high speed, whip cream, granulated sugar and vanilla until soft peaks begin to form. Beating constantly, slowly add cranberry juice and half the raspberry puree.

Spoon remaining raspberry puree into four (8-ounce) jars, dividing equally. Top with whipped cream mixture, dividing equally. Refrigerate for up to 30 minutes.

When you're ready to serve, remove jars from refrigerator and top with cooked cranberries. Using a long spoon, mix delicately. Garnish with mint leaves, if desired, and serve immediately.

Note: Use real maple syrup. Maple-flavored syrups contain a lot of sugar or corn syrup and do not cook the same way.

Tropical Fruit Terrine

Makes 6 servings.

- 2 (3-ounce) packages lime-flavored gelatin
- 3 cups unsweetened grape juice, divided
- 1 cup granulated sugar, divided
- 3 kiwifruit, peeled and diced
- 1 large grapefruit (or 2 oranges), cut into segments, juice reserved
- 2 mangoes, peeled and diced
- 2 passion fruits
- 2 T creme fraiche

In small bowl, sprinkle gelatin powder over 1 cup grape juice. Set aside to soften for 3 minutes.

In small saucepan over medium-high heat, heat 1/2 cup sugar with remaining grape juice, whisking until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat and stir in softened gelatin until dissolved. Set aside to cool for 5 minutes.

Place a few kiwi slices in bottoms of six (8-ounce, tall) jars, dividing equally. Add enough gelatin mixture to just cover fruits. Set aside excess gelatin mixture. Refrigerate jars for 2 hours, until gelatin sets.

Meanwhile, in a saucepan, combine grapefruit segments and reserved grapefruit juice, mangos and remaining 1/2 cup sugar. Cook over low heat 10 minutes, stirring often. Add remaining gelatin mixture and stir gently to dissolve. Remove from heat and set aside until saucepan is cool to the touch.

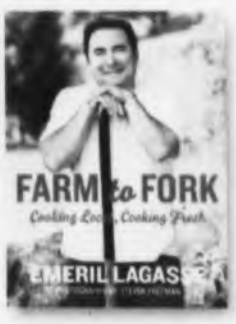
When fruit mixture has cooled, spoon over kiwi layer, dividing equally. Refrigerate 2 hours or until set.

When you're ready to serve, cut passion fruits in half. Using a spoon, remove pulp and seeds. Place pulp of half a passion fruit in each jar. Serve immediately, topped with a small dollop of creme fraiche.

A few of my favorite cookbooks, from Emeril to Bee

LINDA BASSETT

I bought an e-reader a short while ago. It's great for traveling, but not for cookbooks. Julia Child's "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" as an e-book? Big mistake.



You can't turn pages on an e-book while cooking. Wet, food-sloppy hands make a mess of it, maybe short it out. A print volume will get messy, too, but food stains in a cookbook are considered a badge of honor.

Nevertheless, electronic or print, I keep lists of books in many wonderful and weird categories. Here are a few of my favorite cookbooks:

Kitchen dash

"Farm to Fork" by Emeril Lagasse. Emeril evolves constantly. The cantaloupe pasta sauce was a revelation. I created my own version with peaches and basil. Fruit and pasta — who knew?

"Bistro Cooking" by Patricia Wells. An old book that I go back to often. Everything looks delicious, especially her rabbit in mustard sauce — now a favorite, even when I make it with chicken legs and thighs for finicky eaters.

Sweet dreams

"Blue Bistro" by Elin Hilderbrand. This novel about a fictional Nantucket restaurant is on my e-reader. Packed with behind-the-scenes action on how an entire staff works together to make clients happy for the few short hours spent in their dining room.

"Heat" by Bill Buford. A writer for the New Yorker magazine pinch hits in restaurant kitchens and finds it to be fulfilling, if hard, work. Better than a reality show to learn how a successful restaurant kitchen really works.

Geek appeal

"Consider the Fork" by Bee Wilson. A history of cooking utensils, methods and the kitchen, and their effects on the world around them.

"At Home" by Bill Bryson. Chapters on the kitchen, the dining room and the pantry in this history of houses are especially enjoyable.

Kid friendly

Lora Brody's "Kitchen Survival Guide." The best starter cookbook ever. Brody wrote this in a mother's voice for her own kids when they went off to college.

Mary Ann Esposito's Ciao Italia books, "Pronto: 30 Minute Recipes" and "Five Ingredient Favorites." Both get the cook in and out of the kitchen fast with delicious results; both work for beginners, but are fun for experienced cooks, too.

Linda Bassett is the author of "From Apple Pie to Pad Thai: Neighborhood Cooking North of Boston." Reach her by email at KitchenCall@aol.com.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 30, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might need to get more facts to help you work out those problems with your new project. As always, a friendly approach shows the charming Arian at his or her persuasive best.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Information is what energizes ambition, and this is a good time for the ambitious Bovine to expand his or her range of knowledge and to be ready for the challenges that lie ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is a good time to consider making some long-overdue decorating changes at home or in your workplace. A splash of color can help raise spirits, even on the grayest day.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Learn more. Earn more. That's the formula for Moon Children looking to expand their career horizons. Investigate the best places to get those training courses you'll need.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your creative side helps gain attention for many of your ideas. But don't neglect the practical aspects involved in implementing their move from paper to production. Good luck.

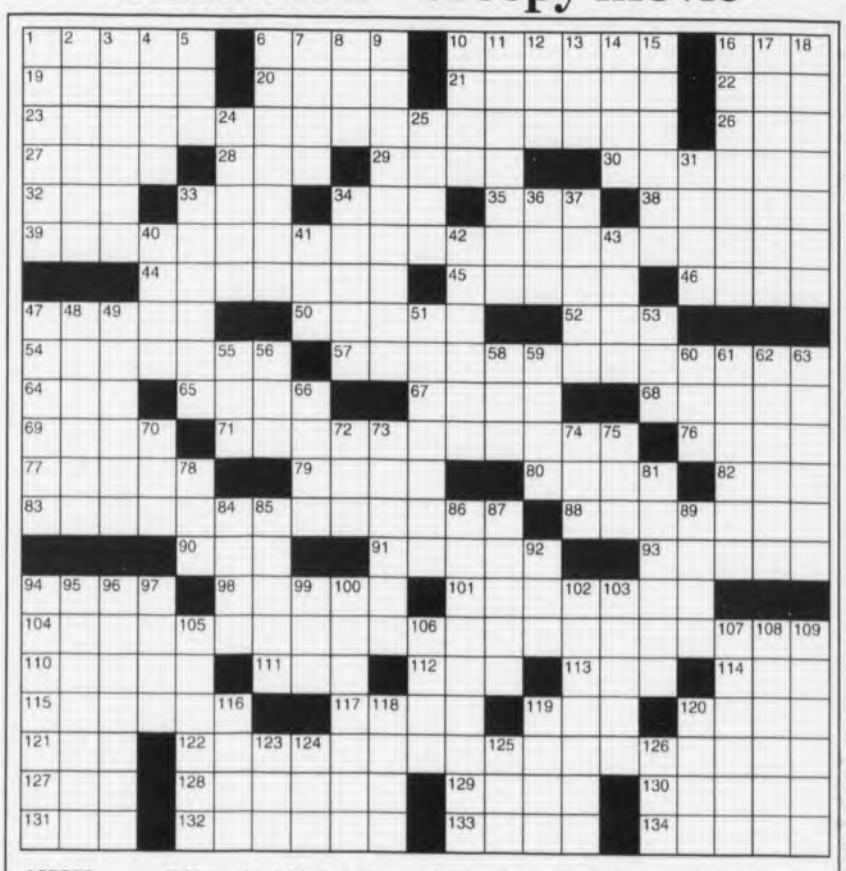
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A health problem should not be ignored. The sooner you check it out, the sooner you can deal with it and then move on. Some job advice comes from an unlikely source.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A relationship takes an unexpected shift that could leave you puzzled and hurt. Asking for an explanation could help uncover the reason for this sudden turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your busy schedule has drawn down much of your energy levels. Restore them by spending a well-earned time out enjoying the arts — perhaps with that special someone.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Make that presentation with confidence. Remember: When you show you believe in yourself, it helps persuade others that you truly know what you're doing.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although you usually prefer doing things on your own, a group effort might be advisable at this time. Try to keep an open mind about suggestions from colleagues.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This could be a good time to reassess some of your recent decisions and see if any adjustments should be made based on facts that you might have just uncovered.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An emotionally charged situation creates uncertainty about the future of your relationship. Best advice: Talk things out while there's still time to reach a new understanding.

BORN THIS WEEK: You tend to act on matters of principle despite what others might advise.

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Quarrel over candidate

Selectmen fail to fill opening on board

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The bottom line is the Conservation Commission still has an opening for an associate commissioner despite efforts to appoint an enthusiastic applicant to the post in two Board of Selectmen meetings.

After a long, contentious discussion this week – Selectmen in a tie vote (2 to 2 with one abstention) nixed the appointment of Patrice Vogelman, 46 Black Rock Road, who came highly recommended by Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Conservation Commission Chairman Jack Creighton.

Under the Town Manager Act, appointments to the Conservation Commission are the town manager's to make with selectmen having power to approve or reject the appointment. A tie vote results in a veto of the appointment.

The appointment discussion came more than three hours into a four-hour long marathon meeting Tuesday during which members of the Board of Selectmen differed on myriad issues ranging from launching a police chief search now (it did not go forward) to how deeply should they be involved in the minutiae of the proposed town budget.

During a discussion on keeping politics out of the Conservation Commission – Selectman Karen Quigley lashed out at Creighton calling him a "big fat liar" after

Parking matters

Police to ticket 'common' violators

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Parking enforcement around the Town Common has begun in earnest.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said during Tuesday's board meeting that there is illegal parking along William B. Long Road, which runs through the Town Common near First Parish Church that is creating gridlock and a dangerous situation.

"I have been very concerned about the road by First Parish," Gjesteby said, noting that signage there prohibits parking except on Sundays. "This has been ignored by police," she said describing the practice as "fraught with danger."

Gjesteby said several people have complained to her. She described her own experience of having difficulty trying to pull out of William B. Long Jr. Road.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said police would step up enforcement. "Enforcement is always a last resort; prevention and education are our first

They are taking their show on the road.

The stars in this intensely local production are members of the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee whose role is to recommend projects seeking money from the town's preservation fund to Town Meeting.

In a lively, freewheeling meeting on Monday, CPC members said they are not ready to officially propose reducing the local Community Preservation Act surcharge from 1.5 percent to 1 percent without an all-out, town-wide effort to see what projects might benefit from CPC grants.

Any reduction in the town's surcharge would also translate into less money in state matching grants – currently at about 26 percent. That means the town gets a 26 percent return on its investment, CPC Chairman Russell Bonetti pointed out. The state is also looking at putting an additional $25 million into the state CPA fund that would up the ante for participating cities and towns to about 40 percent, Bonetti said.

"Where are you going to get that return on your money?" Bonetti asked.

This year — with no projects planned for the Special Town Meeting – the CPC has more time to concentrate on getting its script finished and production ready for the annual Town Meeting next spring.

To that end, each member of the board will serve as a liaison to various town committees and organizations – such as the Historical Society, Historical Commission, Planning Board, Design Review Board, Housing Authority,

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Red Cross Blood Drive on Oct. 4

What: A Red Cross Blood Drive will take place from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m., on Friday, Oct. 4, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St. At this time, donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

Why: Everyone, whether it is realized or not, depends on blood. Every two seconds, someone needs blood. Each day, patients across the country receive approximately 38,000 units of this lifesaving resource. This year alone, as many as 5 million patients will require blood transfusions, as accident victims, people undergoing surgery, and patients receiving treatment for leukemia, cancer and other diseases. All blood types are currently needed, with an urgent need for O negative and B negative.

Donors: In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or for more information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290 or Red Cross Blood Services at 800-448-3543.

More: For more information on the blood donation process or current eligibility guidelines, call the American Red Cross nursing line at 800-462-9400, ext. 2210, or visit: redcrossblood.org. Those who cannot make it to this Cohasset Blood Drive on Friday, Oct. 4, can go on the web at the site address above for a sampling of other upcoming blood drives in the area.

College Affordability: UMass Boston's Ahead of the Game

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Every fall, the University of Massachusetts Boston opens its doors to high school students looking for the best place to pursue their college education. Although we welcome prospective students to visit our campus at any time, we make a particular effort to do so at our fall open house, scheduled this year for October 19.

This year we anticipate that some 3,000 prospective students and their parents will visit our campus on that day to see the many opportunities UMass Boston offers, and to learn why our university offers an exceptional education at an exceptional value.

I'm proud to say that UMass Boston continues to build its academic offerings and reputation for excellence. Our colleges and programs gain national recognition, from our College of Nursing and Health Sciences and College of Management to our programs in clinical psychology and gerontology. In addition, new programs at the undergraduate level – from engineering to communications – and at the graduate level – from exercise and health sciences to global governance and human security – provide even greater academic opportunities and career options.

At the same time, we are building new, state-of-the-art facilities to enhance the educational and campus experience at UMass Boston. Our Integrated Sciences Complex, which will provide research facilities for faculty and students and classroom space, is scheduled to open next fall. A second new building, scheduled to open in fall 2015, will provide ample classroom and study spaces and a home for the arts and performing arts.

As we expand our academic programs and enhance our oceanfront campus, we also continue to strive to provide access to higher education, keeping our costs and our students' debt burden as low as possible. For example, since 2008 we have increased our commitment to financial aid by almost 300 percent. And this past summer the state legislature voted to approve, and Governor Deval Patrick signed, a budget that increased funding to UMass campuses and keeps tuition and fees at last year's rates. Students at UMass Boston will save approximately $600 this academic year because of the extra support from the state.

I am proud to be part of Boston's public research university and its ever-expanding opportunities and reputation for excellence. I invite you to attend our annual open house on October 19. For more information or to register, visit www.umb.edu, or call 617.287.5000.

Jamey Kupsc

This week the Mariner caught up with Jamey Kupsc, a teacher at the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. Jamey also teaches classes, including handwriting, at the community center. If you see Jamey around town, be sure to tell her you saw her in Picture This. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Name: Jamey Kupsc.

Occupation: Teacher at the South Shore Community Center Nursery School.

Best days of your life: My wedding day and the days my babies were born.

Best (or worst) vacation: Disneyland followed by a road trip to Las Vegas.

Favorite season: Summer (for the beach) and Fall (when I get to meet all my new friends!).

Favorite holiday: Valentine's Day.

Favorite junk food (or meal): Éclairs from Modern Pastry.

Best book (or magazine): "The Perks of Being a Wallflower," by Stephen Chbosky.

Best movie (or actor): The Wizard of Oz.

Best TV show: Grey's Anatomy.

Best music, group, or artist: Zac Brown Band.

Pet peeve: Poor manners.

Most embarrassing moment: Getting caught on one of the little Red Room chairs and tearing the seat of my pants! (Ugh!)

Goal: To encourage children to have confidence in their abilities and to always be proud of their accomplishments.

Person you'd most like to meet: I am not one to be starstruck!

Biggest worry: The amount of violence in the world.

Best part of Cohasset: The South Shore Community Center Nursery School!

COHASSET PSO

Gift-wrapping paper sale is back!

The main gold of the Cohasset PSO is to maximize students' education experience. The PSO funds programs and grants that provide hand-on experiences that support and enrich the lessons learned in the classrooms.

Frustrated by the drug store wrapping paper last holiday season? Not to worry, the Innisbrook Wrapping Paper sale is back. Stock up, as we won't be offering the nice, thick, high-quality paper again for a couple of years. See Osgood or Deer Hill neighbors for a catalog and to place an order. People may also shop online at Innisbrook.com with the school code: 105257. The sale will take place through Oct. 10. Students will deliver orders in mid-November. All funds raised are spent directly on students through teacher grants and enrichment programs.

The first Cohasset PSO Holiday Boutique Fundraiser will take place Nov. 16 at Deer Hill School. The PSO is currently looking for vendors to participate in this community shopping event. For a vendor application or for more information, Mary Fran Olson at CohPSO@gmail.com.

ENERGY UPDATE

Solar project on hold

AEC chair resigns, joins Advisory

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"The state is serious about taking advantage of the work that's already been done so they can realize the solar projects that have been started. Then, we are in very good shape."
Tanya Bodel, Alternative Energy Committee

Cohasset's solar panel project has been temporarily postponed.

The project is on hold as the state recently revised its Solar Renewable Energy Credit (SREC) requirements, according to Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC). The Mass. SREC market has a solar capacity requirement of 400 megawatts (MW). Cohasset's project is estimated to generate around 900MW of solar power.

The town's project, to put a solar array on the roof of the Middle-High School, is now "way down on the list," said Jeanne Astino, a member of the School Committee's Alt. Energy subcommittee, adding that, however, "We're on the list, and that's a good thing."

Dave DeGennaro, School Business Manager and also member of the school's AEC subcommittee, explained at the Sept. 11 school board meeting that Cohasset's project was pushed aside for the time being. Now, the town must "wait for the next round of funding" from the state, according to DeGennaro.

AEC chair Tanya Bodell explained in a phone call that the state changed its criteria for solar projects, seeking "more advanced" ones that "have their permits and are ready to go."

However, the state has also discussed starting a new program, "SREC 2," that will consider projects up to 1600MW.

"In that case, since we're at the 900 mark, we're well within the SREC two program," said Bodell. "The state is serious about taking advantage of the work that's already been done so they can realize the solar projects that have been started. Then, we are in very good shape."

The project should be ready to go once the state funds are available. The town is in negotiations with a solar power developer and was poised to sign a contract; however the developer has decided to wait until the state's new SREC program is finalized.

"The contractor wants to wait until the final terms of the SREC two program is in place," Bodell explained. "It's going to drive their revenue stream for the price of SRECs generated by our project; it would be hard for them to move forward with the project and getting financing until the rules are in place."

The town chose a solar panel developer in April after going through a public Request for Proposals (RFP) process. The chosen company would enter into a 20-year lease of the town properties and will reap savings on energy; electricity would then be sold to the town at a lower rate (a process known as net metering).

The 20-year lease was approved by the December 2011 Special Town Meeting. The AEC has been working since then to draft and issue the RFP.

The latest news is one more in a long series of hurdles the AEC has had to overcome while trying to bring solar power to Cohasset. However, it's only a minor setback, according to DeGennaro.

"We need to continue" pursuing the project, said DeGennaro. "It's not done yet; we're just on hold," adding that the state is "pretty sure we'll retain our place in the queue."

Chair resigns

AEC chair Tanya Bodell, who joined the committee in 2011 and provided insight from her 20 years of experience in the electricity industry, announced that she is leaving the AEC. She was elected as chair in June.

Bodell will bring her expertise to the town's Advisory Committee instead. She has said however, that she intends to help see the solar panel project through.

The AEC plans to meet on Monday, Sept. 30 to reorganize and appoint a new chair. "We're going to do a proper transition and ensure the committee can move forward," she said.

Bodell said that she is reluctant to leave but looks forward to her new Advisory role, which "allows me to expand out and use my 20 years' consulting experience providing advice to clients" to help advise the town.

She hopes that the AEC can finalize the contract with the developer and proceed with the solar project — soon.

"My whole objective was to make sure the great work is done before [leaving] so we can move forward and I can continue to assist however I can."

Of course, she still plans to check in on her old board.

"We have an incredible set up with the members of the AEC," Bodell said. "I intend to be involved as a citizen and liaison from the Advisory Committee; I want to continue to offer the town my expertise and capabilities to the extent they're useful."

Look for more on the project in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Brig St. John commemoration Oct. 6

This year represents the 164th anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Div. 9, Plymouth, will host its annual commemoration of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Sunday, Oct. 6, at St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset. The event will commence at 1 p.m. with Mass in the Church Center, followed by a reception and a short speaking program in the Parish Hall featuring Dr. Bill O'Connell, Irish historian, AOH Plymouth, Div. 9, which will then be followed by a wreath-laying ceremony at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

This year represents the 164th anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor. The ship was bound for Boston from Ireland in September 1849 and encountered a tremendous storm, which blew her off course to the deadly Grampus Ledge. Nearly 100 Irish men, women and children were lost.

This commemoration remembers not only the victims of this tragedy, but also the tremendous bravery and compassion of the citizens of Cohasset who tried to rescue as many as possible and who helped those who were rescued. All are welcome to join us as we remember the victims and the heroes of this tragic event.

POLICE BEAT

Four-car crash at 3A and Beechwood Street

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a four-car accident at the intersection of Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Wednesday (Sept. 18) around 5:50 p.m. Police said a 2004 Toyota SUV, operated by a 21-year-old Kingston man, was headed north on 3A when it attempted a left turn onto Beechwood Street without yielding to oncoming traffic.

The Toyota cut off a 2013 Ford sedan, operated by a 27-year-old Weymouth woman, that was headed south on 3A through the intersection. The Ford took evasive action to try and avoid the collision and hit a 2005 Chrysler sedan that was waiting at the red light on Beechwood. The impact pushed the Chrysler, which was operated by a 59-year-old Cohasset man, into a 1995 Honda, operated by a 59-year-old Scituate man that was also on Beechwood waiting at the light. All the vehicles except for the Honda were towed. The Kingston man was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Parking lot

Police said an 85-year-old Scituate man in a 2011 Nissan Altima went straight across the travel lane at Shaw's Plaza coming from the direction of the Walgreen's drive-thru pharmacy window. The Altima drove into an unoccupied 2007 Toyota SUV. Police said the Scituate man appeared to have "floored" the gas pedal and then the car went out of control and into the parked vehicle. A Scituate woman owns the Toyota.

Police said the elderly motorist was shaken up but refused transport to the hospital against medical advice. A family member picked him up. Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation on the elderly driver to see if he should continue to drive. The test would involve a road test and a clean bill of health from his doctor.

Delivery truck

Police said a delivery truck that had just made a delivery at the loading dock at Shaw's Plaza lost its breaks; the 35-year-old Fall River man operating the truck tried to stop and drove onto the curb taking down a few bushes and a stop sign before coming to a halt. The delivery company had the truck towed and it will be repaired by the fleet mechanic, police said. The incident occurred around 2:40 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 19).

Theft

The owner of a business on Ripley Road notified police on Tuesday (Sept. 7) that a delivery that he was expecting was missing. Police said the delivery was apparently left at the door and someone grabbed it. The shipment was from the distributor with items valued at about $400 for retail sale.

MV break-in

On Wednesday (Sept. 18) around 11:30 a.m., a 50-year-old Scituate woman went to police headquarters to report that her 2000 Jeep Grand Cherokee had been broken into while she was walking in Whitney Woods that morning. Police said the woman reported leaving her Coach handbag on the front seat in the unlocked vehicle that was parked in the parking area. She was gone about 2-1/2 hours. When she returned to her vehicle her purse that contained $50 in cash and numerous credit cards and debit cards was missing. Police are putting on extra patrols in the area.

Road rage

Police spoke to the 20-year-old operator of a Jeep Grand Cherokee that was reported as being involved in a road rage incident that involved tailgating and flashing lights on Wednesday (Sept. 18). Police said reporting party, who is a Scituate motorist, provided a plate number. Police went to 20-year-old's house to talk to him and tell him to cease that type of behavior.

Throwing rocks

A caller reported a group of kids throwing rocks on Government Island, almost hitting a white Ford Explorer at 5:40 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 20). The group had taken off before police arrived but police have put on extra patrols in the area.

Erratic operation

After obtaining the plate number from a caller, police went to the home of a 59-year-old Cohasset man who owns a blue pickup truck because of a report of erratic driving around 10 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 21). Police said the man checked out and said he possibly may have dropped something momentarily on the floor that would have caused him to swerve.

Not home

About three minutes after a concerned mother hung up with police after reporting her 16-year-old son was overdue from his job at a local restaurant at 12:35 a.m. on Sunday (Sept. 22), her son walked in the door at his home. 16-year-old junior operators have to be off the road by 12:30 a.m., police said.

Dog bite

A 23-year-old Cohasset man was walking his miniature pinscher on a leash near the Beechwood Ballpark when his dog was attacked by two unleashed Dobermans, police said.

He provided police with a description of the woman who was with the Dobermans and believes she lives in the area as he had seen her walking before. When the man got home he discovered a puncture wound in his dog's leg and wants to be sure the Dobermans are up to date on their shots. The matter is being handled by the Animal Control Officer.

Living with late-stage Lyme

Cohasset woman shares her struggle

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Imagine having a debilitating disease and not even knowing it. Waking up every morning in pain, feeling weak, sickly, and fatigued for no apparent reason. Seeking help from medical professionals, undergoing countless tests only to receive a misdiagnosis— or no diagnosis at all.

This has been Melissa Rousseau's reality for the past 25 years. After over two decades of feeling ill but not knowing the cause, and undergoing various tests and treatments with little success, Rousseau has finally gotten an answer.

Three months ago, Rousseau was diagnosed with late-stage Lyme disease at the age of 40.

She doesn't recall being bitten by a tick as a child, nor did she ever have the telltale "bull's eye" rash typical of Lyme disease. She'd even been tested for Lyme in the past, only to have the results show up as negative.

It's been a mystery all this time, Rousseau shared.

"I've had this from when I was probably little," she said. "It was misdiagnosed for that long. It's such an easy thing to overlook."

Lyme disease is a bacterial infection transmitted to people through the bite of an infected blacklegged tick, also known as the deer tick. The disease has been found in 65 different countries, according to the Lyme Disease Association.

Lyme is a multi-symptom disease, with the Lyme spirochete (bacteria) hiding in various organs in the body, making it difficult to test for and treat (see sidebar).

For Rousseau, who recently relocated to Cohasset after living in California, it's been a drawn-out, painful and often frustrating journey.

"I've had a million misdiagnoses," she said. "I've seen more doctors, practitioners and specialists than I can recall, and have spent more money — even on the alternative stuff."

Seeking help became so overwhelming that there were plenty of times over the years she wanted to give up on trying to find out what was making her so sick.

"There were time periods I was going to take this off the shelf and find someone to help me figure this out, and cross things off the list," said Rousseau. "But I put it back on the shelf for a long time. I was in school; I started a whole new career [as a holistic nutritionist]. I thought, 'I'm starting over. Moving to California was part of that starting over — a new life, a new lifestyle. I had expectations all of this would disappear... But I kept getting worse and worse."

How it began

Rousseau doesn't know the moment she was infected with Lyme, or even how it happened.

"I grew up in Cohasset and was in the woods all day" as a kid, she said, figuring that a tick bite could have occurred at any time.

Over the years, Rousseau said she started to "notice things that weren't quite right." She often felt sore and achy. An active child involved in sports and gymnastics, she often chalked up her pain to her physical activities.

"I definitely noticed aches and pains, and issues with my feet. I blamed it on gymnastics."

She endured "a bunch of surgeries" on her feet that "didn't help at all." Then she pushed her pain aside to take care of her mother, who was diagnosed with cancer. That was also when Rousseau decided to pursue a career as a nutritionist and wellness expert.

Rousseau said it was easier at times to just try to ignore the pain and go on with life. Addressing her symptoms and chasing down doctors became too overwhelming.

"You get used to feeling that way," she explained. "In the moments when we're tired and overstressed, it's a lot more challenging to deal with. It becomes your normal."

However, it got to the point where Rousseau couldn't deal any more.

"Overtime, my symptoms got progressively worse — headaches, spine aches, neck aches; the fatigue piece is a super challenge. You can will yourself to get up and walk around, and movement decreases pain... but the fatigue piece is killer. It's so debilitating."

Journey to diagnosis

Rousseau was diagnosed with fibromyalgia 17 years ago: long-term, unexplained muscular and joint pain that shares many of the same symptoms as Lyme, including fatigue. While that didn't turn out to be the end of the story, Rousseau said she was relieved to finally have a name for what she was experiencing.

It had been a long time coming.

"I waited eight months for that appointment, and three hours" on the day of for an appointment that last all of five minutes. Still, she was glad to finally receive a diagnosis and learn that she wasn't crazy.

"I'd already been through the ringer, seeing tons of different people," said Rousseau. "I was grateful to have a name of something."

Rousseau was prescribed painkillers and told to follow up with the doctor a year and a half later. This did not solve her problems.

"This is what happens when doctors don't know, or don't have the creativity or will to help you figure out what's going on," she said.

Rousseau took matters into her own hands, researching natural remedies and homeopathic treatments, and "the power food has on our bodies." She changed her diet and began practicing yoga. She calls this her "self-care" practice.

"All of those things are hugely helpful and put me in a better place to heal," she explained.

At one point Rousseau moved to California, where she planned to be surrounded by other natural wellness enthusiasts, to launch her jewelry design career. It was a California doctor that finally, after 25 years, correctly diagnosed her with late-stage Lyme.

It wasn't the first time she'd been tested, but for once, the result was positive.

"I've been tested for Lyme four times and it came back negative," Rousseau said. "He ran a battery of tests, and it came back positive.

"He emailed me the test over the weekend, and I remember being so nervous to open the test," she continued. "When it was positive, I just lost it. It was a very emotional moment."

Rousseau moved back to Cohasset to recuperate while she gets treatment from a specialist in Maine. Her new course of treatment is taking its toll, sending her immune system into "total chaos."

"In order to feel better, you have to get a lot worse," she explained.

How Lyme affects the body

Looking at Rousseau, a lithe, petite, youthful blonde, one would never know that she is battling an incapacitating illness.

"Lyme can present itself differently" in different people, she explained. "Some people look at me, and I look completely fine; they would never know at this moment, I'm in excruciating pain. It's a blessing and a curse. I can get by in life unnoticed, but it puts pressure on you to perform on normal expected levels."

There is also a major difference between early and late-stage/chronic Lyme, Rousseau emphasized. While early stage Lyme infection occurs immediately after a tick bite and can typically be treated with a round of antibiotics, chronic Lyme is tougher to tackle. Late-stage Lyme can mimic other chronic diseases such as multiple sclerosis and Parkinson's.

"Everyone has different symptoms, co-infections, and immune system health," she said. "What works for one person is not going to be what works for someone else."

Now, trying to feel better is a round-the-clock necessity for Rousseau.

"When managing a chronic illness, you keep a very strict schedule," she explained. "It's like a full day job."

Rousseau sits on a heating pad to ease her leg pain. She takes naps when she needs to and exercises when she can. Otherwise, she is focused on her nutrition and wellness consulting business – Vibrant Mind Body – working with clients to help them develop healthy diets and lifestyles. She spends as much time as possible updating her website, blog and Facebook page to connect with clients and keep followers involved in her personal journey.

Rousseau said that she feels this is her purpose — sharing her experience in the hopes of comforting and helping others.

Her advice for those who think they might have Lyme? Find a Lyme literate doctor, and get tested. And, of course, "If you've just been bitten by a tick, get it taken care of right away."

She also advises folks to educate themselves, stay informed, and be persistent when it comes to getting proper care.

"There is something so challenging about being sick and being your own advocate; it's really hard to do," said Rousseau. "We put so much power in our medical professionals to know everything... but when you find the right person, you both bring something to the table."

No matter what, "Don't be blown off like you're crazy."

And above all, take "baby steps" to incorporate healthier habits for overall wellness that will "become part of your habit," Rousseau suggested.

"There's so much you don't have control over; you've got to concentrate on the things you do have control over. It helps to re-empower yourself."

To Rousseau, "Food is medicine, I truly believe. It can be nothing but beneficial to eat the best foods, decreasing your inflammation... and super boost your body. I also believe in the power of sweating and detoxing."

Armed with natural wellness and nutritional know-how, and the will to heal her body, Rousseau said she is optimistic about the future.

"I am hopeful," she said. "I feel like I am on the right path."

Boards to see if design should be curbed

New Beechwood, Norman Todd intersection problematic

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

"If you approve something and it was not what was intended you can stop it."
Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

The Board of Selectmen is responding to the concerns of a neighbor that the new intersection at Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road needs some adjustment before further construction takes place.

Richard Fitzpatrick of 2 Hammond Ave. spoke during the Selectmen's public comment period on Tuesday evening that the new design had not taken into account the realities of the intersection.

He explained that as one heads up Beechwood Street to make a right onto Norman Todd Road, the roadway gets extremely narrow. Part of the mitigation process for the new Toll Brothers subdivision under construction off Beechwood was to narrow the mouth of the intersection where it meets Norman Todd.

"As they have begun to lay it out, you can see what the reality is going to be," said Fitzpatrick, adding he was nearly rear-ended by another vehicle recently when he tried to make that right onto Beechwood Street. Toll Brothers is constructing a subdivision off Beechwood of 41 single-family homes, dubbed the Estates of Cohasset.

Fitzpatrick said he asked town Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce to take a look at the construction and he said it was within the standards and meets the guidelines. However, Fitzpatrick said while it was a great idea in principle, the result is a sharply angled curve.

Although selectmen and the planning board have signed off on the plans, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, who attended the meeting for an unrelated executive session, said selectmen are in charge of the roads of the town and can halt a project.

"If you approve something and it was not what was intended you can stop it," he explained.

DeRensis further explained that the town is not locked into a design if it turns out, for example, that a school bus or fire truck cannot get through without hitting a curb.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she was concerned that when it snows, the intersection would even be narrower.

Selectman Karen Quigley noted that the time to act is now before the contractor completes the work. "Sometimes things look good on paper and meet the requirements but in reality they don't work," she said.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed compared the intersection to the old Eisenhower highways when one had to stop and merge almost at a right angle. "Can we call a time out and have a meeting in the field before they put concrete in?"

Both selectmen Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer asked procedural questions about who to notify if the board opts to review existing site conditions and how to go about it.

DeRensis said the planning board and contractor at the site both need to be in the loop. He also strongly suggested the board try to communicate their concerns in a non-confrontational manner rather than issuing a stop-work order.

To that end the board decided to conduct a site visit that was scheduled for 9 a.m. today (Friday). Koed suggested that any interested neighbors should be there.

QUARREL

a back-and-forth between the two on what each claimed to be the other's position.

Quigley sarcastically claimed that Creighton, who said the commission should justly and fairly administer the laws equally to everyone, was finally agreeing with her on keeping politics out of permitting boards. That statement that prompted Creighton to claim that Quigley had told him that a commissioner's role is to be an advocate, prompting Quigley to lash out at Creighton.

At this point, Chairman Fred Koed tried to regain decorum by saying, "let's bring this down...let's move on." As the discussion went on, Quigley twice told Creighton that she too could play the "staring game" and glared back at Creighton who was sitting at a table facing her.

Quigley claimed the Vogelman appointment was political because in her view, the superior qualifications of the other candidates were ignored. "In my mind what is happening here is just another political appointment," she said.

At its Sept. 3 meeting, the board told Milanoski that it did not feel all the applicants for the post (four in all) were given a fair shot. Milanoski offered to hold off on the appointment until all were interviewed.

This week Creighton explained the other applicants – Fran Collins and Bob Huey — had been interviewed at length and were now installed as members of the Stormwater Advisory Committee. They could be considered again for the Conservation Commission when more openings arise, he said. A fourth applicant, Ed Wadsworth, went onto the Stormwater Committee before being considered for Conservation, Creighton said.

Creighton explained that Vogelman, whose career includes 30 years with Verizon Communications, had a skill set that the commission needs, namely her technical background in electronic communications. "She has excellent skills that will help us move forward in an electronic environment," Creighton said.

Koed decided to abstain from the vote. He explained later that the Town Manager should strive for unanimous acclamation to his appointments and it was clear weeks before that two selectmen felt strongly that the other candidates had stronger environmental credentials.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who voted no with Quigley, also expressed her distain for the process and said Vogelman would be better suited for many other boards but is not the right fit for conservation.

Selectmen Steve Gaumer and Diane Kennedy supported the appointment of Vogelman.

What soon followed was the Governance Committee nomination of Creighton, which was rejected in a majority vote because the majority of the board thinks there are too many of the same people serving on different boards. Gaumer and Kennedy supported his appointment.

"I am increasingly concerned about the number of interlocking directorships," Quigley said. "We have too few people sitting on too many committees consolidating power into too few hands."

She said Governance has a large number of people on it already and she would prefer to appoint people who do not already sit on other committees or boards.

Koed said there was increasing concern in town that there were a "handful of people holding a lot of very important positions and not spreading the wealth around."

Selectman Diane Kennedy took issue with that and noted that Governance was not fully populated. She pointed out that power is Town Meeting and ultimately rests with the people.

Creighton said he had been attending the Governance meetings as a citizen and was pleased when they asked him to serve. He praised the committee and noted that the frameworks the committee sets up now, should help keep political battles at bay.

"Whatever happens in my case, I think it behooves the Board of Selectmen to understand what you are dealing with today and put that energy into a framework that works and is not deadlocked," he said.

choices," Quigley said. "This being a safety issue will make it a priority. I'm also interested in working with the board to possibly adjust some of the parking signage in that area "

Quigley said police wrote about 12 tickets on Wednesday, after receiving the directive. Three angry motorists appeared at the police department to complain but were referred to the Selectmen's Office that handles appeals of parking violations.

Quigley explained that enforcement cannot be selective and therefore, police will be ticketing around the perimeter of the common along Highland Avenue, William B. Long Road, Robert E. Jason Road and along the areas of N. Main Street where parking is prohibited.

The fine for a parking ticket is $25; the fine doubles to $50 for parking in front of a fire hydrant and doubles again to $100 for parking in a handicapped space.

In a related matter, selectmen also made note of a letter of concern from Valerie J. Semensi, 756 Jerusalem Road, about vehicles parking on the sidewalk by 735 Jerusalem Road creating an unsafe situation for pedestrians and others. She wrote she had sent a letter to Quigley last summer who had been responsive in the past regarding a parking issue at 808 Jerusalem Road but failed to respond to this complaint.

She asked the selectmen to have the police enforce the by-law that prohibits parking on the sidewalk.

In a letter this week to Semensi, Quigley explained that he met with the Traffic Safety Officer Jeffrey Treanor when they received her July 30 letter, toured the area on Aug. 2 and did not see any safety issues on that date.

For the next four days, the letter was read at all police roll calls and records show that three parking tickets were issued to vehicles obstructing the sidewalk this summer.

Quigley said he sent out a reminder this week to all police about parking problems in the area and the sergeants will be reinforcing his memo at all roll calls.

In his letter to Semensi, he included a reminder that the Cohasset Police Department responds to more than 11,000 calls for service annually.

"Please realize that we may not be able to respond to parking-related calls immediately, but will continue to work with you to make this area safer for pedestrians," he stated.

Ticket totals:

- In 2012 police wrote a total of $28,575 in parking tickets.
- In 2013 so far, police have written $31,350 in parking tickets.

"I have been very concerned about the road by First Parish."
Selectman Martha Gjesteby

AROUND TOWN

Art Center presents Zimbabwean sculptures

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Enjoy!

Hi there Cohasset, how is everyone on this last week of September? We have again, had some beautiful weather, I hope you have been able to get out and enjoy it. I have to say though, that I have been pretty cold at night and hope we have a WARM winter!!

Gallery talk

Don't miss this at our very own South Shore Art Center: Transforming African Modernism: 25 Years of Zimbabwe Stone Sculpture (1980-2005), an exhibition which covers the 25 years that followed independence, presents Zimbabwean sculptors in a new light, juxtaposing works by the "masters" of the 1960s generation with those of younger artists.

A gallery talk by curator Russell Schneider will be held at the Art Center on Sunday, Sept. 29 at 4 p.m. The exhibition will continue through November 3rd and is sponsored, in part, by Panopticon Imaging in Rockland .The talk is open to the public with a $5 suggested donation. This is truly an event you won't want to miss.

St. Michael's

Here is some great news! Hats off to Ian Michael Lyster, son of Natalie and Stephen Brandt of Cohasset, on his graduation from Saint Michael's College of Burlington, Vermont with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Environmental Studies in August of this year. Ceremonies were held on campus on August 16th.

Van drivers

Cohasset Elder Affair is seeking enthusiastic volunteers to provide transportation on the CEA van to non-driving seniors, for trips to the Senior Center, grocery shopping, "Around Town," and to occasional entertainment. Volunteers are scheduled for 1-2 trips per month with a total time commitment of approximately 1-1/2 hours per trip. They will work with your schedule. Qualified individuals must hold a current Massachusetts driver's license. If you are interested in helping in this worthwhile endeavor, please call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112.

Brig St. John

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Div. 9, Plymouth, will host its annual commemoration of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Sunday, Oct. 6, at St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St. The event will commence at 1 p.m. with Mass in the Church Center, followed by a reception and a short speaking program in the Parish Hall featuring Dr. Bill O'Connell, Irish historian, AOH Plymouth, Div. 9, which will then be followed by a wreath-laying ceremony at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

This year represents the 164th anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor. The ship was bound for Boston from Ireland in September 1849 and encountered a tremendous storm, which blew her off course to the deadly Grampus Ledge. Nearly 100 Irish men, women and children were lost.

This commemoration remembers not only the victims of this tragedy, but also the tremendous bravery and compassion of the citizens of Cohasset who tried to rescue as many as possible and who helped those who were rescued. All are welcome to join us as we remember the victims and the heroes of this tragic event.

For more information, call John Sullivan at 781-545-1144 or John Todd at 781-585-9251.

Mary Fords

Here is a cute story: Editor Mary Ford had a call from a member of the Hingham High School Class of 1973 to see if she was the same Mary Ford who graduated with their class, which is having their 40th reunion on Oct. 5.

The Cohasset Mariner and Hingham Journal editor is not the Hingham Mary Ford – but a Scituate High graduate with the maiden name of Taylor.

In her husband's family, editor Ford is the fourth Mary Ford, following his sister Mary Ford and two of his sisters-in-law also named Mary Ford.

At one time the town of Scituate had seven Mary Fords!

In short, the world is full of Mary Fords – thank goodness!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Students in high spirits

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

There really isn't anything quite like spirit week. From 80s gym rats flashing bright, neon garments to lumberjacks proudly toting artificial beards, anything and everything you could think of has roamed the halls of CHS the past week.

Every morning of spirit week, the members of the Senior Class arrived bright and early, dancing and frolicking in festive garb despite the chill of fall's early mornings. Perched at the top of the stairs leading from the student parking lot, we seniors exhibited our school pride to the fullest, relishing in those who joined us, and silently disapproving of those who chose not to.

Typically, seniors have their own set of spirit days independent of the rest of CHS. However, in an attempt to harbor school unity, the entire school shared American Day on the first day of the school week. There is certainly no better way to cure those Monday blues than to splash in some red and white, and show some patriotism at the same time.

Tuesday saw seniors rip a page out of the Animal House playbook, as the school's elder statesmen clothed themselves in togas for the much-awaited Toga Day. In stark contrast were the underclassmen, bearing overalls, cowboy hats, and not-so-authentic facial hair on Lumberjacks vs. Farmers Day.

"Hump Day" (sadly, no talking GEICO camels arrived at CHS) was lit up by the Senior "80s Workout Theme". Nearly every senior (yes, even the males) donned neon tights or leggings, and an early morning aerobic routine seemed to usher in a day of good vibes. Gangsters and preppies duked it out in the rest of the school, as the underclassmen, inspired by S.E Hinton's The Outsiders, formed a Greasers vs. Socs Day.

Capes, shields and tights were the call for seniors on their Thursday Superhero Day. The youngings honored the true heroes, police and firemen, with their own Public Service Day.

As for Friday, the plans became a bit more bodacious. Between the final day of spirit week, the in-school Pep Rally, the Homecoming Football game vs. Hull, and the subsequent Homecoming Dance, there is just too much talk about in one column. Expect more on Friday's events in my next column.

Other than spirit week, which seemed to encapsulate the focus of every student, life goes on at CHS. College representatives continue to visit and speak to interested students. Back-to-School night on Tuesday gave parents a chance to meet with their children's teachers and get a feel for CHS.

Beyond that, I encourage all of you to attend the Homecoming Football game against archrival Hull. The action kicks off at 6pm on Alumni Field, so be there if you can. See you next week, and keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High; his column runs weekly during the school year.

GIMME SHELTER

Letting you know what she wants is an art that Jonna, pictured here, has developed.

Jonna loves to communicate

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Letting you know what she wants is an art that she has developed. Various meows and tones will give you a clue as to what it is. Feed me, let's play, I need attention...she has a range for each.

With personality plus, our precious Jonna, a Tortie with fabulous hues and tones in her fur, is ready for adoption. Her wonderful foster family is already anticipating missing her as she has charmed them with her beauty, love, antics and spirit. She is one very special young girl. Where to begin? Well, from the beginning when we first met.

Jonna came to us in July after being rescued following an injury that caused a fracture in her pelvis. Did she become angry? No. Was she frightened? A little. Did she become the sweetest, most lovable cat during her recuperative process? Absolutely! Falling in love with Jonna comes easily. At about a-year-and-a-half old, she is a true survivor and is now enjoying life to the fullest.

Endlessly curious, Jonna loves to explore and it doesn't stop there. She is a bit of an athlete with small nerf balls which she will retrieve for you when you spend time playing with her and praising her skill. As a matter of fact, she will let you know that she needs your attention for this activity. As Jonna has been resting for a while, this is a wonderful time for her, getting back into kitty antics and having fun. She will still want her quiet time relaxing in a sunny window, but she is certainly a girl with many fabulous qualities. Affectionate, quirky, loving, and loyal, she deserves the very best and would love to be the queen in her forever home. As an only, she will thrive.

Letting you know what she wants is an art that she has developed. Various meows and tones will give you a clue as to what it is. Feed me, let's play, I need attention...she has a range for each. So... conversation is a must. Plenty of affection and love are required and you will want to give her all of it. Jonna loves to have a gentle belly rub and chin scratching, and if you doze off, she will be there waiting for more when you awake. One look at her gorgeous yellow eyes and you will start all over again. Of course you will need to become close with her for all of this, but honestly, she is so docile, friendly and loving, she could easily fill your world in a short time.

If you work at home, expect a printer buddy as Jonna enjoys watching the fresh pages coming through. Just about anything you do, she will no doubt be watching and want to be a part of. She will certainly be a fantastic companion and if your heart is as big as hers, then maybe this is your perfect pet. Jonna...petite, pretty, appreciative and absolutely awesome just the way she is. Gentle, caring, special owner, you will be giving both Jonna and yourself a wonderful gift.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information and to make an appointment to see Jonna. Please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

A huge thank you to all who stopped by the Hull Seaside Animal Rescue booth at Endless Summer last Saturday. It was a fabulous day for everyone. Our big seller, the 2014 Kittendales calendars, was a hit with many returning customers. If you are looking for a fun and great gift for the holidays, you can order online at www.kittendales.com or drop by the shelter during Open Hours to pick them up directly. Calendars are also available at Toast on Nantasket Ave.

We met many of our bottle and can donators and to you we extend our appreciation for helping us so much. The money raised from this endeavor is helping us to keep things running at the shelter, and so many kittens and cats are receiving wonderful care thanks to you.

Fall is officially here, and still there are calls to take in abandoned kittens and their moms. Kitten supplies are still needed and we are grateful to all who have taken the time to help us in this continuous mission to save them and find loving homes. Canned and dry kitten food, KMR and soft bedding are always appreciated.

As always, our supporters make all the difference and help to save the lives of beautiful animals who are trying to survive in some unhealthy and frightening conditions before arriving at our door. Your generosity and kindness is remarkable. Please come by the shelter during Open Hours to see the kittens and cats who are as thankful as we are.

The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy, dancing and even some audience participation.

Doug Trudeau will be back for a third year directing "Curtain's Up!" Doug is the founder and director of the Scituate based "Showstoppers" and "Forever Plaid." His shows have wowed audiences from New England to Florida.

Curtain's Up will be an up tempo musical revue that will provide a nice variety of numbers from Broadway, popular tunes, and the movies. The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy, dancing and even some audience participation. You will see performers from Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Whitman, Waltham, Dighton and as far away as Holliston.

You can try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants from 7 to 8 p.m. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.

Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. You can purchase tickets at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-413-7540 for further information.

COHASSET CULTURAL COUNCIL

Grant applications are being accepted

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Mike Reilly, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset; including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,250 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Arts Center Arts Festival, St. Stephens Carillon recitals, Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Cohasset Dramatic Club, Rusty Skippers Community Band, and individuals such as Richard Clarke for his "And Now Mark Twain," project.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Susan Keene at 781-923-0024 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.aspx. The page for Cohasset is www.mass-culture.org/cohasset. Application forms will also be available at Town Hall.

ON THE RUNWAY

Cohasset fashion showcases wearable art

Cohasset-based fashion line Alistair Archer recently debuted its Spring/Summer 2014 women's collection at StyleWeek Northeast in Providence, RI. The unique dresses and scarves are based on Cohasset artist Robert Merton's abstract paintings.

The collection was well received at StyleWeek, which was held August 26-30.The Providence Journal said that the designs were "reminiscent of Impressionists such as Monet, others channeling Abstract Expressionists such as Jackson Pollock." New England fashion blog "Style It Up" reported, "the show had everyone in the front row oohing and ahhing" and "left everyone begging for more." The article described the pieces as "wearable art," concluding that Alistair Archer "has the potential to be found on racks in Neiman Marcus and Saks 5th Avenue."

Alistair Archer scarves were also recently featured on Fox 12's "Rhode Show." The line's dresses received press in Rhode Island Monthly and South Shore Living.

OUTREACH

Harbor Committee, Open Space Committee and more – in a major effort put the word out that funds are available for qualifying projects.

They are also going to do more outreach through the Cohasset Mariner and social media, such as Facebook and Twitter, to advertise grant opportunities. They hope to set firm deadlines for grant applications to allow plenty of time for review and public comment.

When all is said and done, the committee agreed the final act belongs to Town Meeting where voters either approve or deny community preservation grants for local projects.

Although the CPC did not want to rule out the possibility should an emergency arise of submitting an article for a Special Town Meeting in the future — the CPC also agreed that going forward, it would to do its level best to propose projects solely for annual Town Meeting.

"Where are you going to get that return on your money?"

Russell Bonetti, Community Preservation Committee

The CPC feels that having preservation articles before the annual Town Meeting would allow them to set an annual calendar with specific deadlines for proposals.

The CPC will meet at 7:15 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 7) to go over how their outreach is progressing. At that time, they will likely schedule their annual public hearing for sometime in November. At the public hearing, which is required by statute, they hope to gather more community input. They are looking at a possible mid-January deadline for fiscal 2015 grant applications.

CPC plans also include compiling a chart that shows what projects have been funded over the years as well as what the town has taken into and spent from the preservation fund. The chart would also help the CPC determine whether to keep the 1.5 percent surcharge or recommend the town go to 1 percent (that would result in savings of about $40 a year on a house vaiued at $858,000).

Selectman Diane Kennedy, who also serves on the CPC, said at first glance the savings to the taxpayer sounds pretty good.

"I will take my $40 thank you very much," said Kennedy, who noted she now has a child in college. "But it (the surcharge reduction) makes a huge difference on the collection and the ability to fund projects."

CPC member Alexander Koines, who is also a member of the Conservation Commission, said any reduction in the surcharge should be looked at scientifically and analytically, not emotionally.

Koines said getting the word out is the key.

"If you want to keep your 1-1/2 percent (surcharge) you have to market yourself and show positive results," he said. "There is nothing like a little advertising to convince people, so when they go to Town Meeting or the ballot they will retain it."

In other business, the CPC elected its officers and voted Russell Bonetti as chairman, Susan Hoadley as vice chairman, and Todd Goff as secretary.

CPA revenue

- In fiscal 2013, Cohasset collected $405,000 through its local surcharge.
- The town received $105,300 (or about 26 percent) match through the state's CPA Trust Fund distribution in 2013. If Cohasset reduced its surcharge to 1 percent (it is now 1. 5 percent) the amount the town collected would be $270,000 and the amount of state money would be $70,200.
- Through 2012, Cohasset received a total of $3,389,053 through the local surcharge and $2,245,678 from the State's CPA Trust Fund distribution for a total of $5,634,731.

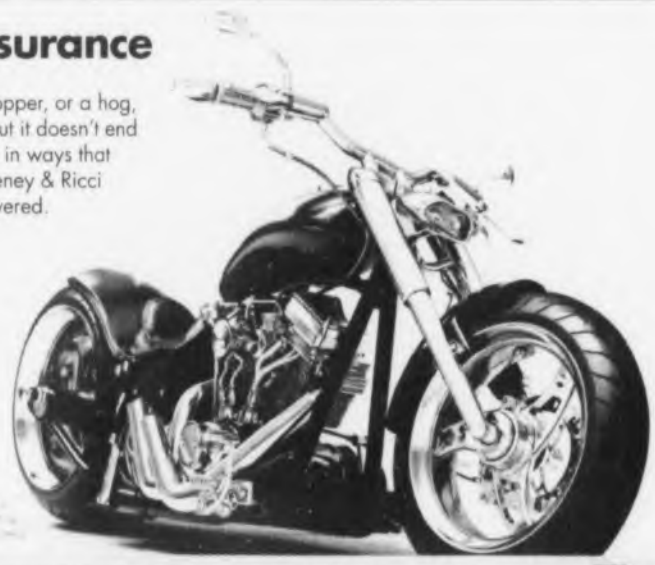
CPA funds

- The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 12 years ago and from that point on, some 155 cities and towns, including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.
- CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent with the first $100,000 of assessed valuation exempt) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
- Under the Community Preservation Act, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must go toward preserving open space, another 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent for any of the above and recreation. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be banked for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund.
- The Community Preservation Committee reviews proposals and recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation, and recreation. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

Computing the surcharge

- The average single family home in Cohasset is valued at $858,000 for fiscal 2013
- The 1.5 percent CPA surcharge for that house is $139 for the year for fiscal 2013
- At 1 percent, the CPA surcharge would be $92 for the year, a saving of $47 for the year
- The surcharge amount changes annually. The formula is Assessment less $100,000 X tax rate X CPA percentage.

Recent CPC projects:



Money from the Community Preservation Fund for the following projects was approved at the 2013 annual Town Meeting:

- $120,000 for Deer Hill School Playground
- $30,000 to restore roof, cupola, and weather vane at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.
- $20,000 for the preservation, rehabilitation and restoration of documents, artifacts, books, and collections at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.
- $15,050 to preserve, restore, and rehabilitate the engineers shed on Government Island. $15,050.
- $75,000 to preserve, restore, and rehabilitate vital records and documents at Town Clerk's office.

All the projects were presented as one vote, which was unanimous.

Sponsors return for Sunday AuthorTalks

Following each talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for book signing and further conversation with the writer.

Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Sunday AuthorTalks kicks off on Sunday, Oct. 20, and will continue on the first or second Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. through April 2014. Seven distinguished authors, all internationally recognized in their fields, will speak about a wide array of the topics and tales in their most recent works.

Following each talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for book signing and further conversation with the writer. Pulitzer Prize winning writer Philip Caputo will begin the series in October and New York Times best selling novelist Barbara Shapiro will close the talks in April. Between these two weighty bookmarks, visits from writers in a range of genres —fiction, journalism, history, and science — will offer some engaging fare.

The trustees of the library are once again grateful to Tom and Nancy Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton Realtors, who, along with Bob Durant, managing partner of the Cook Estate, are sponsors of Sunday Authortalks for the second year. The Hamilton's are long time supporters of the Cohasset Library and care very much about making a difference in the arts throughout the Boston area. They contribute generously to the Huntington Theatre Company where Tom also serves on the board of trustees. In addition, he is on the board of the South Shore Art Center and with the Cook Estate has co-sponsored the art festival for the past several years. In speaking about the library, Tom said, "Civic pride got it built, which tells you a lot about what people care about in Cohasset. Architecturally, it's a gem. Both the South Shore Art Center and the library are keystones to the town of Cohasset."

Bruce Sinclair, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, is another generous donor to Sunday AuthorTalks. Sinclair contributed all the wines for last two years of post-talk receptions and once again has agreed to donate wines for each event this year. Library trustees gratefully acknowledge Sinclair's thoughtful contributions, without which the receptions could not take place. Linda Fechter, publicity coordinator, said, "Without question, Bruce's unwavering support of the library is something for which we are all extremely grateful. He is an integral part of this program's success."

Admission is free to all events but seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. Many of these authors will draw large audiences, so to ensure a seat, come early. Tickets will not be required this year. If you would like to be on the library's email list to receive a reminder and information about each talk, phone the library at 383-1348.

To learn more about the authors and find links to book reviews, author bios, and other works, visit cohassetlibrary.org.

West meets East at Balance Studio

Daniel Stewart approaches his classes with playfulness, awareness and physicality. His classes brim with love, poetry, music and laughter.

Balance studio will welcome Daniel Stewart from Rising Lotus Yoga Los Angeles, Calif., for a weekend of Kirtan, master classes and yogic discussion. Stewart comes to Cohasset to enlighten, practice and laugh as attendees celebrate each other, yoga and the meaning of life.

Stewart has a unique vibe about him; his students are often consumed with emotion, a deeper understanding of their yoga practice and themselves. He approaches his classes with playfulness, awareness and physicality. His classes brim with love, poetry, music and laughter. His appreciation for the human spirit and invigorating a sense of oneself is authentic and passionate.

In his first ever visit to an east coast studio he's bringing with him three opportunities to experience each of his talents. Friday night Balance Studio will host a Kirtan. Stewart's blend of rocking western soul and jazz style mixes with traditional Sanskrit mantras for an evening of singing and chanting for all ages and levels to enjoy. Saturday's offerings will be twofold: Stewart will teaching a vinyasa flow class titled "Bahkti Warrior Flow: Awakening the Spiritual Heart." The class promises to be a strong flow while "awakening your spiritual heart." He said, "This class may result in spontaneous outburst of ecstatic, unconditional love." To complement the vinyasa class, immediately following there will be a discussion -based class titled "The Bhakti of Transformation," exploring the yoga sutras, Jungian psychology and one's journey into authentic well being. Stewart hopes to explore life's most pressing questions: Who are we? Why do we suffer? What keeps us from our dreams? He offers a way of becoming aware of our authentic selves. This class will include meditation, and discussion; journals are encouraged to record houghts and images. Yoga teachers and serious yoga students are encouraged to attend for a deeper understanding of their practice.

The Kirtan will take place from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Friday, Oct. 4, at the studio; the Master Class, 1 to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 5; and the philosophy session from 3:30 to 6 p.m., at the studio as well.

All classes will take place at Balance Studio, 15 Depot Court, Cohasset. Kirtan tickets are $25; Bhakti Warrior flow is $45; and The Bhakti of Transformation is $50.

CERT class completes training

Glenn Pratt briefs the CERT class.

The 2013 CERT class has completed its eight-week training course led by Rich and Mary Hynes with guest instructors including experts from Braintree CERT, MEMA, Homeland Security and the Cohasset Public Health Nurse.

To conclude the coursework, on Saturday, Sept. 14, the CERT class underwent a disaster drill at the local Emergency Operations Center at Deer Hill School. This exercise included assistance from town residents including members of last year's CERT class and young people from the Middle-High School acting as victims.

Exercises are opportunities for the CERT team to practice, assess and improve emergency response plans and on-the-ground operations. Practice drills are helpful in engaging their members and refreshing the concepts and skills learned in CERT training.

Staged in a realistic field environment this drill gave the team an opportunity to practice and validate their plans, policies and a wide variety of the skills covered in CERT training.

CERT training involves instruction in how to: Identify and reduce hazards at home and work; prepare one's home, vehicles and workplace with emergency supplies; understand fire behavior and put out small fires; conduct light search and rescue operations; apply basic medical and psychological techniques; assess minor to life-threatening injuries; lift heavy objects off trapped people; and organize in teams using the Incident Command model.

CERT training is designed to prepare people to help themselves, their family and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, people can make a difference by using CERT training to save lives and protect property.

Those interested in joining the next CERT class – anticipated in summer 2014 – call Rich Hynes, Cohasset CERT manager, at 508-395-3308 or email rich.hynes@hotmail.com.

Jane Higgins Norton (second from left) who served as Drill Operations Section Chief and CERT team members.

CERT training includes instruction in fire safety and use of fire extinguishers.

OUR VIEW

Civil discourse

Last week when the Selectmen's meeting room was packed largely by supporters of the appointment of Acting Chief William Quigley as permanent chief – Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed read the agenda out loud including the fine print on the bottom of the printed agenda stressing the need to maintain decorum at all times.

In part, the fine print states:

"Discussion during Board meetings should always be courteous and respectful, and should be confined to the subject under consideration. Sarcasm is generally not respectful... The Board approved the Code of Core Values of Civil Discourse policy that will be followed during meetings."

Koed's reading of the note about the Civil Discourse policy was a good reminder to the standing-room only crowd last week and likely helped, in our view, to keep the discussion respectful.

Now let's fast forward to this week. The Selectmen's meeting had a packed agenda, full of controversial items, but did not have a large audience. Koed again read the agenda out loud but he did not read the note on Civil Discourse printed at the bottom. We are not sure if it would have helped – but we wish Koed had read the policy again to his own board.

At one point during the lengthy, contentious discussion on an appointment to the Conservation Commission, Selectman Karen Quigley called Jack Creighton, who is the chairman of the ConCom, a "big fat liar." She later glared at him, sarcastically saying twice she could also play the "staring game."

In our view, Quigley's outburst was a new low for a member of the Board of Selectmen and unprecedented in our experience. No matter how provoked – a selectman should always take the high road and never resort to name calling and teasing.

The discussion that resulted in the name-calling was well into the third hour of the four-hour-long meeting. We can only hope that most cable viewers by that point had turned off the TV and called it a night.

Those that hung in there were likely shocked at Quigley's outburst. We think that type of behavior dishonors the office she holds. She owes Creighton, and the town, an apology.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Principle need not exclude pragmatism

Selectman Koed presumes to lecture Cohasset's intelligent and responsible citizens on the principles of civic responsibility, and cites his own probity as a counter to supposed shenanigans.

There is no compelling reason not to engage our deservedly well-respected Acting Police Chief as Chief without consideration of other possible applicants we cannot know as well as we do him.

Nor is there any compelling reason to exclude our Acting Town Manager from consideration as Town Manager. He also is a known quantity with well-demonstrated abilities and encyclopaedic knowledge of Cohasset's management needs.

Selectmen Koed, Gjesteby and Quigley (no relation to Acting Police Chief Quigley) seem to be in love with what they claim as "principle" but haven't understood that "principle" doesn't exclude citizen input to our elected representatives (or exclude reconsideration of an issue).

They aren't elected to be unreachable high priests, but they are elected to be our responsive (as well as responsible) representatives during their terms in office.

R.Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

'Look beyond the obvious'

I read with interest the letter written by Diane Kennedy, which states among other things, the fact that we should value the town's employees and the jobs they do. Being a 25-year employee, I found it ironic that Selectman Kennedy, who at every recent meeting has preached about the importance of leaving personnel issues in the hands of the Town Manager, is OK with interjecting with one group (Police) of employees and not all employees. This creates even more of a "favoritism" atmosphere that already exists at Town Hall.

For the past few years, hirings have been made that have a direct impact on the attitude we carry when we go to our jobs. We would like nothing more than to do our jobs without having the cloud of intimidation hanging over us. I have said it before and I will say it again. "Bullies will continue to fail in Cohasset."

There are plenty of good qualified people who will apply for the Police Chief and Town Manager positions. Keep in mind what has worked in Cohasset and what has failed. Look beyond the obvious. Look for the red flags and stay clear of those applicants. I'm sure my coworkers would support me if I applied to be a DPW Superintendent. Does that mean I should just get the job? Of course not.

Mary Snow, 317 North Main St.

Direct participation in government is our right

Well, thank heaven that we have Peter Whittemore ("Current petition drive off-target," Sept. 20, 2013) to remind the citizens of Cohasset that their role in local government is to vote for selectmen, then sit down and shut up. Decrying the notion of governance by "the tyranny of the majority," the author conveniently ignores the reality that, while our selectmen races are themselves not so far removed from popularity contests, the variety of issues facing local governments like ours requires that those elected to administer them actually listen to the populace. Of particular offense to the author (though he never directly states it) is the temerity of supporters of our acting police chief to express their opinion to their elected representatives, by petition, regarding his permanent appointment to the position.

Compared to residents of similar towns across our nation, we in Cohasset retain a large degree of direct participation in our own government; the notion of town meetings with majority rule on specific issues is unheard of (and would be considered quaint) in much of the country. Thus, it is especially galling that the author characterizes the unified public expression of support for our chief as "mob pressure" and "Internet bullying of the nouveau cyber-bourgeoisie." The right to petition the government was a fundamental premise of the Declaration of Independence, and stands today as a pillar of the First Amendment to our Constitution:

"Congress shall make no law ... abridging ... the right of the people ... to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

It is shameful to denigrate those who choose to exercise this fundamental right as less than "good person[s]" and to accuse them of seeking "to tear apart the very fabric of our town." To the contrary, the petition and yard signs stand as physical testament to the "civic duty and selfless sense of community service" of those who chose to make their voices heard on this issue.

Dale Malone, 79 Forest Ave.

COMMENTARY

Exercising First Amendment rights

PAUL CARLSON

Somehow, the author conflates this petition with a tyrannical move to deny rights to some unidentified afflicted minority or to reverse the results of an election.

In his letter to the Mariner published in the Sept. 20 edition, Peter Whittemore questioned our right to petition our government. Over 650 Cohasset voters signed a petition with the following wording:

"Acting Chief Bill Quigley is the most qualified individual to lead the Cohasset Police Department. Quigley's peers, including other Police Chiefs from neighboring communities along with an independent assessment report, confirm Bill Quigley is a man of honesty, integrity and professionalism.

"Don't let politics interfere with our public safety. Please sign this petition to show your support for Bill Quigley and his promotion as Chief of the Cohasset Police Department.

"The appointment will be made official soon – we need as many signatures as possible. Please share this with your friends and neighbors.

"Thank you!"

This statement does not sound very subversive to me. The signers did not demand that the selectmen take an action. We did not seek to undermine the board's duties and obligations. The petition is simply a statement of support for a good man who has served the town well for 18 years.

COMMENTARY

Police chief search should not be delayed any further

RUSSELL BONETTI

One step forward, two steps back. I'm not talking about dancing here. I am talking about the recent decision by the Board of Selectmen to wait until a permanent Town Manager is in place before appointing the Police Chief.

When you consider what Bill Quigley has accomplished since being appointed Acting Chief in the last 17 months, it's hard to imagine anyone not appointing Bill to the position. He has reduced overtime costs; he has raised funds in excess of $100,000 to upgrade the radio system resulting in better reliability and an increase in safety for our police officers.

Bill has worked with the schools resulting in improved relations between the police and the younger people in town. Jack Buckley spoke to this in his letter to The Mariner last week.

He has implemented many changes that affect the day-to-day operations of the department, which have a benefit to everyone in town. Some of these include officers attending in-service training at the regional academy, which although mandated, had not been done in the past three years. He has signed mutual aid agreements with the towns that surround us. These are just a few of the things Bill has done while being the "Acting" Chief.

Bill has held pretty much every position there is to hold in the department. This gives him insight into the everyday workings of the department that no one else either within or outside of the department has. He has the respect of the officers under him. He has the support of the Policemen's Union, which doesn't happen often. He is spoken highly of by his peers within the law enforcement community.

A search was started in March of this year. There were objections as to the wording of the ad. In the interest of fair disclosure, I objected to the wording at a BoS meeting. My feeling was that the ad should not contain any language that might discourage anyone from applying for the position. I felt then, and obviously still do, that Bill was the best choice for the job. The BoS allowed the search to languish until June when there was a vote to start the search yet again. This vote was rescinded three weeks later and the search was dead in the water again. We are now at the end of September and now the appointment is being held until we have a permanent Town Manager. If the Chief appointment is any benchmark, it could be a long, long, long time before we have a permanent TM. Heck, we could all be pushing up daisies by the time that happens.

The Town Manager Act allows the TM to appoint certain positions with the BoS given the option of approving or not approving the appointment. The BoS have input as to how a search is made of course, but they have an obligation to the entire town to give that input in a timely manner. The last two boards have failed fairly miserably in my opinion to meet that obligation. To now wait to start the search for a chief further adds to that failure.

I know that in the past Bill has made some people unhappy by either arresting or detaining someone. I might also point out that Bill has never had an arrest overturned. He actually gave my wife a warning ticket for being too close to a fire hydrant back in 1996. The hydrant was next to our driveway. He and I were laughing about that the other day. My wife is still trying to see the humor, but I remain hopeful. We need to put the past where it belongs, in the past.

I know that the Police Chief position is not a popularity contest, but you don't have to look back too far to see how having a Chief who didn't enjoy the support of the officers didn't work out too particularly well to say the least.

Some people interview well. This doesn't translate into doing the job well. The town has had a lesson in this in the not too distant past. I don't think I need to enumerate on some recent hires that kind of went south on us resulting in financial settlements, and potential litigation that could be quite costly.

Bill has "interviewed" for the Chief position over the many years on the force here in town. I do agree with Fred Koed that public jobs should be advertised to make sure we get the best candidate. I think we should have a search, but I think we are ill-served to wait until we appoint a permanent Town Manager. It is incumbent on that person to establish who is who once they get on board. I am more than confident that Bill will prove to be the best qualified person. We are not going to fire every department head just because we have a permanent TM new, or not. Years ago I was the music director for a radio station in Western Mass. The station was sold to one of the producers of 60 Minutes. I worked with him prior to the sale to help the transition be a smooth one, which it was. At the first meeting we had under his ownership, he came into the room and asked: "Can you all hear me?" We said: "Yes." He said: "You're all fired." I laughed as I've always been a bit twisted, and started to clean out my office. Joe came by and asked what was I doing, and I told him that I wasn't sure of what happened in NYC when you got canned, but here you usually pack up and go, and pointed out that he had just fired me. He said: "Oh, that!" He then told me that this was the second station he had purchased and had a hard time implementing his policies to people that were set in their ways. He also said that he was going to hire us all back, but just wanted to be sure we knew who was boss. Hopefully the permanent TM will find better ways of establishing himself with the existing employees, but it will be that person's job to establish themselves to the employees.

The Police Chief position is far too important to allow it be in Limbo for as long as it has been. To delay the appointment further is running a risk that could cause serious harm to the department and the town as well. I am asking the BoS to immediately start the search process to fill this vital position. Some members may say this isn't "about Bill Quigley" it's about the process. Here's the chance to prove it. I am more than confident that Bill will prove he's the best choice.

A reason to leave the ocean behind for a day

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Given the landscape and history of our cozy little hamlet-by-the-sea, Cohasset's identity and focus has been and will continue to primarily be the ocean. While the myriad of breathtaking views in and around the marshes, harbors and coastline cannot be overstated; I'd like to share a terrific reason to move away from the shore and embrace Cohasset's often overlooked other beauty, the woods of Wompatuck.

Let's face it, there are those in town who believe Cohasset doesn't truly begin until one turns off of Route 3A and drive toward downtown and there are those who never feel truly comfortable until they've actually crossed over Main Street. However, the rest of us know that the "other side" of Route 3A isn't actually a suburb of Norwell, rather its key part of our town with many of the homes lucky enough to be abutting the woods bordering Wompatuck State Park.

Opened in the early '70s, Wompatuck State Park is roughly 4,000 acres of paths and trails meandering through Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell. Walking, hiking, riding or rollerblading, a day in Wompatuck is truly a breath of fresh air (as is the natural fresh water spring located near the center of the park). Fall is my favorite season of the year and with the crisp air and colors, it's the perfect time to explore the park.

Did you know that Wompatuck State Park used to be a crucial naval ammunitions depot that directly supported the Hingham and Quincy shipyards during and after World War II? I figured most of you did. Did you also know that the depot used to be called by many the "Cohasset Annex" and that Navy ammunition trains would exit the depot via what is now the walking path across from the commuter rail stop and then connect with what's the now Greenbush rail line? OK, did you also know that the depot stored experimental nuclear powered depth charges (honestly) and that during the 1950s and early '60s there were active surface to air missile sites on Turkey Hill and at the top of Crocker Lane? Think about it, active surface to air missiles in Cohasset; now that's bound to capture a child's imagination.

Alright so some of you knew the history of the park and you probably know that a few of the weapons bunkers in the park are still intact, but did you know that one of my favorite Cohasset families will be hosting a charity walk on Oct. 6 in Wompatuck to benefit research to help find a cure of a rare kidney disease called Nephrotic Syndrome?

Most of us are unfamiliar with Nephrotic Syndrome. It's a rare kidney disease impacting 5 out of 100,000 children and trust me when I tell you that it's tremendously painful and difficult for both the patients and their families. One of those families impacted is the Broderick family.

The Brodericks are one of those families that makes being part of the Cohasset community so special. They're truly one of nicest families you'll ever want to know (I type this knowing full well that the words in all likelihood will go directly to their heads!) and for the past five years they have been organizing an annual stroll through Wompatuck to help raise funds and awareness to Nephrotic Syndrome.

I believe that there's nothing more precious than a healthy and happy child and I have no qualms confessing that when it comes to children being sick or hurt, I am a total wuss-bag and tend to crumble (just ask my wife). Last year our family had to spend a few nights in at Children's Hospital and I simply can't imagine having to spend weeks or months at a time there, but that's the heartbreaking day-to-day reality that families with children suffering from Nephrotic Syndrome live with.

Five years ago, with the simple goal of raising awareness and a little money for research, the Brodericks organized the first NephCure Walk through Wompatuck. Last year over 300 people, many of them from Cohasset, enthusiastically walked one of courses, participated in the festivities of the day and in the process helped raise funds to further crucial research. It was a great day and its support for happenings like this that makes Cohasset such a wonderful place to raise our families.

This year's walk on Oct. 6 should be even more festive and it begins at the visitor's center near the entrance of the park at noon. Registration and a myriad of feel good events kick off at 11 a.m. and cost to register is free (but donations are encouraged and T-shirts are being sold for $10 at the registration table). Free, now that's something every family can afford. All proceeds raised go directly to research in hopes of ending this tragic disease. And by the way, you don't need to know the Brodericks to come out as a family and enjoy the day, I promise you the path will be filled with families you either know or have subconsciously been longing to know.

So while it's too cool for most of us to put on a bathing suit it's the perfect time to throw on a sweater and explore the "other side" of Cohasset. The fifth annual NephCure walk is the perfect excuse to get a little exercise, enjoy the foliage and still have time to get back to watch most of the Patriots game.

As always, thanks for reading and I hope to see you and your family next weekend for an important autumn stroll through Wompatuck.

LIBRARY CORNER

Library launches Digital Cohasset

Paul Pratt Memorial Library staff and trustees announce the launch of Digital Cohasset, an initiative to digitize Cohasset information resources and provide easy and comprehensive access through the Internet archive.

The first collection to be digitized is the Town of Cohasset annual reports, http://www.cohassetlibrary.org/digital-cohasset.html. The digitization of the Cohasset Mariner microfilm archives and the Cohasset High School yearbook print collection is currently underway. Digitized resources will be fully searchable in online databases that can be accessed through the library's website. Future print and microfilm publications will be digitized annually. The scope of the collections includes:

- Cohasset Mariner newspaper: The library's microfilm archives from 1979 through December 2012;
- Cohasset annual town reports: 1849, 1859-2012; and
- Cohasset High School yearbooks: The Piper 1935-1937, 1939; The Imp-Print Annual 1945; Tessahoc 1951-2013 (most years).

Digital Cohasset is made possible through grants awarded by the Community Preservation Committee and the South Shore Playhouse Associates, http://www.themusiccircus.org/.

FOR CHILDREN

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information or to register, call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Like the previous four Octobers, your hometown community newspaper will once again be printed on pink newsprint during the first week.

Back in August, I started to lay the groundwork for our upcoming Paint it All Pink campaign by reaching out to those touched by breast cancer to consider sharing their stories.

Many have responded as we prepare to kick off our annual campaign and we thank you for stepping forward with your experiences.

Several have noted how important it is for them to be able to express themselves on this subject and to use this platform as part of their healing process. Some have participated in the past and are kind enough to update us on their situation.

These personal stories have been a big part of our breast cancer awareness coverage over the past several years. Breast cancer survivors, as well as their family and friends, have provided insightful glimpses into their pain, treatments, challenges, and in many cases, their successes.

Although this disease still ends in heartbreak for some families, great strides are being made in the areas of detection, treatment and research. And while there still is no cure, more and more people are beating breast cancer and living to talk about it.

This October, starting next week, GateHouse Media New England will embark on its fifth annual Paint It All Pink program to raise awareness and funding to help in the fight against a disease that continues to impact many lives.

Like the previous four Octobers, your hometown community newspaper will once again be printed on pink newsprint during the first week.

The pink paper is more than just a symbolic gesture or colorful gimmick designed to draw attention to Breast Cancer Awareness Month. We'll use those pages, and continuing throughout the month of October, to highlight the latest research, technology, and medicine, as well as important information that can save a life through early detection and information about support groups available. You'll also learn more about our partner is this campaign, the Susan G. Komen Massachusetts foundation.

Like the past four years, GateHouse Media New England will donate a portion of the advertising revenue generated through a special advertising program, as well as part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold the first week of October. Once again, that donation will be made to Komen MA. Over the course of the campaign GateHouse has donated more than $100,000 to the breast cancer cause.

Please consider sharing your story as our coverage continues throughout the month. We know for many breast cancer survivors and their families this is a private matter. We also know that your stories will inspire others facing similar struggles and will give cancer patients, other survivors, and their families strength, faith and determination in their time of need.

We remind ourselves each year that someone new is being diagnosed with breast cancer, someone new is finishing up their first round of treatment, and someone new is getting a clean bill of health and joining the ranks of survivor. As much as some of our coverage stays the same, the people it reaches and the people it matters to continues to change until a cure is found. So we'll continue to do our part, and count on you to help by sharing your story with others.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Taking some time to explore the woods

As one becomes too busy and the return to a hectic autumn itinerary is overwhelming, one cannot help but slow down and take time to notice the world and the environment.

JON BELBER

These sunny September days are a great time to make new vows for healthy living, exercise routines and even a chance to reflect on the errors of our ways. In other words, one can atone for mistakes and take time to reflect on how to do better.

A teacher can always think about how a lesson or interaction with a student could go better. And a farmer is constantly thinking what would grow better if there is a compromised crop or chewed leaves. As one becomes too busy and the return to a hectic autumn itinerary is overwhelming, one cannot help but slow down and take time to notice the world and the environment.

Recently, at the farm, several families have come seeking a copy of the map for the Richardson & Cornelia White woods and 130 acres of forest. It's only $2 and the map indicates 25 intriguing walking trails. There is also a companion, annotated guide ($4) that highlights some of the natural features of certain paths. Written and illustrated by founder of Holly Hill Farm, Frank White, little has changed for visitors familiar and new to these lovely woods. Many a school student takes a brief sojourn into the woods to discover that they are indeed lovely, dark and deep, full of habitats, humus and a variety of trees, shrubs and flower.

The paths are quite well kept, not only by daily walkers, bird seekers and visiting students, but also clipped and kept wide by family members and staff. And coming up on Sunday, Oct. 6th, one's effort to run, gain some healthy perspective and to just walk the trails, there is our 6th Annual Discover the Woods Day. The five-kilometer race at 9 a.m. and the one-mile fun run and walk at 10 a.m. is an annual treat to navigate a completely natural course, not an inch of asphalt to affect the knees.

This year, the race and run and walk registrations will all benefit the Frank White scholarship fund, a fund that allows families and individuals to participate in educational programs at Holly Hill Farm. Detailed information is available on the farm website.

So, whether you prefer to catch leaves on your walks and runs or reflect on the joys and sadness that seem to daily greet us or think about Frank's thorough efforts to encourage folks to hit the trails, the woods are ready. And with a nod to the literary, poetic mentors who also walked the woods: Whose woods these are, I think I know, ask not for whom they toll, they toll for thee.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Discover the Woods 5k race at Holly Hill

Online registration is now available for the sixth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail race and 1 mile fun run / walk on Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. The 5k race will begin at 9 a.m. and the 1-mile fun run will be at 10 a.m. (Not 10:30 as previously published.) The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 3 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook and a pond. Register by Sept. 20 and get a reusable organic cotton produce bag. Adults $25, children ages 12 and younger, $15. Signup online at www.hollyhillfarm.org. Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Proceeds from the races will benefit the Frank H. White Scholarship Fund that was created in memory of the founder of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm to stimulate awareness of the natural world, generate respect for the environment, teach the value of local, sustainable agricultural practices, and promote responsible environmental stewardship. Frank H. White (1932-2009) was an educator, environmentalist, activist, and fifth generation owner of the Holly Hill Farm who began an organic farm with his wife, Jean, in 1998. Frank created the Friends of Holly Hill Farm as a way to ensure that the farm became a community educational resource with school programs, summer camps and adult and family education workshops.

This past year, the Frank H. White Fund made school field trips and summer camp possible for many children who could otherwise not afford to experience all that the farm has to offer. In addition, the fund made the Summer Farm Pantry Program possible, a week long experience for teens to grow and harvest organic food that was delivered by the students to the chef at Father Bill's Place in Quincy.

Buckley's reaction to Koed principle statement

JACK BUCKLEY

With respect to the issue of the appointment of a police chief, does there exist a faction "adversed to the rights of other citizens?" Or, is there a political faction "adversed to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community?"

I spent a good part of the past weekend thinking a great deal about Mr. Koed's statement of principle that was read at the Board of Selectmen meeting of Sept. 17, and reprinted in last Friday's Mariner. I was troubled by several statements and concerned that supporters of the appointment of Bill Quigley for Chief of Police were being cast as members of a political faction bent on undermining true democratic government in Cohasset in order to advance a political agenda. This troubled me deeply, so I went to the source on political faction, Federalist Paper #10.

Chairman Koed's use of the term "faction" in the context of petitioners imploring the Board of Selectmen to accept the appointment of Bill Quigley as Chief of Police raises two important questions, among others. What's a faction, and what's the political agenda of the faction(s) in question? By "faction," writes Madison in Federalist #10, "I understand a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or a minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adversed to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community." Madison's use of the term faction was in the context of threats to liberty as defined by the objective of the faction – pursuit of an interest adversed to the rights of other citizens, or pursuit of an interest adversed to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community." Established understanding of Madison's faction focuses on "the relationship of its interest or passion to the rights of others or to the public good." The character, composition, or number of the group is irrelevant; it's the objective of the group that endangers the rights of others or the public good. (Kazin, editor; Princeton Encyclopedia of American History.)

With respect to the issue of the appointment of a police chief, does there exist a faction "adversed to the rights of other citizens?" Or, is there a political faction "adversed to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community?" As a petition-signer, vocal supporter of Bill Quigley for Chief of Police, and by association, a member of a group united by passion, I can only speak for myself, not some "faction." I can't see by any definition of the term, or by historical understanding of the term how my democratic actions to influence the selectmen's execution of public policy threatens the rights of others. Nor, can I see how my democratic actions to influence the Board of Selectmen as they carry out the duties threatens the interests of the community.

I have yet to hear anyone raise the question of a public law violation with respect to this appointment, so I can't see how Mr. Koed could claim that a faction is present. And I don't understand how supporting the appointment could be cast in the light of a political agenda adversed to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community. So, I don't see the presence of a faction at work. I find it, therefore, to be an inappropriate characterization of most of the people who simply think that Bill Quigley should be appointed Chief of Police. I think, as I believe others do, that the appointment advances the interests of the community.

But, I think I'm finally figuring out what's going on in town politics. Though I had previously stated that I just don't get it, I think I've got it now. There are indeed factions fighting in town – and it has nothing to do with Bill Quigley, or his supporters. It's all about an incessant political fight centered around the Acting Town Manager, the Town Manager Act, and the relationship of the Board of the Selectmen to the current ATM and the future relationship of the Board with the next TM. The problem with prolonging this battle is that the ability to govern on the merits of various issues as they arise is lost. The other problem with continuing this political battle is that there's significant collateral damage – that being the deepening cynicism of the general public and the exhausting realization that Washington has come to Cohasset. Chairman Koed can rest assured that politics and democracy are alive and well in Cohasset. I think I'll go back to being ignorant.

Volume 38 - Report No. 38 September 20, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call this week examines the voting records of local senators on Democratic Gov. Deval Patrick's 63 vetoes during the 2013 session. A two-thirds vote is required to override a gubernatorial veto in the 40-member Senate that included 36 Democrats and only four Republicans. The governor needed the support of 15 senators to sustain a veto when all 40 senators voted - and fewer votes if some members were absent. Patrick fell far short of that goal. Five votes were the most support he received on any veto. The Senate easily overrode all 63 vetoes, including 17 that were overridden unanimously.

The vetoes had little support among Patrick's fellow Democrats. Only four of the chamber's 36 Democrats voted with Patrick to sustain any vetoes including Sen. Sonia Chang Diaz (D-Boston), the senator who gave him the most support, siding with him 35 times. The only other Democrats who supported the governor were Sens. Mark Montigny (D-New Bedford), three times; Marc Pacheco (D-Taunton), twice; and Barry Finegold (D-Andover), once.

On the GOP side, the senator who supported Patrick the most was Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), who supported him 22 times. Also weighing in were Sens. Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester), six times; George Ross (R- Wrentham), twice; and former Sen. Mike Knapik (R-Westfield), once.

HOW OFTEN LOCAL SENATORS SUPPORTED GOV. PATRICK'S VETOES

The percentage next to the senator's name represents the percentage of times the senator supported Patrick's vetoes.

The number in parentheses represents the number of times the senator supported Patrick's vetoes.

Some senators voted on all 63 roll call votes. Others missed one or more of the votes. Their records are based on the number of roll calls on which they voted and do not count the roll calls for which they were absent.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

TREAT 17-YEAR-OLDS AS JUVENILES (H 1432) - Gov. Patrick signed into law legislation that would move 17-year-olds from the adult justice system to the juvenile one. Supporters say this will end the misguided notion of putting 17-year-olds in adult prisons. They noted that juvenile facilities focus more on education and rehabilitation rather than punishment. They also argued that 17-year-olds in adult prisons are eight times more likely than an adult to be the victim of rape or to commit suicide than a teenager in a juvenile lockup.

DOG BITES (H 918) - The Financial Services Committee heard testimony on legislation that would prohibit insurance companies from denying, canceling or raising the premium on a property owner's liability insurance because a specific breed of dog lives on the property.

Supporters said this discrimination should stop and is a slippery slope toward allowing insurance companies to target other things they don't want to insure. They argued current law has led to many "uninsurable" breeds of dogs being brought to shelters and euthanized.

Opponents said insurance companies should have this right and noted that in 2012 dog bites accounted for $489 million -- more than one third of all homeowner's insurance liability claim dollars. They noted that policies that do not exclude breeds are available in Massachusetts.

EXPAND BOTTLE DEPOSIT LAW (H 2943) - The Committee on Telecommunication, Utilities and Energy heard testimony from both sides of legislation that would expand the state's existing bottle law, which requires a deposit on beer and soda containers. The measure would require deposits on bottles of water, tea, juice and sports drinks too.

Supporters said consumption of these beverages has grown dramatically since the original law was passed in 1980. They argued expansion would increase recycling and pointed to figures that show recycling rates for bottles that require a deposit to be some 80 percent while those without a deposit have a 20 percent return rate. They noted expanding the deposit would help the environment and raise some state revenue because any unclaimed deposits currently go to the state.

Opponents, led by supermarkets, convenience stores and beverage companies, said the increased burden and costs for retailers would be some $100 million and would be passed along to consumers. They pushed for an alternative bill (H 2513) that would essentially eliminate the current deposit program and replace it with a flat 1-cent fee on beverage containers. The revenues would be earmarked to support recycling programs.

In the meantime, sponsors of a ballot question expanding the bottle law are not sitting around waiting for legislative approval of the bill. They are busy gathering 68,911 voter signatures as the first step to get the question on the 2014 ballot. If the signatures are obtained, the proposal would then be sent to the Legislature and if not approved by May 6, 2014, proponents must gather another 11,485 signatures by July 2, 2014, in order for the question to appear on the 2014 ballot.

MISLEADING POLITICAL WEBSITES (H 563) - The Election Laws Committee held a hearing on a bill prohibiting political candidates or their supporters from registering websites that could be identified as the website of another person who is an elected official, a candidate or a potential candidate for elective office. Violators would be hit with a fine of up to $1,000 or six months in prison. The measure is aimed at political operatives who register websites in the name of their client's opponent and then say outrageous things on the website that the voters think is being said by the opponent. The same bill was approved by the House in 2010 but died at the end of the session.

DOCTORS AND DRUGS - The Public Health Committee will hold a hearing on October 1 at 10 a.m. in room A-1 at the Statehouse. Bills on the agenda include prohibiting drug companies from advertising in Massachusetts (H 2061), creating the new Massachusetts Prescription Drug Program to purchase prescription drugs at the lowest prices possible for individuals and entities (H 2082); and regulating the in-office sale of medical devices and products by doctors (S 1032). Provisions include requiring doctors to disclose to patients any profit gained from the sale, advise the patient as to the availability and price of the medical device or product at a retail pharmacy and provide easily understandable literature explaining the benefits and risks.

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION? Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time that the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say that legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say that the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

COMMENTARY

Let's try doing our job

STEVE GAUMER

Last week, your Board of Selectmen was upbraided by two local newspaper editorials for our sorry display during the September 17th meeting. The Patriot Ledger asked: "What are you up to, Cohasset?" while The Mariner editorialized that: "...the board is deeply divided and suffers from at the very least, a vast philosophical divide on their role and how best to serve the town."

I agree. This board is split by what appears to be a thoroughly opposite understanding of our role. The Town Manager act defines the role of the selectmen in town government. The act quite literally liberates the Board to elevate itself to a role of stewardship, to see the town, and its path, from a higher elevation. It specifically removes the board from a management role, assigning that to the Town Manager.

We are, according to the act, goal setters and policy makers for the town as a whole. We are supposed to reason more inductively, and govern from the general principle. If we carry out our duties well, we remove ourselves from political gamesmanship, and govern. If we fail to elevate ourselves, we insert ourselves where we don't belong befuddling our staff, committees, boards and commissions.

Evidence mounts that the board is attempting to manage, a job for which it is not equipped, nor authorized.

Our acting Town Manager's employment agreement was negotiated by a previous board to give him the same authority and duties as a permanent Town Manager. This board has not debated nor adopted any policy to change that fact. Yet systematically, a majority of the board is attempting to truncate the Town Manager's initiatives, including the appointment of the Treasurer/Collector, Police Chief, qualified candidates for boards and commissions.

Each time the board inserts itself in the Town Manager duties, it slows progress that has been made in stabilizing management and improving service delivery, which means that our citizens get less from their government.

More frightening than the board inserting itself in management roles, we seem intent on publicly attacking the Town Manager. At the September 17 meeting, the chairman went so far as to accuse the Town Manager of conspiring with an organic citizen protest, a completely unfounded charge for which the chairman offered no support, and no apology. At the very least, such activity creates a hostile work atmosphere for current employees, and cannot help attract superior, future candidates.

The damage is done, however. Oh, Mike Milanoski will be just fine, as his resume will list several pages of accomplishment, which cannot be likewise claimed by his several predecessors. Such a track record will be justifiably desired by many other organizations.

The damage has been rendered to this town: Our list of candidates for Town Manager should include Milanoski, though it likely won't. He has accomplished more for this town in 18 months than his predecessors accomplished in their combined tenure. Rather than try to retain such competence, your board is hard at work attempting to chase him off.

Why? That is a good question, and it is best to ask each board member, though it cannot be a shortage of Milanoski's competence, or effectiveness.

And who will be the NEXT town manager? With the constant and sorry headlines made by this board, we will be hard pressed to attract, much less recruit the caliber of professional we need to continue the success, disciplines and progress Milanoski has initiated.

My most feared outcome is a slate of mediocre candidates, because that is all that we could attract. If this outcome prevails, I fear that this board lacks the courage (or insight) to take a pass on a mediocre candidate.

Heaven knows this board can't seem to identify or promote candidates who have proven their competence or effectiveness. The Board's rejection of Acting Chief Quigley's appointment is a prime example. Last Tuesday night, the board took the most obviously wise decision we might ever be able to make.....and we punted.

We were elected to govern, to employ our judgment for the benefit of our fellow citizens. Your board has done a pretty lousy job at management; maybe it is time we elevate ourselves to our defined role, and try governing now.

Steve Gaumer is a member of the Board of Selectmen.

RIGHTS

Somehow, the author conflates this petition with a tyrannical move to deny rights to some unidentified afflicted minority or to reverse the results of an election. He may remember that there have been three attempts to add a recall provision to the town bylaws and all the attempts failed at town meeting – for good reason in my opinion. In Cohasset, once an official has been duly elected to office, that official can only be removed by election when the term has been completed. As is clear from the wording of the petition, we were not seeking to institute a recall. We were asking the selectmen to promote a highly qualified employee.

The author also seems to think that the seven former selectmen who signed the petition acted badly. He alleges that these former officials who between them have given many decades of selfless public service to Cohasset are reluctant to let go of their power. Actually, four of them stepped down voluntarily, not reluctantly. Many of them continue to serve the town in various capacities. I believe that former selectmen have shown their dedication to the welfare of this town and should not be barred from public debate. I did not check my First Amendment rights at the door when I stepped down from the board.

The author then tells the story of how John Adams went home to Quincy after he completed his presidential term. I suppose the point of this reference is that after office, politicians should go home and be quiet. Actually, in his later years Adams wrote prolifically about public issues through active correspondence and in various books. Another example of an active post-presidency is Adams's son, John Quincy Adams, who after losing his bid for re-election went on to serve in the House of Representatives for nine terms continuing his fight against slavery, against the war with Mexico and to end the infamous gag rule which prohibited discussion of anti-slavery petitions in the House.

The author concludes by speculating that this show of support for a highly qualified town employee seeks "to tear apart the very fabric of our town..." Cohasset is much more resilient than he believes. As we saw at the Sept. 17 selectmen's meeting, the petition representing the views of over 650 voters was presented in a very calm, professional manner. Some additional supporters also spoke in favor and one person spoke against the petition. Selectman Chair Fred Koed read a prepared statement. The selectmen then voted 3-2 to reject the appointment of Bill Quigley as is their right under the Cohasset Town Manager Act.

The author and I may disagree, but it certainly looked to me like people expressing their opinions in a fair and open manner. The right to petition our government was enshrined in the 1641 Massachusetts Body of Liberties, the Massachusetts Constitution and the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. If we cannot petition our government (and it is our government), we have all lost one of our important democratic rights, which many people have died defending.

Paul Carlson, a former selectman who chose not to stand for re-election this past spring, lives at 18 Old Coach Road.

COHASSET SEPAC NEWS

Engaging our students after school

On Tuesday October 1st, join the Cohasset SEPAC for their first Inclusive Town Activities, School Clubs & Sports Fair for Middle and High school students in the Middle/High School Library at 7 p.m. This is an opportunity for students and parents to familiarize themselves with over 20 school clubs and the Cohasset Recreation Department programs. Deer Hill parents can also learn what is coming for their children. Hear about the new programs that are being developed. SEPAC, the District and Recreation Department have many new initiatives and ideas for after-school. Speaking at the event will be Ron Ford, Cohasset Athletic Director and Ted Carroll, Cohasset Recreation Department Director. CMI, Rotary Youth Leadership Organization, other town organizations will be there, as well. This is an excellent way to get our kids off the couch or the computer and involved in the community!

The Cohasset SEPAC (Special Education Parents Advisory Council) is a parent organization that support families who have children on IEPs and 504s. They also are an advisory council to the school administration and the school committee. The SEPAC meets regularly with the schoola to advise on Special Education programs, initiatives and inclusive education.

They host a monthly speaker series for parents and educators on the first Tuesday of the month. There is a wide range of topics presented by local experts in their field. The topics to be presented this school year can be found in the PSO calendar or on the school website.

Also, they assist parents to better navigate the Student Services Department by hosting quarterly coffees, without school administration, to give parents and guardians an opportunity to give and gain knowledge from other parents and SEPAC board members.

For more information, please visit their website at www.cohassetSEPAC.org. All presentations are free and open to the public.

Skippers drive by Rockland

Turnovers fuel Cohasset victory

By Scott Roche
The Enterprise

Trailing 7-6 with three minutes left in the first half and driving for a score to regain the lead, things were looking good for the Rockland High football team Saturday afternoon.

Then with one play, everything changed.

Cohasset forced the first of three critical Bulldogs turnovers and needed one play to score when quarterback Chris Haggerty connected with Liam Burke for a 64-yard touchdown pass to put the Skippers on top for good in a 34-13 victory at Memorial Stadium.

With the lead, Cohasset was able to use superior depth and conditioning to take control

"The team played a good game on Saturday. It was a very physical game, as can be expected against Rockland, and I really believe we were able to wear them down in the second half," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "By the end of the third quarter, they had three guys out due to injury and on nearly every play three or four bulldogs were on the grass either cramping up or just very slowly getting up, because they were beat up and exhausted from going both ways, which we only do in rare instances."

Rockland would get the ball back before the end of the half, but was forced to punt with 41 seconds left, giving Cohasset (2-0) the ball at their own 46. A 13-yard run by Ryan Gillis moved the ball to the Bulldogs 41 with 20 seconds left.

After a time out, the Skippers went to their bag of tricks when Haggerty (8-for-13, 155 yards) handed the ball to Rocco Laugelle, who rolled to the right and connected with Burke (three re-

LETTER

Remembering "Coach P"

Former player remembers coach who passed last week

By Phil Mahoney

Football snobs like myself love to sing the praises of our beloved sport. We pound our chests and brag about its virtues as the ultimate extension of the classroom. Hard work, discipline, commitment, and sacrifice are taught like no textbook can. Development of character and dedication to the team are more important than letter grades and will determine the success, or failure, of the overall effort. In this gridiron setting, great teachers thrive and can shape their pupils in ways that last forever. If you were lucky enough to play for Phil Pisano, you know exactly what I mean.

"Coach P" dedicated his life to working with the students of Scituate and Cohasset High Schools. By the time he retired in 2001, he had spent 35 years as a teacher, assistant football coach, and head football coach at both schools, and also coached softball and girls basketball at Scituate. He was also a basketball official. On the outside, Coach P looked like your standard high school coach- part time "nut," part time deep-thinker and philosopher, and full time motivator. However, on the inside, he was a deeply religious man and that shaped how he approached his students and players. Life lessons were mixed in with the X's and O's and he never

Great week

Skippers on track again

By William Wassersug

It was a good week for the Cohasset boys football team.

"We had four wins and four shutouts," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Today (Tuesday) we beat Randolph 4-0 and Thurday we beat Rockland 4-0."

Willis said his team's turnaround from a slow start coincides with a surge in scoring.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Consistency continues for top tier teams

Strong teams continue to rack up points

More than one quarter into the 2013 season, and we're starting to see a pattern. The top teams are slowly beginning to separate themselves from the rest of the pack. And those top teams will no doubt slug it out until the final week of the season. Conference rivalries are getting stronger week to week, which is evident if you look at the top two teams on both sides.

One boys' team and one girls' team fall off the charts. For the girls, there is a new No. 1 and a new entry into the top six. There also was a bit of movement on the boys' side, including an Inside the 6 debut from an in-form Patriot League team. The teams in the region this fall are stronger than ever, which has led to a fifth bubble team for both the boys and girls this week.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Monday, Sept. 16 through Sunday, Sept. 22.

Boys

1. Silver Lake - The Lakers retain the No. 1 spot for the second straight week. Before dismantling Whitman-Hanson last week, the Lakers beat Duxbury, which was undefeated to that point and hadn't allowed a single goal. The Lakers put three past the Dragons and came into this week atop the Patriot League and with a 4-0-1 record.

2. Hingham - One of three teams to leap up one spot this week, the Harbormen became the first team to hold Duxbury scoreless, blanking the Dragons, 3-0. Earlier in the week, Hingham battled it out with Quincy, taking a 4-2 win.

3. Braintree - The Wamps jump up one position after a deceivingly phenomenal week. One win and two draws may not look like much on paper, but the draws came against Brookline and unbeaten Archbishop Williams. They beat Newton North to remain tied for first in the Bay State Carey.

4. Duxbury - It was a week to forget for the Dragons, until Saturday. After losing their first game of the season, a 3-1 defeat to Silver Lake, the Dragons were shut out for the first time this season, falling to Hingham. They bounced back with a 4-1 win over a Marshfield team that conceded less than a goal per game through the first six games of the season.

5. Carver - Up one spot from a week ago, the Crusaders rolled through the week with a pair of South Shore League wins, a shutout over Norwell and a convincing victory over Hull to improve to 6-0 and remain in first place in the SSL.

6. Pembroke - The Titans make their debut in the top six after an impressive run this week, a draw and two wins that pushed their record to 4-1-1. The boys have bought into first-year head coach's Jay Boden's system, and despite key injuries, keep getting results.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell, Abington

Week two rankings:
1. Silver Lake, 2. Duxbury, 3. Hingham, 4. Braintree, 5. Marshfield, 6. Carver

Girls

1. Scituate - A well-deserved climb to the top of the rankings for the Sailors, who continue to shine and prove that if they stay healthy, will be a top contender in the postseason. If their result two weeks ago against Duxbury wasn't proof enough this team is legit, the Sailors blanked Whitman-Hanson last week. They also beat Marshfield and walloped Middleboro.

2. Duxbury - After holding down the No. 1 ranking for three straight weeks (preseason, week one, and week two), the Dragons slip one notch this week. A 6-1 win over Silver Lake was wiped out by a tough, 2-1 loss to Hingham.

3. Rockland - The 'Dogs hold down the No. 3 spot for the second straight week. They improved to 6-0 and remained in first place in the South Shore League with wins over both Abington and Cohasset.

4. Hingham - Welcome to the top six, Hingham. The Harborwomen dispatched Duxbury, taking a 2-1 win over the Dragons on the road. With that victory, Hingham pushed its way from the bubble up to No. 4.

5. Norwell - The Clippers stay put at No. 5 despite an impressive week of three consecutive shutouts. A scoreless draw against Cohasset was followed up with wins over Carver and Monomoy. Their only loss in the league this year came to No. 3 ranked Rockland.

6. Marshfield - The Rams remain at No. 6 for the second week in a row, a week that began strong but ended a little rough. They beat Falmouth on the road and Plymouth South at home before losing to the top team in the rankings, Scituate.

On the bubble: Plymouth South, Plymouth North, Carver, Braintree, Silver Lake

Week two rankings:
Duxbury, 2. Scituate, 3. Rockland, 4. Plymouth South, 5. Norwell, 6. Marshfield

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

Stingers finding ways to win

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Legend Div. champion Stingers have been finding ways to win in the early going in the South Coastal Hockey League.

They won their fourth game in four tries and their third by a goal as they rallied for two goals in the final period for a 3-2 come from behind win over the Toros. Michael Cashin of Norwell tied the game and 67 seconds later Pembroke's Scott Kelly scored what proved to be the game winning goal for the Stingers.

Dave Christensen of Pembroke scored the other goal for the Stingers, while Paul Brinkman and Mike Martin also of Pembroke scored for the Toros.

The Sharks Tim Cruz of Marshfield broke up a scoreless tie in the third period and Barry Kaiser stopped 17 shots as the they defeated the Whalers, 1-0 for their first win of the season.

Whalers goalie Dan Nason had 24 saves and many of them were spectacular in the loss.

Jim McNeil and John Davey both scored a goal and assisted on another as the Saints rolled to a 5-1 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Pembroke's John MacLellan, Tom Shaughnessy of Hanover and Jonathan Graham added goals for the Saints and Marshfield's Jim Donovan scored the Crusaders goal.

Joe McCafferty scored two of his three goals in the third period as the Maple Leafs rallied from a 5-3 deficit for a 5-5 Classics Div. tie with the Canadiens to stay undefeated. McCafferty also had an assist in the game.

Jim Bristol had a goal and two assists while Tim Ryan added a goal with an assist and Joe Greene had two assists for the Leafs.

Pembroke's Mike Fahie scored two goals, Bob McCabe also of Pembroke had a goal and two assists, Tim McCrystal of Duxbury and Matt Clancy added a goal apiece for the Canadiens.

Lou Sideropoulos scored two goals and set up three others as the Rangers held on for a 5-4 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks. Sideropoulos' linemates, Bob Sideropoulos had a goal with an assists while John Sances scored a goal and assisted on two others. Jim Hutchinson was the other goal scorer for the Rangers.

Mike Murray of Hanover and Pembroke's Paul Lyons scored two goals each and John Dunn had two assists for the Black Hawks.

John Dougenik and Tom MacInnes both scored a goal and assisted on two others to lead the Bruins to a 5-3 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings. Jim Mulhern of Pembroke, Hanover's Peter Fallon, and John Zimmer of Marshfield added a goal each and Mike Martin also of Pembroke had two assists.

Marshfield's Ron DiCecca, Duxbury's Harry Mathews and Steve Perkins scored a goal each and tom Pipenbrink had two assists for the Red Wings.

"We've been moving the ball," he said. "We've had a lot of scorers. We've had six different scorers in the last two games."

Cole Morrison scored a pair of goals against Randolph, while Joe Buckley also scored, to increase his season total to seven.

Mathias Loft notched three assists and Ryan McKean added a goal and three assists.

"We've been more patient," Willis said of the new scoring touch. "When we were 1-3 we were forcing things a bit. Now we feel if we're patient and do what we're supposed to do, the scoring will come."

The Skipper defense has been outstanding in the four shutouts in front of two goalies.

Jack Chamberlain was in net for two, filling in for Pat Federle, who was out with an injury. Federle returned for the last two and was unbeatable.

Nathan Bumstead had a goal against Rockland.

Cohasset plays Monomoy and East Bridgewater next week in big South Shore League games.

"They were co-champs last year," Willis said.

Right now, Carver leads the league, two games ahead of Cohasset.

Willis is pleased with his team's 5-3 record.

"We really are playing much better," he said. "We've figured out our lineup and have a perspective of style of play. The defense has been outstanding."

One goal is making the MIAA Tournament. The five wins are a good start.

"We play 19, so the five wins puts us halfway there," Willis said. "Our goal is to make the playoffs, and then to try to catch Carver and compete for a league title.

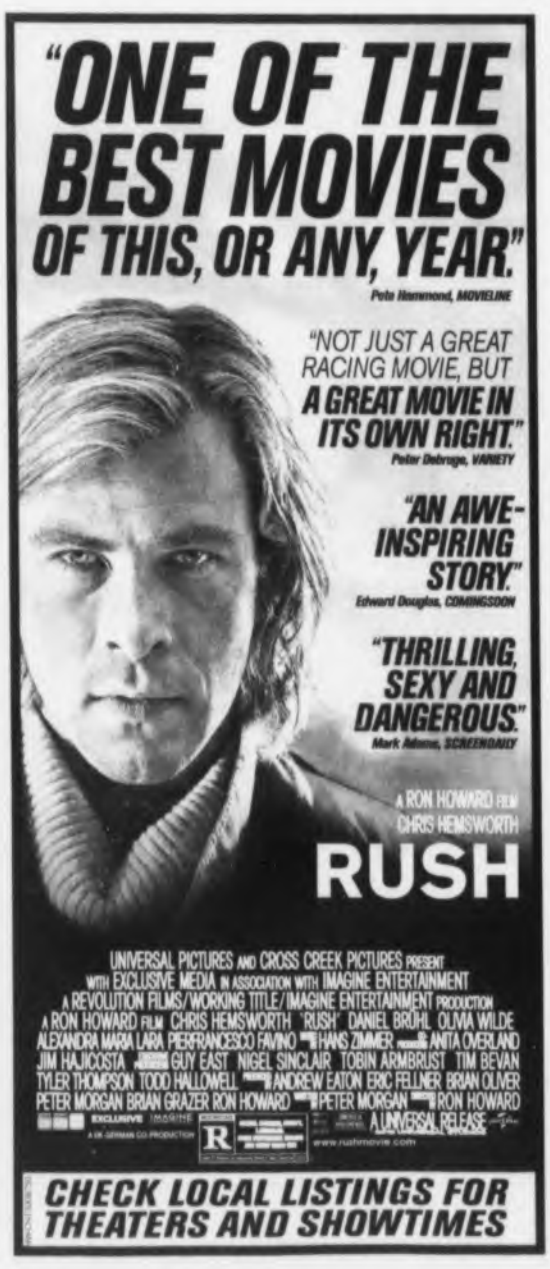
N.E. Colonials tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club is accepting applications from Cohasset players for the program's April 2014 Ambassadors Tour to the Netherlands.



This boys basketball team will accept ten players (going into grades 10 and 11) for its ten-day spring tour. New England Colonials teams have been traveling the world to play basketball since 1981 and the program has an international reputation for excellence. The team will visit and play in Amsterdam, Leeuwarden, Utrecht and The Hague while in the Netherlands.

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club was founded in 1980 and is a nonprofit, volunteer-run program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world. The team does not hold tryouts. All applicants must be in good academic standing and capable of handling a high level of competitive play and the demands of overseas travel.

For additional information, please contact Scott Bryson at 508-734-5660 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol.com. Interested parents and players may learn more about the Colonials' program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net.

ROAD RACE

John Goslin Memorial 5k Road Race

Dear Fellow Lacrosse Parents,

Many of you from the lacrosse community remember Coach Goslin who spent almost 10 years working with the Hanover Lacrosse Program. Coach Goslin was a very special part of Hanover Youth Athletics and many of you may have observed his special gift to make all kids, including his opponents, feel the love of the game and sportsmanship.

In his zest for life he preached a "One Team – One Heart" concept where everyone worked together. He dedicated his life to his family, teaching CCD at St Mary's Church, as a Boy Scout Troop Leader, Coaching Lacrosse & Football, while all the time reaching out to anyone in need.

In memory of John's life, we are proud to announce the John Goslin Memorial 5k Road Race will be held at 9AM Saturday November 2nd starting at St Mary's Church.

We welcome all players, coaches and parents from our extended lacrosse family to join us for the race. Players are invited to wear their jerseys!

Registration can be found at Racewire.com under Nov 2nd John Goslin Memorial Road Race Hanover MA. All proceeds will go to the John Goslin Memorial Fund.

"COACH P"

missed an opportunity to stress points that were bigger than the sport.

I played for Coach P at Cohasset High from 1984- 1986 and watched him raise a program from the bottom of the South Shore League to consistent title contender. In his first four years, he won 29 games and delivered 2 South Shore League titles, the first in 1985 and the second in 1987. For Cohasset, this was no small feat as it ended a 26 year league title drought. Coach P was the heart and soul of these teams and his enthusiasm brought the players to a higher level. He did not teach winning. He taught accountability, attention to detail, and respect. If you worked hard, took care of each other, and did the right things, the winning would take care of itself. His focus was family and faith first, academics second, and athletics a distant third- pretty strange I thought at the time for a high school football coach.

I was lucky enough to stay close to Coach P in the years that followed high school and college. As I grew older and matured, I began to understand the beauty of his work. Beneath the rah-rah of the practice rants and pre-game speeches, Coach P was building the foundation for manhood. Winning might be nice, but it was more important to be a good person along the way.

Phil Pisano lost his battle with cancer on Friday, September 20th. The Monday prior to his passing, I was able to visit Coach P along with teammate Bob Durkin and assistant coach Bob Silvia. He was home under hospice care and it was clear that the disease had beaten him physically. However, as we learned over the next hour in our spirited discussion, the cancer had not touched his mind or his spirit.

We talked about the "good old days" of Cohasset football and had some great laughs. We marveled at Coach P's memory while he recalled specific plays, their exact yardages, and the significance of big games during our timeframe. This continued uninterrupted until it was clear that he was getting too tired to continue. As we prepared to excuse ourselves and say our last goodbyes, we bent down to kiss Coach P and tell him that we loved him. At that time, he grabbed our hands tightly and stopped us from leaving. "Remember two things," he whispered, "take care of your families and be good to those who need help."

No mention of football, only life lessons for us to think about. That is the legacy of Coach Phil Pisano. I hope that all of the kids in Scituate and Cohasset are fortunate enough to have a Coach P in their lives. The impact will last forever.

ceptions, 115 yards, two touchdowns) for a 41-yard touchdown pass with 12 seconds remaining before halftime and a 20-6 lead.

"At the end of the day, it's mental," said Rockland coach Brian Kelliher. "We made some mental mistakes, turned the ball over and I don't know how many yards in penalties we had, but we had way too many out there. You can't beat yourself like that, especially against a team as good as Cohasset. They turned the ball over once and didn't make as many mistakes as we did and that was the difference.

"The first touchdown was a great catch by (Burke). The second one was more of a mental mistake by us. (Cohasset) had a great call and that was a big touchdown before halftime. If they don't score, it's a one score game with us getting the ball to begin the second half. That was not an insurmountable deficit (14-point halftime deficit)."

Rockland (1-1) got the ball to start the second half and marched down the field 60 yards on five plays, with Justin Nguyen (nine carries, 60 yards) capping the drive with a 4-yard touchdown run to cut the deficit to 20-13.

Rockland was able to stop the Skippers when Dennis McPeck recovered a fumble at the Rockland 18. Cohasset's defense, however, regained their two-touchdown lead two plays later when the Bulldogs fumbled the ball, which rolled into the end zone and was recovered by Cohasset's Hayes Keniley for a touchdown.

"We make a great play on defense to get a turnover," said Kelliher. "Unfortunately we give it right back and they end up recovering the ball in the end zone. Again, it comes down to mental mistakes and we made too many today."

Cohasset scored the final touchdown with 9:42 left in the fourth quarter on a 3-yard run by Cole Kissick for a 34-13 lead.

"Saturday was a total team effort," Afanasiw said. "All three aspects of the game, played major roles, we had two offensive touchdowns, a defensive touchdown and a special teams touchdown."

The special teams score actually went to the offense, after Cohasset blocked a punt, recovered at the eight-yard line and scored immediately.

Rockland opened the scoring with 40 seconds left in the first quarter when Colin Aylward (16 carries, 122 yards) scored on a 13-yard run for a 6-0 lead.

Early in the second quarter, the Skippers began their fourth drive of the game at the Rockland 17 after blocking a punt. Kissick scored his first touchdown of the game on a 10-yard run and Henry Butenschoen's extra point gave Cohasset a 7-6 lead.

The Skippers defense was a huge factor, according to Afanasiw.

"Defensively the linebacking corps had a very strong game. Jack McElgunn, Danny Tangherlini, Will Butenshcoen, Brett Dooley and especially Matt Froio who registered double digit tackles," he said. "Offensively, the offensive line was the story, stymieing the very aggressive blitzing defense of Rockland and helping us grind out a very hard earned 105 rushing yards, but also gave Chris time to pile up 150- plus yards in the air with two touchdowns going to Liam Burke.

Hull comes to town on Friday

"The kids are ready to go," Afanasiw said of Hull. "We have had a good week of practice thus far, and are grounded, focused and determined to play our best football vs. the Pirates."

Deer Hill's Junior Gardeners kicked off the new school year with a planting project on Sept. 16. Traditionally, the Junior Gardeners team up with Chris Kennedy of Kennedy's Country Gardens to plant a tree in the courtyard each fall. This year, however, they focused their efforts on the front of the school, which has already seen several improvements this past year. In the spring, Kennedy assisted Deer Hill students with planting flowers and shrubs near the entry for a nationwide celebration called "Plant Something!" In May, in collaboration with the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, Kennedy planted two Butterfly Magnolia trees, one in memory of Peter Hannon, the well-loved night custodian.

For their inaugural meeting, 28 Junior Gardeners and 10 CGCC volunteers teamed up to plant Wide Brim Hostas under the Magnolia trees. With Chris Kennedy's guidance, the children dug holes and placed yellow Dutch Master Daffodils, white Snowdrops, purple Chionodoxa and blue Scilla bulbs. In addition, the gardeners spread mulch, donated by the PSO, to protect the trees and their new plants. As Caroline Donohue wrote in her thank-you note, "I love planting trees and bulbs. They'll look pretty in the spring." Gracyn Lord's letter sums it up well: "Thank you very much, Mr. Kennedy, for coming to our school and making it a more beautiful place."

According to Principal Jennifer deChiara, "The collaboration between the Junior Gardeners and Kennedy's is making Deer Hill into a showplace!"

Marjorie F. Ritter

Marjorie F. Ritter

SARASOTA, Fla. – Marjorie F. Ritter passed away Aug. 25, 2013, in Sarasota, Fla., at home, with family at her side.

She was the beloved wife of the late Harry H. Ritter; loving mother of Darleen Ritter, Lynn Zelms, and the late Roxanne Curtin; and son-in-law, Robert (Zelmo) Zelms; grandmother of Nichole, Harry and Jason Curtin; great-grandmother of Nina and Elise Curtin, all of Sarasota, Fla.; sister of Betty Brooke, Jean Figueiredo, and Joyce Higgins; and aunt of several nieces and nephews.

She was born in Cohasset, Mass.

Called "Ma" by many, she entertained several generations from near and far with her memorable singing and dancing at Hugo's Lighthouse.

Marjorie was also known for her wit, charm, understanding, love and conversational eyes.

For many years, Marjorie co-designed and was featured on prize-winning floats of the Firefighter Wives Assn. which appeared in Cohasset Youth Day Parades.

She also enjoyed writing poetry, designing her own homes, scenic painting, and was the owner of restaurant Margie's Happy Daze and Margie's Seafood.

Her proudest and most memorable accomplishment was to have co-designed the Cohasset Town Flag for the town Bi-Centennial Celebration of 1970. Cohasset's Town Flag is now proudly displayed throughout the town and has journeyed into space with astronaut Stephen Bowen.

She was a member of the Second Congregational Church, and past member of Post 118 Legion Auxiliary, Cohasset Community Center and Firefighters Wives Association.

A celebration of life will be held Oct. 19, 2013, at 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, gathering to follow at the church. All are welcome.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Second Congregational Church or a charity of your choice.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Air bags are designed to reduce injuries in crashes. They are part of the car's supplemental restraint system but can cause injuries if you're not seat belted. Air bags may sound or look like soft objects but they deploy forcefully at 200 mph. They are designed to work in conjunction with seat belts. Check your owner's manual to see how many air bags your car has. COURTESY PHOTO

Bounty of summer produce

Fall is officially here, but our Farmers Market is still offering a bounty of summer produce, along with an abundant assortment of cool weather vegetables.

One of the most popular fall harvest vegetables is winter squash, which comes in an array of unusual shapes and beautiful colors: The ever-popular green Acorn and tan Butternut, the large, oddly-shaped blue Hubbard, the oval, green and yellow striped Delicata, the squat, fat Kaboucha and more. The rich, sweet-tasting flesh of these squashes ranges in color from deep orange to pale yellow. Loaded with vitamins A and C, beta carotene, potassium and fiber, they are a nutritional powerhouse, yet low in calories. Winter squash can be baked, roasted, boiled or pureed in a variety of recipes. Toast the seeds for a crunchy, tasty treat.

See recipes for butternut squash and seeds below.

Upcoming events:

• Oct. 3, 3:30 p.m. – cooking demonstration with Cynthia Gallo-Casey, owner of The Roman Table in Scituate.

• Oct. 10 – Pumpkin Decorating Contest.

• Oct. 17 – Harvest Day.

RECIPES

Roasted Butternut Squash with Brown Butter and Nutmeg

Makes four side-dish servings

Ingredients:

Nonstick vegetable oil spray

2 pounds butternut squash (about one large), halved, seeded, peeled, cut into 1-inch cubes

2 tablespoons olive oil

3 tablespoons unsalted butter

1/4 teaspoon freshly grated whole nutmeg or ground nutmeg

Additional nutmeg (for garnish)

Preparation:

Preheat oven to 375°F. Spray large rimmed baking sheet with nonstick spray. Place squash on sheet. Drizzle with olive oil, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and toss to coat; arrange squash in single layer. Bake squash until brown and very tender when pierced with a fork, stirring occasionally, about 45 minutes. Transfer to bowl.

Melt butter in small saucepan over medium-low heat until foam subsides and butter turns nut-brown, about 4 minutes. Pour over squash; stir lightly to coat. Toss with more salt and 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg. Sprinkle with more nutmeg and serve.

From Bon Appetit, December 2003.

Roasted Winter Squash Seeds

Ingredients:

1 cup winter squash seeds

1 tablespoon olive oil

1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Directions:

1. Preheat the oven to 275 degrees F (135 degrees C). Line a baking sheet with parchment paper or aluminum foil.

2. After removing the seeds from the squash, rinse with water, and remove any strings and bits of squash. Pat dry, and place in a small bowl. Stir the olive oil and salt into the seeds until evenly coated. Spread out in an even layer on the prepared baking sheet.

3. Bake for 15 minutes, or until seeds start to pop. Remove from oven and cool on the baking sheet before serving.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY EVENT

The David Cushing House, built in 1719, survived a major fire in 2010. It is one of a handful of early farmsteads in Hingham that still has farm animals.. COURTESY PHOTOS

Main Street is focus of Hingham historic house tour

More than just a showcase of domestic ideals, Hingham's Main Street and its 300-plus historic homes and buildings are a virtual catalog of American vernacular architecture.

Hingham's 89th annual Historic House Tour reveals the origins of America's Main Street ideal Hingham's 89th Annual Historic Homes Tour takes place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 6. The tour includes seven homes, two churches and a Victorian Veteran's Hall, all on Hingham's iconic Main Street. How iconic? Eleanor Roosevelt, viewing Main Street's snow draped elms on a visit to Hingham in January 1942, was inspired to note "there is nothing lovelier than a Main Street in winter." Indeed, Hingham's four and a half mile thoroughfare virtually embodies the American ideal of Main Street.

That ideal has deep roots. Hingham's Main Street was first laid out by English yeomen who built small but sturdy timber frame farmsteads along its mildly rolling hills and meadows.

As the centuries progressed the descendants of those first Hingham settlers became prosperous tradesmen, shopkeepers and mariners. They continued to build along Main Street, adding Georgian and Federal style buildings to the original array of low-slung Cape houses and Saltboxes. Each new style represented a different vision of the American ideal, one universal trend being that houses gradually grew bigger while barns grew smaller.

With the dawn of the Victorian Age and the streetcar suburbs, a new population arrived. Men who plied their pens in Boston during the day, and played gentleman farmer on the weekends began to build in the ever-shrinking plots of land remaining along Main Street. Among them was a young doctor, J.E. Harlow, who built his family a picturesque Italianate and Greek Revival home in 1852 near a brook that meanders through several of Main Street's back yards.

Tickets for this year's tour are $25 in advance and $30 the day of the tour. Tickets can be obtained at the via paypal (www.hinghamhistorical.org/programs.events.html) or purchased at the following locations: The Hingham Public Library, Hingham Farmer's Market, Heritage House, Hingham Center Pharmacy, La Petit Maison, Linden Ponds, Noble's Camera Shop, Old Derby Academy, and Whitney Gordon Jewelers. South Carver theme park expanding, renovating to offer bigger, better family destination

By Tamson W. Burgess
tburgess@wickedlocal.com

The South Carver theme park that's been part of the holiday traditions for generations of New England families is undergoing a major renovation and expansion.

Director of Marketing Suzanne Byron said the new and improved Edaville USA will still fulfill all those memories from years past and also provide a slew of new entertaining and educational attractions.

The park opened for the season last weekend for "A Day Out with Thomas," with a myriad of construction projects still in the works behind the scenes, all in anticipation of a busy schedule of special events during the next four months.

This first phase of construction includes moving 2-1/2 miles of track within the park, a new entrance and expanded parking, a new amusement ride and even a new (covered and heated) waiting area for passengers boarding the train.

Welcome to Edaville – through the park's new entrance.

Within the next month, Edaville will open "Dinoland," featuring 22 massive animatronic dinosaurs that move and spew steam. The T-Rex stands a full 60 feet tall, and all are cloaked in life-like skin visitors will be invited to touch. Dinoland will also include a paleontologists' area for kids to learn more dinosaur facts and history.

The park will be open weekends until Oct. 9. Thomas the Tank Engine returns Saturday and Sunday, followed by Curious George, Hello Kitty and the Berenstain Bears for the kids. The last weekend in September will be dedicated to superheroes and princesses. Dress up as your favorite and enjoy parades and even walk the red carpet, Byron explained.

The National Cranberry Festival returns in early October with lots of live entertainment to enjoy before and after you ride the rails through cranberry country in the heart of the harvest season.

Edaville will be open five days a week (Wednesday-Sunday) Oct. 9-27 for "Pumpkins Aglow!" when the park will feature Ray Villafane, an internationally known pumpkin-carving artist. Byron estimates Villafane will create at least 4,000 carved pumpkins during this festival. And families are invited to dress up in their Halloween costumes anytime during this event and go trick-or-treating throughout the park.

And starting Nov. 22, the traditional Christmas Festival of Lights will return to Edaville.

"We're not going to skimp on the Christmas festival," Byron said, promising it, too, will be bigger and better this year.

In fact, the next phase of fall construction will include the creation of the North Pole – the destination for Edaville's new Polar Express. Special trains will be offered throughout the Christmas season, transporting passengers off the regular rail route for a 20-minute ride to the North Pole, where Santa will board the train (bearing snacks and gifts) to interact with the children as he rides with them back to the station.

And don't miss the new Flying Cranberry Crates ride, which joins the iconic carousel, the Ferris wheel, bumper cars and more to bring the total number of amusement rides to 13. Imagine riding in a giant cranberry crate held aloft by a hot-air balloon, Byron said, like a spinning teacups ride but up in the air with great views of the park and the pond.

After six decades of operation, under different owners and in a variety of configurations, just a few years ago Edaville USA's current owner, Jon Delli Priscoli, put the park up for sale. His intent, he said, was to find someone interested in continuing to operate it as a family theme park. Though he came close to signing a deal, Byron said, in the end he did not feel sure the park would be preserved. So he opted to throw himself whole-heartedly into the park's future. "He's committed himself to this park," Byron said. "He's here all day; he's here every day ensuring it will remain Edaville."

A new ride – Flying Cranberry Crates – is being installed at Edaville.

A new parking lot is also under construction.

Edaville in South Carver is currently a busy construction site.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BRANDPOINT

Lights, camera, holiday party

With the holiday party season right around the corner, a growing camp of entertaining experts suggests approaching things a little more like Steven Spielberg.

Whether it's a Halloween party for the kids, a Thanksgiving potluck or an elegant Christmas dinner, entertaining pros know that "setting the scene" for a memorable event can make a significantly greater impact.

Choose your space: When choosing a location, think about the season and theme of your event. Convene in a front room for a Halloween party featuring a spooky yard, or in front of the fireplace on Thanksgiving.

Pre-set party: Have seating for 10 to 15 percent of your guests. If your space is too big for the number of guests, use multiple small tables to create mini food stations, which will encourage guests to move throughout the room.

Dim the lights: Rely on table and floor lamps and mood-enhancing candlelight. Try seasonal scents like spiced pumpkin, cranberry clove and gingerbread maple.

Simplify decor: Seasonal fruit presented with nuts and berries or evergreen branches and pinecones from your backyard can make a lovely and elegant statement, at a fraction of the cost of fresh flowers.

Turn on music: Ceate a playlist for the entire evening of tunes that match the occasion. Mix traditional holiday songs with favorite party tunes in a ratio of one to three.

EASY RECIPE

Grape and Red Cabbage Slaw

Serves 8.

- 1/2 small head red cabbage (about 1 pound), shredded
- 2 cups halved green seedless California grapes
- 1 Granny Smith apple, julienned
- 1/4 cup cider vinegar
- 1 T honey
- 1 T Dijon mustard
- 2 T EVOO
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper

In a large bowl, combine the cabbage, grapes and apple. In a small jar, combine the vinegar, honey, mustard and olive oil.

Shake well and pour over the cabbage mixture. Season generously with both salt and pepper and let stand 30 minutes at room temperature. Serve at room temperature or chilled.

Tailgate time!

Cheese-Brat Soup is a fan favorite in the making

By Margaret Maples
More Content Now

Chili, ribs and wings are well-known tailgate party regulars, but Cheese-Brat Soup is another dish that your crowd will love.

Flavored with a little ale and further fortified with chunks of bratwurst, this soup has a sophisticated frat personality. I added broccoli florets for color and because moms keep insisting that we all need veggies.

As you can see from the recipe here, which is inspired by one from the Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board, this simple soup comes together quickly. You'll be happier with the finished product if you remember two tips about cheese: age and temperature. Aged cheese melts and blends more smoothly.

I bought a chunk of 12-month-old cheddar, and to help the melting process, I grated it before sprinkling it into the soup. Aged cheese is often a little more expensive, but it's also more flavorful, so you can use a bit less. Your pocketbook will thank you.

After sprinkling cheese shreds into the warm milky mixture, I stirred continuously, not permitting the cheese to stick to the pan or form clumps. Keeping the temperature fairly low after the cheese goes in — no boiling, please — will help to avoid rubbery lumps or graininess.

The cheese goes in last, right after the beer. The alcohol content might make this soup an adults-only item. But remember that we're using ale as a flavoring, not as a beverage, so our recipe calls for just enough to taste.

Cheese-Brat Soup

Aged cheddar cheese melts smoothly, and its lovely flavor pairs well with amber ale and bratwurst.

- 1/4 cup (half a stick) unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1/2 cup diced red onion
- 2 t diced poblano pepper (optional)
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 cup broccoli florets
- 3 to 4 T all-purpose flour
- Salt and black pepper to taste
- 5 to 6 ounces cooked bratwurst or cooked sausage, in bite-size pieces
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 to 3/4 cup amber ale, flat
- 2 cups shredded aged cheddar cheese

Melt butter in a heavy pan over medium heat. When the butter is bubbling, add celery, onion and poblano pepper, if using, and allow to sweat (cook until the vegetables release their fluid). Stir in the garlic and broccoli.

It's important to lower the temperature to a calm simmer before stirring shredded cheese into this soup. Higher heat is likely to make the cheese rather rubbery or grainy. MARGARET MAPLES PHOTO

Combine flour, salt and pepper. Sprinkle this mixture over the vegetables and stir, allowing the flour to cook for about 2 minutes. Stir in bratwurst.

Add broth to the mixture, then stir in milk and ale. Bring to a high simmer. Now reduce the heat.

With soup at low simmer, sprinkle in cheese and allow to melt, stirring gently.

Do not boil. Keep the soup warm until time to serve.

Makes about 4 servings.

With football snacks, a beer nut duo works

The sweet beer nuts thing gets it all wrong. Sugared nuts do not create a sensation demanding beverage quenching. Spicy nuts do, definitely, if only to extinguish the fire.

These fare well on your cocktail table during football games, providing your cooler is stocked and nearby. There's something about the violence of football meshing with the violence in your mouth.

JIM HILLIBISH

Then again, for the more timid, beer nuts remain a classic football snack. It's easy to make your own, and you'll save a few dollars off store-bought.

WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Beer Nuts

- 1 pound mixed nuts or peanuts
- 3/4 cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- Salt

Whisk sugar and water in a skillet. Simmer on medium until the liquid almost evaporates, creating a syrup. Salt a cookie sheet. Mix nuts and warm syrup and spread. Bake at 275 F for 30 minutes, stirring once to coat.

Spicy Nuts

- 3 T butter
- 2 garlic cloves, finely minced
- 3 T Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 t cominos (cumin) powder
- 1/4 t cayenne pepper
- Hot sauce, to taste
- Salt
- 4 1/2 cups dried peanuts or almonds, cashews and pecans

In a skillet, toss all ingredients except nuts. Cook on low a few minutes, then add the nuts, tossing to coat. Spread nuts on a cookie sheet and bake for 10 minutes at 300 F. Stir and cook 5 to 10 minutes longer.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 7, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries charm helps persuade others to listen to your proposal. But it's still a long way from acceptance, unless you can stand up to the tough questions that are set to follow.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Plan to share a weekend getaway from all the pressures of your hectic workaday world with a very special someone. You could be pleasantly surprised at what develops.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your keen insight once again helps you handle a challenging situation with a clearer perception of what it's really all about. What you learn helps you make a difficult decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you want to steer clear of getting involved in a new family dispute, say so. Your stand might cause hurt feelings for some, but overall, you'll be respected for your honesty.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect recognition for your efforts in getting a project into operation. Besides the more practical rewards, your Lion's heart will be warmed by the admiration of your colleagues.

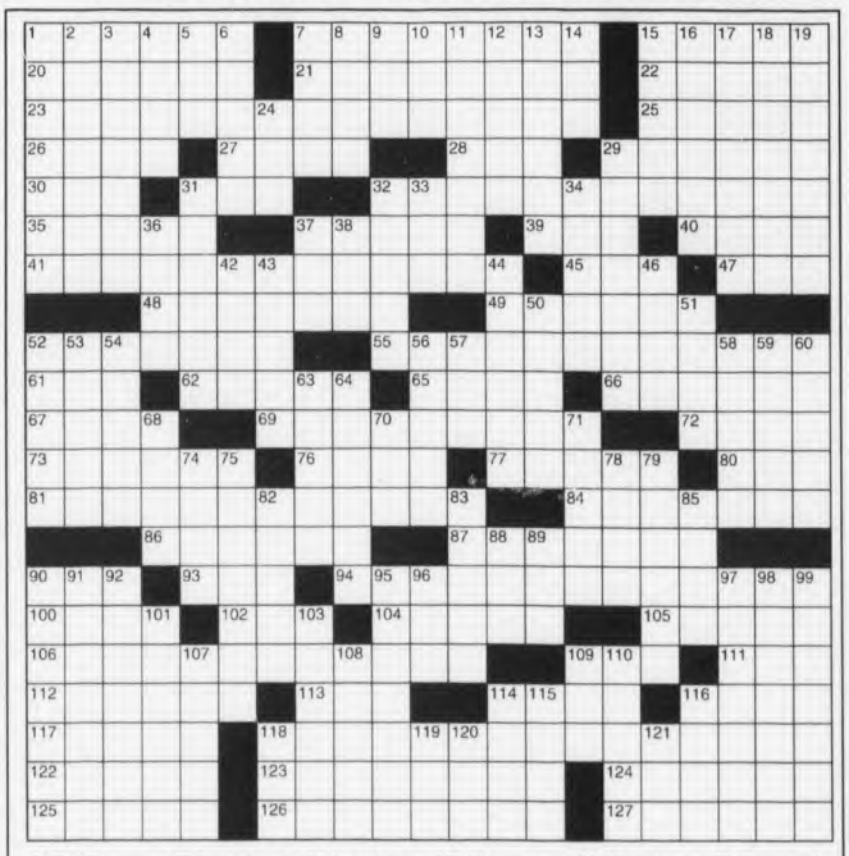
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Set aside time to rid yourself of clutter that might well be drawing down your creative energies. Consider asking someone to help you decide what stays and what goes.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A colleague could make a request that might place you in an awkward position with co-workers. Best advice: Share your concerns with an associate you can trust.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your energy levels are way up, allowing you to take on the added challenge of a task you've been hoping to secure. Expect this move to lead to an important opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your continuing sense of confidence in what you've set out to do gives encouragement to others. Expect to see more people asking to add their efforts to yours.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might think it would be best to reject a suggestion others insist would be unworkable. But you might be surprised by what you find if you give it a chance.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing a decision might disappoint some people, but the important thing is that you be honest with yourself. Don't go ahead with anything you have doubts about.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There could be some fallout from an emotional confrontation that you really should deal with before moving on. Best to start fresh with a clean, clear slate.

(c) 2013 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your honesty not only helps you make decisions for yourself, but also helps others find the right choices for themselves.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

New playground unveiled

Deer Hill School project comes to fruition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The new playground has already proven to be a hit with students, who have been itching to use the equipment since school started in early September.

Let the games begin.

Deer Hill unveiled its brand new playground with a ribbon-cutting ceremony on Monday, Sept. 30.

Teachers, school administrators, PSO members, town employees, parents, and, of course, students, came to Deer Hill to check out the new playground, and reflect on the hard work that made it possible.

PSO member Franchesca Arnold, who launched the playground project two years ago and spearheaded it along with Ralph Tulio, said that Monday's ceremony gave her a chance to thank all of those involved with the project.

"I really wanted to say thank you to all the community groups who helped support us to make it happen," said Arnold, adding that Monday "was a beautiful day" to officially unveil the new play place.

Tulio gave kudos to the PSO's playground renovation committee, including Arnold, Sharon Smith, Michelle Loughlin, and Patty Cunningham.

"This committee was well-organized," said Tulio. "Everybody did their part to make this thing possible; it was a group effort."

The new playground was a labor of love by the school's PSO and parent volunteers. The PSO spearheaded the project, holding community fundraisers to pay for the playground, including a basketball event and selling bricks families could put their names on that would become part of the playground.

Community Preservation Committee funds also helped make the playground possible. The PSO playground committee approached the CPC earlier this year to have the playground project placed on the Town Meeting warrant. The April 2013 Town Meeting approved the project unanimously. State community preservation funds are available for qualifying town projects, including recreation.

The CPC provided $60,500 seed money to pay for the playground installer, said Arnold, and

Town may not attract large pool of TM candidates

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Qualified candidates may not line up for the position of Cohasset Town Manager.

That was a clear message that the Board of Selectmen may have taken away from last Thursday's workshop led by long-time Franklin Town Manager Jeffrey D. Nutting, who provides part-time consulting services in his time off to cities and towns.

"So my question is: What can the board do between now and then to convince people that this is a great place to come to work?"

Jeffrey D. Nutting, consultant

Nutting, who was paid $650 for the workshop, described the selectmen's most important decision as hiring the next town manager. But, he added, that was not going to be easy.

"The pool is small to being with and there are a lot of folks my age and they are aging out but that is not unique to your community."

But what may make Cohasset stand out is, Nutting said, the fact that everybody in the pool knows everybody else's business and therefore may have read the newspapers and seen all the issues the board has.

BREAST CANCER RESEARCH

Taking a personal approach

By Sue Scheible
The Patriot Ledger

Genetic codes. Oncotype DX testing. The role of environmental toxins. New interest in the immune system.

Cutting-edge research in breast cancer is taking place in a rapidly expanding variety of fields, from molecular to medical to surgical oncology. It can be hard to get a handle on it all.

The result: women facing a diagnosis today face a much more personalized or individual approach, with testing and treatment options tailored to their own biology, type and sub-type of cancer, stage of growth and family history.

"With time, I am certain this new approach will positively affect survival rates, but already we are minimizing the need for chemotherapy

Why we're PINK today

The Cohasset Mariner and Wicked Local Cohasset, along with more than 140 other GateHouse Media Massachusetts newspapers and WickedLocal.com websites, have turned pink today, as part of our fifth annual "Paint It All Pink" effort. This year we're painting it all pink in support of Susan G. Komen for the Cure Massachusetts and its efforts to increase knowledge and awareness of the disease during October, which is Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

In this issue and subsequent issues during the month of October you'll find stories about the challenges faced by patients and families affected by a breast cancer diagnosis, cutting edge research that offers hope for personalized treatment, ways you can help, what support services are offered in our region to families living with breast cancer, and details about the work of Susan G. Komen Massachusetts.

Pink is the "official" color for breast cancer awareness, and many of the advertisers in this special edition are flying their colors in support of the cause.

Last year, GateHouse Media New England donated nearly $14,000 to Komen MA and again this year GHM Massachusetts will donate 10 cents from every pink newspaper sold in stores to Susan G. Komen Massachusetts. In addition, $5 from any new or renewed EZpay subscription during October will be donated. GHM will also donate 10 percent of the gross sales of pink advertising packages to Komen MA.

"We are proud to be renewing our efforts to raise awareness and share information about this disease and to offer our communities the opportunity to join us in supporting the fight against breast cancer," said Sean Burke, President and Group Publisher.

PICTURE THIS

Robert W. Lagimoniere

Name: Robert W. Lagimoniere.

Occupation: Police Officer, Cohasset Police Department.

Best day of your life: Marrying my beautiful wife Jennifer.

Best vacation: Any vacation with my family.

Worst vacation: My very first vacation as an adult, October / November 2002. The night I returned home, I learned my father had passed away.

Favorite season: Summer time of course. I love the beach, BBQ's and relaxing with family and friends.

Favorite holiday: Christmas. I love seeing the joy on my kid's faces, when they open their gifts.

Favorite meal: I absolutely love a perfectly cooked (rare) steak, with scallops, rice and broccoli.

Favorite junk food: Who doesn't love Twinkies? It truly is the SWEETEST COMEBACK EVER!!!!

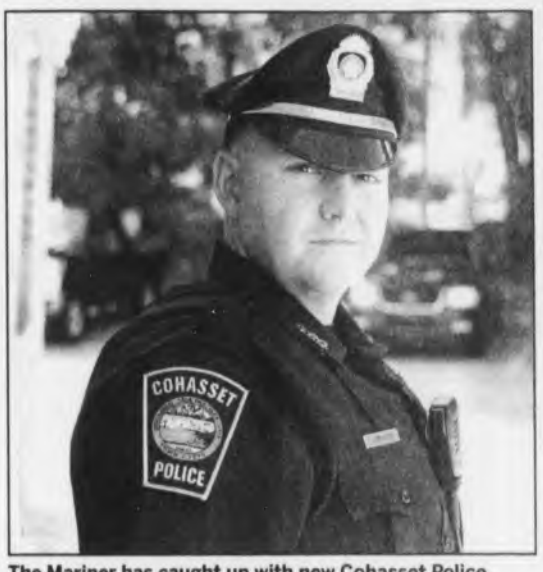
Best book: "Lone Survivor, The Eyewitness Account of Operation Redwing" and "The Last Heroes of Seal Team 10." Phenomenal book!!!!!

Best movie: Hands down: "Backdraft." Great lineup of actors and actresses.

Best TV show: No doubt about it, "Law and Order" (Original Series).

Best musician: Kenney Chesney.

Pet peeve: Not being thorough, when resources are available to be.



Fun fact: I love vacationing, specifically cruises. They're so much fun. You always meet someone new.

Goal: I'd like to be a Chief some day.

Person I'd like to meet: Kenny Chesney.

Biggest worry: Not being able to provide for my family.

Best part of Cohasset: The beach and ocean. I love being around the water.

The Mariner has caught up with new Cohasset Police Officer Robert W. Lagimoniere. If you see Officer Lagimoniere around town, be sure to tell him that you spotted him in Picture This! COURTESY PHOTO

PSO FUNDRAISING

Gift-wrap sale is under way

Students will deliver orders in mid-November. All funds raised are spent directly on students through teacher grants and enrichment programs.

The main gold of the Cohasset PSO is to maximize students' education experience. The PSO funds programs and grants that provide hand-on experiences that support and enrich the lessons learned in the classrooms.

Frustrated by the drug store wrapping paper last holiday season? Not to worry, the Innisbrook Wrapping Paper sale is back. Stock up, as we won't be offering the nice, thick, high-quality paper again for a couple of years. See Osgood or Deer Hill neighbors for a catalog and to place an order. People may also shop online at Innisbrook.com with the school code: 105257. The sale will take place through Oct. 10. Students will deliver orders in mid-November. All funds raised are spent directly on students through teacher grants and enrichment programs.

The first Cohasset PSO Holiday Boutique Fundraiser will take place Nov. 16 at Deer Hill School. The PSO is currently looking for vendors to participate in this community shopping event. For a vendor application or for more information, Mary Fran Olson at CohPSO@gmail.com.

JUMPED OFF BRIDGE

Buck was not able to be saved

A five-point buck that jumped off the Border Street bridge on Monday night (Sept. 30) and swam off had to be put down early Tuesday afternoon after the animal was pulled from the mud off Suppa Island in the Gulf River near Blackhorse Lane, police said.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said cars that were traveling both ways across the bridge came upon the buck about 10:30 p.m. It had apparently stopped, became frozen in the headlights, panicked and then jumped off the bridge toward the Gulf River.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy went to the scene but could not find the animal.

At 10 a.m. the next morning, police received a call about a deer stuck in the water at low tide. and could not get out.

The Cohasset Harbormaster located the deer by boat, which was across from the last house on Blackhorse Lane.

A landscaper who was working in the area provided police with a rope that was used to lasso its antlers.

Detective James McLean, Sergeant Garrett Hunt, and Officer Gregory Taylor pulled the deer to shore where it was clear the animal's back legs were in bad shape, police said.

Police contacted Dr. Fawn Stevenson of Crazy Paws on Pleasant Street and the Animal Rescue League. Stevenson responded along with veterinary technicians Brian Michaels and Katia Stevenson.

Dr. Stevenson said the buck, which had a broken jaw, had also sustained a spinal injury paralyzing its hind legs and could not be salvaged. The deer was given morphine and a sedative so its injuries could be assessed, she said.

"Unfortunately, the deer had no ability to move so it was given a euthanasia solution," she said.

Stevenson, who served as director of the New England Wildlife Center for a couple of years and worked in wildlife conservation before attending veterinary school, said the Animal Rescue League arrived and took the deer to Angel View Pet Crematory in Middleboro where it was cremated.

She said likely the deer did not break its back when it jumped into the water or it would have sunk. The injury probably occurred when the deer, full of adrenalin, was thrashing about in the mud overnight.

Solicitor complaints add up

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police received several complaints last week about Verizon solicitors coming to their doors in the evening hours when it is almost dark. There was a host of complaints from the housing complex for senior citizens off Elm Street behind the station. Police said the solicitors, who are contractors selling FIOS for Verizon, have been warned not to solicit into the evening or their permits would be pulled. Acting Chief William Quigley said he planned to talk to the Cohasset Housing Authority about installing signage stating soliciting is prohibited in the complex.

MVA

At 3:14 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 23), police responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) across from Cohasset Imports. A 2006 BMW operated by a 45-year-old Scituate man was slowing for southbound traffic when his BMW was struck in the rear by 2007 Nissan Maxima, operated by a 28-year-old Weymouth man. The Nissan was towed and the Weymouth man was cited for following too closely.

Allegations

Police are looking into allegations of harassment reported by an elderly Cohasset woman involving a 76-year-old Cohasset man. The alleged harassment took place in the area of S. Main and Summer streets and was reported on Monday morning (Sept. 23).

Phone scam

A Pond Street resident reported to police on Monday (Sept. 23) that a caller with a foreign accent whose caller ID number was all zeroes, asked questions about the resident's bank and credit card accounts. The resident hung up but wanted the incident logged. Police said these scammers are now calling the 383 exchange and urge folks not to provide any personal information.

Towed

An officer pulled over a 2010 Honda van with expired registration at around 6:36 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 26) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway by the Smith Appliance building. Scituate Collision was called to tow the van because the registration had expired. Police can tell if the registration has expired by the color of the sticker on the license plate. The 34-year-old Scituate man operating the Honda was picked up by his wife. Police said the man's registration is non-renewable due to outstanding excise taxes. The Registry of Motor Vehicles links registration and license renewals to outstanding excise taxes and outstanding ticket fines.

Trench

Police notified National Grid that their contractor doing the utility work on Ripley Road had done a shoddy job by leaving a shallow trench open along the length of Ripley Road overnight on Friday (Sept. 27). The police placed cones out to alert bicyclists and motorists. The trench was repaired the next day.

Homeless

A 62-year-old homeless man from Scituate, who has been living in his car, was provided medical attention and transported to South Shore Hospital by the fire department after he walked into the police station at 4:10 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 28) complaining of not feeling well, police said.

Vandalism

Police are investigating a vandalized mailbox on Nichols Road that was reported by the homeowner on Saturday (Sept. 28) around 8:40 a.m. The homeowner was not having problems with anyone in the neighborhood so it appears to be a random act, police said.

Phone scam

A Wheelwright Farm resident notified police on Saturday (Sept. 28) around 9:30 a.m. about a scam attempt. The caller asked the 78-year-old Cohasset man to wire the taxes on a lottery check he was told he had won and they would then send him his winnings. The Cohasset man recognized it was a scam and reported the call to police.

Rock thrown

A female motorist notified police that as she was coming down Sohier Street from Route 3A her car was hit by a rock or ball that appeared to come out of the woods on her left near Fairoaks Lane. Police checked the area and did not find anyone. The incident was reported at 1:55 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 28).

Scituate man injured in fall

Govt. shutdown sidelines OSHA

A 32-year-old Scituate man doing tree work at a residence on Border Street suffered severe traumatic injuries Wednesday morning (Oct. 2) when the harness he was wearing failed and he fell 30 to 40 feet to the ground, police said.

Police responded to a 9-1-1 call at 9:45 a.m. Police said a Total Tree Co. of Cohasset was removing trees at 136 Border St.

Police said the victim was treated at the scene and taken by Cohasset Fire Department ambulance to South Shore Hospital.

Acting Chief William Quigley said it is standard procedure to contact OSHA's (Occupational Health and Safety Administration) Braintree office when there is a work-related accident but they could not get a hold of anyone due to the partial shutdown of the federal government. OSHA is a federal agency that regulates workplace safety and health

"Our detectives investigated on their own, took photographs and froze the scene for a couple of hours," Quigley said. Later in the day, police heard back from OSHA, which said only 200 people are on duty nationwide so they were unable to respond. OSHA asked for a copy of the police report.

"The government shutdown has affected us in this instance," Quigley said.

Cohasset man charged with attempted burglary

Cohasset police said Thursday (Sept. 26) a 911 caller reported seeing a man attempting to enter a neighbor's unoccupied home on Ledgewood Drive. Police said the caller saw the man walking around the house and attempting to open doors.

Patrol officers and detectives responded and located the suspect. Police said the neighbor identified the man as the person he saw attempting to enter his neighbor's house.

When confronted the man, later identified as Keith Porter-Loomis, 27, of 268 Cedar St., Cohasset, said his aunt had dropped him off in the neighborhood and that he was looking for his lost dog. Porter-Loomis had a dog leash draped around his neck, police said.

Officers located the aunt who denied dropping him off in the neighborhood and told police that he had a drug problem, police said.

Porter-Loomis initially gave the name and date of birth of another man, police said. During the follow up investigation, the officers confronted Porter-Loomis about the name and he subsequently provided his real name.

During a search of his person, police found a pair of latex gloves. Officers located the Peter-Loomis' vehicle parked on Wood Way. Witnesses from the neighborhood told officers that he had been observed attempting to enter a separate house on Brewster Road. Officers are conducting a follow up investigation into this matter and additional charges may result.

Porter-Loomis was charged with: attempt to commit a crime to wit: B&E daytime with intent to commit a felony; possession of burglarious tools (latex gloves); and providing a false name after arrest.

Board issues budget message

Sets the tone for fiscal year

"We have $38 million we have to expend this year— from that, we want to make sure we're delivering the same level of services and fairly compensating employees."
Selectman Steve Gaumer

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If there's one thing the selectmen seem to agree on, it's the town budget.

The Board of Selectmen voted 5-0 on Tuesday, Oct. 1 to approve a budget message to the town of Cohasset.

It was a night of unanimity as the selectmen voted to establish budget priorities for the upcoming 2015 Fiscal Year.

Selectman Steve Gaumer drafted the budget message, and the rest of the board read through the document Tuesday night, offering suggestions and minor edits to some of the wording. Otherwise, the board was in agreement on sending a unified message to town departments and boards.

The budget message presents an outline of the town's priorities without getting into "the nitty gritty" line items, Gaumer explained, rather offering direction of how the budget should be utilized.

"The purpose and goal of the budget message is to set the agenda broadly," said Gaumer. "We have $38 million we have to expend this year— from that, we want to make sure we're delivering the same level of services and fairly compensating employees."

The budget message includes six areas of priority:

1. To continue to adhere to the town's financial management policy, approved by the spring 2013 Annual Town Meeting, which includes building and maintaining a stabilization fund balance and capital stabilization fund balance, achieving and maintaining an AAA bond rating, and identifying and funding a solution for the town's outstanding liability for Other Post-Employment Benefits;

2. To use the maximum available tax levy limit;

3. To budget for the delivery of town-wide services equivalent to those of the preceding fiscal year, a.k.a. a level services budget;

4. Establish a Human Resources function for all town employees;

5. Budget for staffing consistent with the FY14 approved budget, pending resolution of the HR function;

6. Allocate the FY13 budget surplus in accordance with the town's fiscal policies.

The board also discussed adding a seventh item involving the renovation of Town Hall. The town has a renovation study committee exploring options, but the board pondered whether that matter should be part of the budget message.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that he was reluctant to include the renovation in the message, since it is not part of the town's five-year capital plan. He also wanted to explore what grants might be available from Community Preservation funds.

"It's an item for Annual Town Meeting," said Koed.

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore suggested the board make a "strategic statement" indicating that the renovation is a priority for the town.

Pescatore also commended the selectmen for issuing a budget message.

"It makes everybody's job a lot clearer," said Pescatore, adding, "It's a big step for the town; it's a very good direction."

The selectmen also thanked Gaumer for preparing the message.

"It's excellent work," said Koed.

Implementing HR

Adding a human resources function to the town was a large portion of discussion Tuesday night. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski had the town's labor counsel, Brian Magner, before the board to discuss the next steps for adding HR.

"This is a top priority," said Milanoski.

"There hasn't been a person solely dedicated to HR" in Cohasset, said Magner.

There was discussion on having the town and schools share an HR person, the way the town's Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, divides his workload between the two entities.

Milanoski said that he has had preliminary discussions on this with Cohasset's Superintendent, Barbara Cataldo. "I will continue to foster those," he said.

The topic of HR will be an agenda item at an upcoming Board of Selectmen meeting.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Brown appointed to Cable Advisory Board

Cohasset's Cable Community Television Advisory Board has one new member.

The Board of Selectmen amended their agenda Tuesday night to accommodate Merle Brown's request to join the cable committee. The item was not on the night's agenda, but Acting Town Michael Milanoski read an email he received from Brown during the meeting and asked the selectmen to consider voting on the membership.

The selectmen voted unanimously to appoint Brown to the committee, which has a vacancy.

Milanoski said this quick vote was a "good example of efficiency in government." Brown's email was sent at 8:24 p.m., said Milanoski; his membership was voted on at 10:22 p.m.

"I don't think that's ever happened before," Milanoski said.

The committee is still seeking additional members, including the treasurer position. Founding member Paul Carlson, who currently serves as treasurer, was up for reappointment for this position, but the appointment failed during a 2-2 selectmen's vote last month. Carlson asked to be allowed to continue to serve temporarily until a new treasurer is found.

Those interested in serving on the committee should send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen's office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at tconnors@cohassetma.org.

agreed to match the PSO's fundraising efforts dollar for dollar in order to meet the entire $160,000 for the project. The PSO raised most of the funds between February and June and hired playground vendor John LaRue from Big Toys and installer Peter Bethanis from Probuilt Construction.

Brendan St. John, a Cohasset mason and parent, volunteered his time to help install the playground's tables, benches, and dedication patio.

Arnold said that CPC members were also in attendance for the grand unveiling, as was St. John, who "took on a lot" in terms of the project.

"He helped us tremendously," Arnold said of St. John.

The town's Dept. of Public Works (DPW) and Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce also helped with the playground's installation.

"Those people are the unsung heroes," said Tulio. "I can't thank them enough."

Volunteers also helped the playground committee spread woodchips over Labor Day weekend.

"People dropped everything and started helping us out. That was very nice," Tulio said. "I'm very impressed with the parents, the school, the community and residents of Cohasset for their response and support for this project."

The new playground has already proven to be a hit with students, who have been itching to use the equipment since school started in early September. Arnold said that kids have been allowed to use most of the equipment over the past few weeks, although the playground was not completely finished.

"When we were essentially wrapped up, the day we got permission from the manufacturer and installer to open [the playground] to the children, Ralph and I went with ribbon" and had an opening ceremony for each grade, said Arnold.

Sixth graders were also invited to their own special play day and Popsicle party, "because they had been involved in all the communication, survey, and canvassing" when the project first started two years ago, Arnold explained. "They felt a little shortchanged since it took a while [for the project] to come to fruition."

The new playground was designed with safety and physical fitness in mind, featuring some challenging equipment that is also ADA-compliant, meaning it meets government standards for those with disabilities.

Monday marked "the official opening," said Arnold, for the "sponsors, donors, parents, and organizations that had supported us during construction of the project and fundraising."

The new playground was designed with safety and physical fitness in mind, featuring some challenging equipment that is also ADA-compliant, meaning it meets government standards for those with disabilities. Some new features include a climbing wall and checker/chessboard game tabletops.

"The playground addresses upper body strength, coordination, and balance, which really makes it challenging for [students] in a really healthy way," said Arnold. "We were mindful of keeping it challenging, but safe."

Deer Hill principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara praised the playground renovation committee for a job well done.

"I'm overwhelmed by the efforts of the community on behalf of the students at Deer Hill, and all the other children who will be able to play on this playground. The committee is to be commended on so many things, but I think the main thing is the inclusive way in which they compiled its design," said deChiara. "It's got something for everyone; it's healthy, it's fun, and it's safe."

And the best part?

Said deChiara, "Everybody loves it!"

It's "gratifying" that children are enjoying their new play space, said Arnold.

The two-year project "took a lot time, energy and coordination," she added. "The fact that we were able to put it together in a relatively short period of time so [the students] could enjoy it this year is exciting, and something we're proud of."

Homework Center open at the library

The Homework Center at Paul Pratt Memorial Library has reopened for the school year and will meet every Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Students in grades 3 and up are encouraged to come to the library to complete their homework in a supervised setting. Tutoring is available from Cohasset High School National Honor Society students and light refreshments will be provided.

The Homework Center is funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

AROUND TOWN

Scout plans car wash Sunday

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Welcome, October

Hi there, Cohasset! October has arrived with a continued string of awesome weather and beautiful fall colors all around. I hope that you have been able to spend some time outdoors and take it all in.

Send in some photos if you have some to share of your fall adventures whether it is playing in the leaves, apple-picking, walking the corn-mazes or a celebration shot.

Around Town is a wonderful way to share these along with town events, birthday news, congratulatory messages and school news. Send it all to aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com

Senior events

Don't miss these wonderful ctivities and programs will take place at 3 North Main St. unless noted. Call 781-383-9112 for more information.

Brown Bag Lunch and Movie - "The Long Walk Home," starring Sissy Spacek and Whoopi Goldberg, will be shown on Monday, Oct. 21. When Odessa Cotter honors the 1955 Montgomery bus boycott by walking the 9 miles to and from work to her job as a housekeeper, her boss Miriam Thompson offers her a ride, defying her racist husband and the powerful town council. Bring a brown bag lunch. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide soft-drinks and popcorn.

Safe Driving Seminar - Monday, Oct. 28, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sponsored by Sherriff Bellotti's office and AARP, this class will cover defensive driving techniques and how to adjust one's driving for age related changes. This is not a driving test. This is a classroom program to help maintain safety on the road. Reservations required. Call 781-383-9112.

Halloween Lunch - Thursday, Oct. 31, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Join others for festive activities and a "spooktacular" meal.

Car wash

Eagle Scout candidate Brodie Jackisch has planned a car wash on Sunday (Oct. 6) to raise money for his Eagle Scout project, which is to make a permanent granite countertop for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The car wash is scheduled for 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. in front of Good Sports off Route 3A. Helping Brodie will be friends, family and fellow Troop 28 Boy Scouts.

We all know that our cars need a good wash – so be sure to plan your day Sunday to include this fundraiser!

Gulf Association

Mark your calendar for the Gulf Association Annual Meeting and Presentation will take place at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9, at the Lightkeeper's Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane. This event is open to the public. RSVP by Oct. 1, to katiefcutler@gmail.com or thegulfassociation@gmail.com.

The Gulf is one of our most beautiful environment assets. This meeting should be a very worthwhile one to attend!

Trail race, walk

Calling all runners and walkers! The sixth annual Discover the Woods 5K Trail Race and 1 Mile Fun Run / Walk is on Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm. The 5k Race begins at 9 a.m. and the 1 mile fun run will be at 10 a.m.

The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 3 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers, and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook, and a pond. There are prizes for top finishers and everyone gets a cool organic cotton produce bag. Registration is $25 for adults, $15 for children ages 12 and under. Signup online at: hollyhillfarm.org. The races benefit the Frank H. White Scholarship Fund that makes school field trips and summer camp experiences possible for those in need of financial assistance.

Gift-wrap

Frustrated by the drug store wrapping paper last holiday season? Not to worry, the Innisbrook Wrapping Paper sale is back. Stock up, as the PSO won't be offering the nice, thick, high-quality paper again for a couple of years. See Osgood or Deer Hill neighbors for a catalog and to place an order. People may also shop online at Innisbrook.com with the school code: 105257. The sale will take place through Oct. 10. Students will deliver orders in mid-November. All funds raised are spent directly on students through teacher grants and enrichment programs.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Friday was awesome!

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

Truth be told, I could probably write a book just on the events of last Friday, easily the most jam-packed and incredible school day of the entire year. Between the final day of Spirit Week, the Pep Rally, the Homecoming football game, and the Homecoming Dance, Friday brought with it plenty of excitement and emotion.

Seniors entered school last Friday clad in all white, while underclassmen formed a sea of navy blue. The entire day culminated just after lunch, with the 2013 Pep Rally.

Five hundred-plus bodies packed the bleachers of the CHS gym. Roars and chants erupted from the volcanic crowd, and the energy seemed to take up every inch of space in the arena. Each grade (including the eighth-graders, who were invited for the show) stood in their own theme-decorated bleachers; the freshmen rocked the Jungle Theme; sophomores went retro with a Disco theme; Harry Potter was the call of the juniors; and the senior class prepared for liftoff with an Outer Space theme.

Led by the student MCs (Seniors Tommy Powers and Yours Truly), and aided by senior class advisors Stephanie Moriarty and Nina Berkowitz, the Pep Rally was centered on "Minute to Win It" games. The games ranged from obscure challenges, such as "Bucket Head," in which contestants tried to shoot ping-pong balls into buckets placed on their partner's head, and "Yo-Yo Ma," where participants must use a yo-yo tied to their waist to knock over cans placed on the ground, to more common contests such as Musical Chairs. The Pep Rally drew to a close with the Spirit Week video, which was masterfully put together by Mr. Adam Sasso's Video Production class. With plenty of laughter, noisy cheering, and school spirit, calling the Pep Rally a success would be an understatement.

After the sunset, the real fun began. The Skippers football squad coasted to an easy 42-12 victory over Hull, and now stand at 3-0. At halftime of the game, the Homecoming Court was brought out onto the field, where two very special students were crowned royalty, as voted by the Senior Class. Shout out to Tim Cavanaro, the Homecoming King, and our Homecoming Queen, Christina Tedeschi!

After the game concluded, students came in swaths to the cafeteria for the final event of Spirit Week. The Homecoming Dance proved to be fantastic, with flashing lights and blaring music sending off a fantastic week at CHS.

I apologize for discoursing so much on last week's events, there was just so much to cover! Monday morning saw many a fatigued CHSer, with the clichéd "Monday Blues" in full effect. Truthfully, there is a bit of a "What Now?" feeling after such a tremendously active Spirit Week. Nonetheless, life at CHS moves on.

Next up for most students is hitting the books, and enjoying the warm weather while it lasts. Fall Sports teams are hitting the midpoints of their seasons, and CHS's plethora of clubs are beginning to meet more regularly. As for seniors, the college process has really began to heat up, with Early Action deadlines fast approaching.

Well Cohasset, that is all for now! I hope you all enjoyed Spirit Week and Homecoming as much as we did! See you next time, and remember, keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

FRIDAYS AT FIRST PARISH

Family Game Night to start

First Parish on Cohasset Common announces a series of family-oriented activities with dinner under the banner of "Fridays at First Parish". The first of these evenings will commence on Friday, October 18th at 5:30 p.m., and will conclude in May, 2014 (approximately every 6 weeks, adjusted to accommodate school vacations and holidays). Activities will be designed to help families get centered after a typically hectic week of work, child care, commuting and after-school sports — and will give parents a "free " night (free of meal preparation, free to do some socializing, and no need for a sitter!)

Families will gather in our Parish House between 5:30-8 p.m. on designated Fridays.

Communally-served dinners (i.e. Pasta, salad, juice/water and cookies — no nuts) will be prepared and served by parish members. Adults are welcome to provide their own beverage of choice.

Babysitting will be provided for infants, while children age 2 and above are encouraged to participate with parents, siblings, and peers.

Game Night activities will be coordinated by members of our youth group — you are encouraged to bring your favorite board game.

Babysitting will be provided for infants, while children age 2 and above are encouraged to participate with parents, siblings, and peers.

Among other evenings will be a Family Dance Night, a Dress-Alike night, and a Favorite Stuffed Animal Party night, in addition to the ever-popular Village caroling.

So mark your calendars, and remember six Fs: Friday — Fun — Free — Food — Family — Friends!

Partnership for Kids Bowling Tournament

Sons of the American Legion Squadron 118, and Children's Hospital, Boston, will host the Partnership For Kids Bowling Tournament from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 26, at South Shore Country Club, Hingham. The tournament is open to all. Cost is $20 per person/$100 per team.

Send payment and registration forms to: Sons of the American Legion, P.O. Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. Make checks payable to: The Sons of the American Legion. Confirmation of entry forms will be sent upon receipt of completed registration form. Must be paid in full to secure registration. Call 617-697-2276 for more information.

GIMME SHELTER

This week is all about the kids

PAULA J. FATERSIK

When you enter a room full of young kittens, like the group pictured here, within minutes, there is a mix of young meows, baby cries, and every imaginable pitch of purrs.
COURTESY PHOTO

It is not only colorful leaves that are showing up at our doorways and around our homes! Fall is upon us and the numerous arrivals of kittens here at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, with and without their moms, are presenting a colorful array both in the shelter and at our foster homes.

Really, there seems to be no end to the cute factor, the need for love and affection and the varied personalities and dramatic markings of the kittens who are still being rescued and brought to us for safe keeping as they await their forever homes.

There is no end to the entertainment. When you enter a room full of young kittens, within minutes, there is a mix of young meows, baby cries, and every imaginable pitch of purrs. Some are like revved up motors, others are mellow and content. All have one thing in common: The wish to be with that special person or family who will give them a place in their family and a big space in their hearts.

The kittens you see this week have varied backgrounds, wonderful markings, unique features, and range in age from 2 - 6 months. Tiger and Bengal mixes, Black and white, Tortoiseshell, in some cases double pawed, the selection is amazing. From nursing babies to playful kids, there are options for any loving home. A few of the kittens are shy, needing someone to bond with, others are so full of energy you need to be ready for playtime galore, some are happy to sit quietly with you and then there are the "all in ones" who have all these qualities wrapped up in one furry little body.

You may be looking at Jack and Bobby, two sweet baby brothers, or Kiki, a reserved, purr filled 6 month old with a total love of belly rubs once she knows you, Zoey, a torte princess who is enjoying playtime, Buttons and Lana, two svelte girls, both long and short haired with gorgeous eyes who would love a peaceful home where they can feel safe and cared for, or Jed, a tiger and Bengal mix who is very energetic and independent. They all need forever homes that suit their little, and in some cases big personalities. If you are planning to add a new little face, or faces to your home, just come in to see the many little ones who really need your love, attention, warmth, someone to cozy up with and show them that there is a happy ending for all.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information about all of the HSAR kittens. They are a varied and special group so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets.

The kittens you see this week have varied backgrounds, wonderful markings, unique features, and range in age from 2 - 6 months.

Kitten supplies are needed and we are grateful to all who have taken the time to help us in this continuous mission to save them and find loving homes. Canned and dry kitten food, KMR and soft bedding are always appreciated.

We have a new request and are hoping for help with special dietary needs. Currently, some of our adult cats are carrying a few extra pounds so if you are thinking of donating dry food to the shelter, an adult weight control formula would be a great option! Given the space constraints in the rooms that the cats share, they are not able to get as much exercise as in a home so we are trying to watch their food intake for optimal health. The perfect solution would be forever homes and we continue working on that for them.

Spay Day is fast approaching for the current month. On Thursday, October 9, The Animal Rescue League will be at the shelter If you or someone you know has a cat who needs to be spayed or neutered, please call Casey at 781-925-3121 to schedule an appointment.

Two injured in Route 3A accident

On Monday, Sept. 30, at 9:15 a.m. Cohasset police responded to a motor vehicle crash with injuries on Route 3A near the Cohasset MBTA Commuter Rail Station.

The driver of a 2012 Dodge minivan, a 33-year-old Cohasset woman, along with the driver of a 2001 GMC dump truck, who is 43-years-old and from Scituate, were both injured in the crash and transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth with non-life threatening injuries.

Witnesses stated that the driver of the minivan rear-ended the dump truck at a high rate of speed. The dump truck was stopped in the northbound lane of Route 3A attempting to make a left turn into a landscaping business.

Traffic both north and south on Route 3A was jammed for approximately 30 minutes while the accident was cleared.

Officer Paul Wilson helps direct traffic around the accident scene on Monday morning near the train station. COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset Cabaret 'Curtains Up' coming!

Cohasset Cabaret "Curtains Up" will be performed Friday, Nov. 8 and Saturday, Nov. 9, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. Social hour at 7 p.m. will be followed by the show at 8 p.m.

Those who enjoy musicals such as "Le Mis," " Hello Dolly" and more songs from the theater, will love this show. Those who enjoy hearing songs like "Broadway Baby," "Don't Rain on my Parade" and "Orange Colored Skies," come on down.

Back again directing this year's cabaret will be Douglas Trudeau. Trudeau is known to South Shore audiences as the founder and director of the Scituate-based Showstoppers organization.

"Curtain's Up" will be an up tempo musical revue that will provide a variety of numbers from Broadway and movie musicals. The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy, and toe-tapping dancing.

People can try their luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "cabaret style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.

Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-413-7540 for more information.

OUR VIEW

Think 'Pink' this month

Don't worry. It's not a horrible printing mistake. Today's edition is indeed pink!

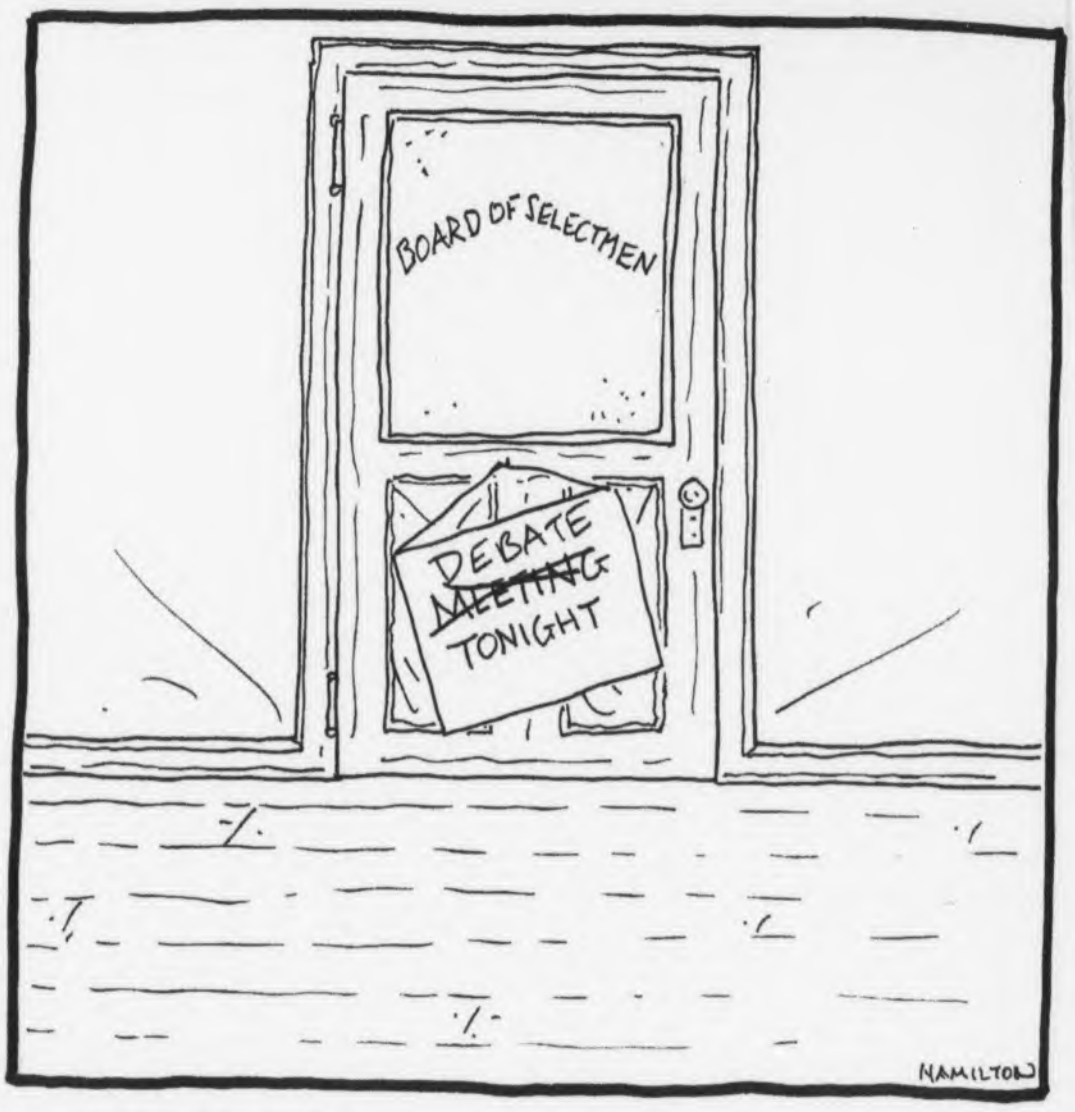
Pink has become the symbol of all those whose lives have been touched by breast cancer, reaching far beyond the disease's victims — both women, and in rare cases, men — and into the lives of their friends and families.

Pink reminds us of the research still needed to cure a disease that takes nearly 40,000 lives in this country every year.

So we're tying a familiar pink ribbon on our front page as we kick off Breast Cancer Awareness Month with our annual "Paint It All Pink" campaign in conjunction with our parent company, GateHouse Media New England.

In this issue and on our website, you'll find stories about the challenges faced by patients and families affected by a breast cancer diagnosis, cutting edge research that offers hope for personalized treatment, ways you can help, what support services are offered in our region to families living with breast cancer and details about the work of Susan G. Komen Massachusetts.

In October, we hope to continue to bring you news on the people who are beating breast cancer in our communities, and features on groups and individuals who continue to contribute to the cause through fundraising efforts.



Like all diseases, it takes effort to fight for breast cancer awareness and the early detection that has saved countless lives. So, we ask you, our readers, to join us in that fight during the month of October and to help us "Paint It All Pink."

Last year, GateHouse Media New England donated nearly $14,000 to Komen MA, and again this year GHM Massachusetts will donate 10 cents from every pink newspaper sold in stores to Susan G. Komen Massachusetts. In addition, $5 from any new or renewed EZpay subscription during October will be donated. GHM will also donate 10 percent of the gross sales of pink advertising packages to Komen MA.

So you see, we're proud to do our part to support those families in our communities who are dealing with breast cancer. Now, we hope you do yours, too — whether you participate in a walk, make a donation, drive a neighbor to a doctor's appointment or maybe just sit and listen.

As we head into October, don't be surprised to see more splashes of pink across both our newspaper and our website. Because we plan to bring you more!

To see dozens of stories and videos from across Eastern Massachusetts already on our website and to share your thoughts, go to wickedlocal.com/pink.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Perspective on Selectman Quigley's outburst

Thank you for your calling on Selectman Karen Quigley to apologize for her outbursts and intemperate language at the Tuesday, Sept. 29th Selectman's meeting. Our town and our political process are the worse for her actions.

For those who were not there, or who do not know the background, perhaps some perspective is in order. Several years ago when the future of the tide gate at Cat Dam was before the Conservation Commission then Selectman Quigley was applying pressure to support her favored position to permanently open the tide gate. This was opposed by the overwhelming majority of the affected residents who asserted that the result would severely impact the livability of their homes.

As a Commissioner I did not believe that the evidence produced justified the permanent opening of the tide gate and consequential diminution of the affected residents' property and so told Selectman Quigley. I further told her that I believed that the Conservation Commission should enforce the rules and regulations fairly and equitably for all residents without regard for political considerations. That was the point where she emphatically said that I was wrong and that I should be an advocate (presumably for her favored position).

This understanding of the use of Conservation Commission authority is disturbing and leads to the use of government power to reward political allies and punish foes. It is worth noting the Conservation Commission has enormous power over the homes and property of Cohasset citizens. To allow politics to enter into Commission decisions is an affront to the principle of fair and equal treatment under the law.

It is understandable that Selectman Quigley was greatly perturbed by having her position revealed in a public forum but that was her clearly expressed position. I stand by my words as expressed at the Board of Selectmen's meeting.

Theft victim shares his story

As the owner of the business on Ripley Road who was mentioned in the Police Beat on Page 3 of the Sept. 27th Mariner, I feel I need to fill in a few details of the theft that took place at my store.

Here are the events as they took place: The UPS driver dropped off a delivery of five boxes to my store. As I have done a hundred times before with a large delivery, I asked him to leave it by my back door with the intent of bringing it in a box at a time to deal with it. The delivery was dropped off at about 1:30 p.m. I went out to begin bringing them in about 2:30 p.m. As I had counted and signed for the delivery, I immediately realized that two boxes containing a variety of vitamins and supplements were missing. After searching all around the area, I called the police. The police took a report and conducted their own search of the area. At that time I gave the officer a rough estimate of the wholesale value of approximately $400. For the items stolen. After I went over the invoices in more detail I realized that the items stolen actually had a wholesale value of close to $1,000, and of course a larger retail value.

I do have insurance, but with a significant deductible, which eventually may help somewhat. The bottom line is that I operate a small local business, and this is a significant hit. This has severely impacted my cash flow and my ability to stay in business is actually in question.

I think the part that hurts the most is that now I need to change a routine that I have employed since I opened. I will no longer be able to leave boxes outside, even for a short time in broad daylight.

If anyone has any information about this, please give me a call. I'd really like to get to the bottom of this. Also, please be on the lookout for one or more very healthy hoodlums, or someone trying to sell you some Vitamin C "really cheap."

Transparency, accountability and good governance lacking

PETER DECAPRIO

It should surprise no one that groups were coordinating campaign activities against certain candidates, especially front-runners — it was a campaign after all. What should surprise people (or maybe not) is who is involved in the coordination.

Fred Koed, chairman of our board of selectmen, has recently stood against "election fraud" and keeping "politics" out of our debates. He has criticized the efforts of citizens who organized to advocate for Bill Quigley for Police Chief, saying in his prepared remarks against the appointment: "This evening is about preserving the integrity of the democratic process itself."

Mr. Koed wants you to believe he stands on lofty principle. Nothing is further from the truth. Through a public records request, emails were obtained showing a pattern of communication among Mr. Koed and former town manager Mike Coughlin, Karen Quigley, Tanna Kasperowicz and Peter Pratt, a former resident and selectman now living in California. The emails call into question Mr. Koed's judgment and sincerity.

On April 10th, 2013, one month before the selectmen's election, Coughlin sent an email to Mr. Koed, Ms. Kasperowicz and Mr. Pratt that directed attention to a Facebook endorsement by Scott Brown of then-candidate for selectman Bill Burnett. Coughlin's email suggested the group publicize Brown's endorsement of Burnett as being highly irregular in a local election.

Coughlin's email prompted an immediate response from Mr. Pratt, a close friend and confidante of Mr. Koed. Worried about Mr. Burnett's momentum, Pratt wrote an email to Koed, Kasperowicz, candidate Karen Quigley, selectman Martha Gjesteby and candidate Russell Bonetti encouraging them to not call attention to Mr. Brown's endorsement, noting that Brown was popular in Cohasset and the endorsement, if public, "could drive big numbers for Burnett."

It should surprise no one that groups were coordinating campaign activities against certain candidates, especially front-runners — it was a campaign after all. What should surprise people (or maybe not) is who is involved in the coordination. Why does Mr. Koed see no issue with a facile relationship with Mr. Coughlin, a manager he once fired, and now a plaintiff in a highly divisive action against the town? Why is any town official engaging Mr. Coughlin at all?

Clearly Mr. Coughlin feels comfortable enough in the relationship to talk campaign strategy with Mr. Koed, Ms. Quigley and Ms. Gjesteby. What is most troubling is that Mr. Koed is now point man for the town in the action against Mr. Coughlin — meaning he

POLITICAL PERCH

Breaking the logjam of Cohasset politics

KEVIN MCCARTHY

A smaller three person BOS would most likely improve the communication, collegiality and dialogue between our BOS members.

Logjam in the Cohasset polity continues unbounded. Rather than add to the litany of our slow decline into partisan dystopia I prefer to focus on ways we can lift ourselves from the mud we seemed mired in and consider solutions or new paths that can return us to a more positive and enlightened state of political discourse and functioning. Among other possibilities, a new approach to the structure of our Board of Selectman (hereafter BOS) might be helpful.

We should consider reducing the number of selectman to three from our current number of five. Approximately 60 percent of the towns in Massachusetts who operate under a BOS have three board members – the others having five. Our neighbor Hingham functions very well with a three member BOS. When you have a logjam sometimes you need to shake things up and try new approaches to break up the stalemate. Converting to a three member BOS may well do just that for Cohasset.

This could be implemented fairly easily. We would hold an election for all three BOS seats with the candidate who receives the most votes initially serving a three-year term, the candidate receiving the second highest votes initially serving a two-year term with the third place candidate initially serving a one-year term. Thereafter each year we would elect one BOS member for a three-year term starting with the initial third placed candidate and so on. In Hingham the Chair each year is automatically the selectman who is up for re-election; lessening the potential for factious disputation over who will be chair. Hingham recently completed a study comparing a three to a five member BOS and concluded their three member board was much better and they kept it. In 2003 Duxbury turned down a citizen's petition to increase their BOS from three to five.

A smaller three person BOS would most likely improve the communication, collegiality and dialogue between our BOS members. More importantly, fewer board members may well make the BOS itself less fractious and more inclined to make decisions which are in the best interests of Cohasset as opposed to the political group or faction which may have actively pushed for the election of a particular board member. As well, fewer board members with only one being elected each year would most likely force the winning candidate to appeal to a larger majority of Cohasset voters in order to win rather than a smaller faction when two seats are up with multiple candidates vying for the two seats. Of course, there is no guarantee of this as multiple candidates for a single seat could well lead to a less than majority factional candidate winning but with only one seat available the better winning political strategy would be to try appeal for a winning margin from the broader Cohasset community – and of course to later serve in the best interests of the broader Cohasset community.

Another change we might consider is going to a two-year BOS term as opposed to a three-year term. The shorter two year term has worked for our state and federal representative for some 300 years so why not for our BOS? The shorter term would force the board members to stay close to the community and its varied cultural and social interests as a new election would never be far away. This would not be overly burdensome in a small community like Cohasset. Closer and more frequent contact and communication between the BOS and the community at large can only be a good thing.

Finally, how about instituting a recall provision into our bylaws? The possibility of being recalled might constrain any ongoing and truly harmful dialogue or behavior deleterious to the higher aspirations and full potential of our community. However, the numerical bar to a citizen petition for recalling a BOS member should be set high in my view (at least 500 – maybe more) or it could defeats its own purpose and lead to further dysfunction.

The above are just a few thoughts about how we might assert ourselves as concerned citizens in the running of our government in this time of near political paralysis in Cohasset. The changes I briefly review above may not be the changes we need but the broader point is that the Cohasset town government is our government and this is our town and if things don't get better in terms of productive and beneficial town government then its proper to remind all concerned that the citizens can always exercise their natural and fundamental right to make a few changes to help guarantee a town government of the people, by the people and for the people.

COMMENTARY

Cohasset's Salem Witch Trials , circa 2013

PATRICE VOGELMAN

Like many of us who live in this beautiful community, I truly care about Cohasset. I believe it is important that we maintain stewardship of the natural resources Cohasset offers its residents — balancing the beauty with the needs and rights of homeowners.

For this reason, when a spot became available on the Conservation Commission, I readily applied to serve as a non-voting training associate on the committee (training associates serve for two years before becoming full voting commissioners).

I currently work full-time as a Project Manager for Verizon where my primary role is to simplify and streamline technical processes and information. For several years, in a prior position within Verizon, I worked in Regulatory Planning where I functioned as a liaison between Verizon and state and federal regulatory and legislative bodies. In this position, I worked with lawyers, customers, and regulators to negotiate and implement mutually agreeable solutions. I had hoped to be able to bring this regulatory experience to bear on the Conservation Commission since Massachusetts has over 100 pages of wetland rules and regulations.

On Sept. 3, I attended the BOS meeting where my appointment was to be made official. Imagine my shock and embarrassment when after Conservation Chairman Jack Creighton gave his recommendation to the Selectmen, a public and lengthy debate ensued as to my qualifications or lack thereof for the position.

Martha Gjesteby said she was disappointed that a few other candidates who seemed more qualified had not been contacted. The Selectmen ultimately decided to abstain from voting on my appointment until those candidates could be interviewed.

During the subsequent Sept. 24 BOS meeting, it came to light that those other candidates had been contacted and ultimately had agreed to serve on different committees. Therefore, during this second meeting, my appointment came up for an official vote. Given that the Selectmen's own demands had been satisfied regarding the other candidates, I was mystified when Martha Gjesteby and Karen Quigley voted no on my appointment and Fred Koed abstained. Since a tie vote is disapproval, my appointment was not approved.

The treatment that I received at the hands of these Selectmen smacked of the embarrassing partisanship shown when these same three gave Paul Carlson the bum's rush after he was highly recommended to the Cable Board. These appointment meetings are beginning to resemble the Salem Witch Trials where Selectmen Gjesteby, Quigley and Koed shame and dismiss candidates trying to uncover "hidden" agendas. It is becoming obvious that these three selectmen want nothing to do with anyone not handpicked by them — whether it be a volunteer, the town manager, or the Chief of Police.

With this witch hunt atmosphere they have created, who will want to volunteer their time and acumen to benefit the town?

And volunteering does benefit the town. We don't have a mayor and staff. We have more than 15 volunteer committees that assist the Town Manager who reports into five elected Selectmen. The last election many of the candidates ran unopposed. In terms of committees, right now, Cohasset continues to have multiple openings in its committees. Volunteering takes time and commitment. These committees are not awash with candidates. We all live very busy lives these days.

To the Selectmen, I recommend you lose the Salem Witch Trial approach to governance, stop looking backwards as a path forward, and embrace the value of what your community continues to offer you. Let's move forward rather than moving the clock back to 1692.

To the community at large, I recommend you continue to volunteer and not let the current dysfunctional leadership get you down.

Patrice Vogelman lives at 46 Black Rock Road.

SPEAKING FROM THE HEART

The Clear Bead

THE REV. JILL COWIE

And my heart experienced a free fall of connection between my sufferings, the marathon bombing suffering, with all suffering.

Sunday, Sept. 15, was an auspicious day in Boston. The street musicians were playing, the flowers were in bloom, and faces were lit with joy. Yom Kippur had just ended, concluding the 10 days Jewish people incline their hearts to God with repentance, prayer, charity, and resolution, and ask that they be sealed in the book of life for a good new year. The 10 days end with the cry, "hear or Israel, God is one" as joy erupts into song and dance. The city seemed to be celebrating such a new year.

Then I got to Copley Square. Normally teeming with movement, 2,000 people sat in silence, one huge heart opened by the presence of Zen priest, Thich Nhat Hanh. Rumi, the Sufi poet writes, "the clear bead in the center changes everything, there are no edges to my loving now." And that is what happened to me that Sunday. Thich Nhat Hanh said, "We breathe in and breathe out, and in that way we can stop the thinking, because the thinking can take us away from the here and now." A now that held both the vastness of outrage and pain of Syria, and the intimacy of sorrow of those killed and maimed only a few yards away the day of the marathon. And as I sat, I opened my heart. The air was pregnant with pause, the wind gentle in its caress, the sun warm in the earth beneath my folded legs, and the silence full with a presence that touched every cell of our collective bodies. The city was made quiet to the point that a car horn, a passing skateboard, a siren, seemed out of place.

"Enter your suffering," he said, "for in your suffering you will know the suffering of the nations." And my heart experienced a free fall of connection between my sufferings, the marathon bombing suffering, with all suffering. In the presence of this 86-year-old monk, no stranger himself to violence, I found the courage to hold the sorrow long enough to go beyond fear and feel within the 20 minutes we sat, an energetic swell of compassion followed by the serenity of peace; A clear bead in the center, no edges to my loving now.

According to Jill Botle Taylor, a neuroanatomist who studies the anatomy of the brain, I had managed to shut down the chatter of my left-brain to experience the deep inner peace of my right hemisphere. Taylor, who recovered beautifully from her own stroke, says that our ability to experience Nirvana or where ever meditation takes us is the product of circuitry. That we make the choice between being hard wired for war or hard wired for peace. The more we open up our right brain the more peaceful we will be. That idea is worth spreading. So I sit, every first and third Monday night at 7 p.m. in the sanctuary of First Parish. I hope you join me and help spread the peace.

Namaste

FOR THE RECORD

Unintended consequences

GREGORY MATHIS

According to a recent report by the State House News Service, "about a third of the state's cities and towns have enacted temporary moratoriums" with regards to marijuana dispensaries.

We were discussing story ideas that extended beyond town boundaries during a recent editors' meeting and identified several topics officials are dealing with that one could argue have had unintended consequences.

Medical marijuana is the first that comes to mind.

Who knew back in November 2012, when voters supported a ballot petition to allow the sale of medical marijuana to qualifying patients, how much scrambling would ensue to block dispensaries from being built? According to a recent report by the State House News Service, "about a third of the state's cities and towns have enacted temporary moratoriums" with regards to marijuana dispensaries. Towns are now trying to extend those moratoriums, which have caught the attention of the Attorney General's office. Previously the AG's office ruled towns could not ban the dispensaries because of the affirmative vote on the ballot referendum. Now the Attorney General has established a cut-off date of Dec. 31, 2014 for moratorium extensions.

If the ballot question was voted on today, would the measure have passed knowing what we know?

Speaking of do-overs, our legislators and governor did a quick about-face on the so-called tech tax.

Last week Gov. Patrick signed a bill repealing the sales tax on technology services that was part of a bigger tax bill that also raised the gas tax by 3 cents per gallon. While there was supposedly ample discussion before the vote concerning the tech tax, business owners, chambers of commerce and even some local politicians seemed to be confused over its actual implications.

Once the bill was signed into law, there was a groundswell of support to repeal it. To the credit of legislators and the governor, the tech tax has been repealed.

Another big issue facing coastal communities also falls into the category of unintended consequences. The Biggert-Waters National Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012 has created waves of concerns up and down the Massachusetts coast, as well as around the country, as the measure gets closer to being implemented.

Town officials and residents, as well as state and national lawmakers, are grappling with how to address the dramatic increase in insurance premiums for homes and businesses in the newly drawn up flood plain maps by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

This is another issue that has had its round of discussions, both at the local, state and national level. In some towns, Town Meeting articles were passed without question, only to fully understand the implications nearly a year later.

Informational meetings have been scheduled in coastal communities to explain the situation and go over the new flood zones and its consequences. The meetings have drawn large crowds of angered and confused homeowners and business owners, concerned over the huge increases being proposed.

Meanwhile, local legislators are planning to take their constituents' case to Washington, D.C., and the entire Massachusetts Congressional delegation has sent letters to House and Senate leadership addressing the myriad of concerns tied into the reform act.

It's still unclear if the tide will turn and the flood insurance crisis will be repealed like the state's tech tax, or at least mitigated to avoid economic disaster for many, but it's shocking the issue has reached this stage and we're just now realizing the local impact.

There are many other issues with unintended consequences. Share your concerns by sending an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Gulf Association to hold annual meeting

The Gulf Association Annual Meeting and Presentation will take place at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9, at the Lightkeeper's Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane. This event is open to the public. RSVP by Oct. 1, to katiefcutler@gmail.com or thegulfassociation@gmail.com.

The Gulf Association is an organization dedicated to conservation and preservation of the Gulf River in Scituate and Cohasset. This year's presentation will be by Sara Grady, Ecologist/South Shore Regional Coordinator for Mass. Bays Program at the North and South Rivers Watershed Association. Sara's presentation will focus on the herring study that took place this spring. She will also be joined by Student Researchers from Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research who will present on their work this summer that was partially funded by the Gulf Association.

SELECTMEN

Two Town Manager Acts to guide search

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We can move forward under both versions without conflict."
Selectmen chair Fred Koed.

Cohasset is moving forward in its search for a permanent town manager — under the guidelines of two Town Manager Acts.

The Board of Selectmen had slated Oct. 1 as the deadline to decide under which Town Manager Act (TMA) – Cohasset's original, enacted in 1997, or the current revised Act that is currently working its way through the state legislature – to conduct the town manager search. Cohasset has had an acting town manager, Michael Milanoski, since former town manager Michael Coughlin was removed in March 2012 after six months on the job.

The Board of Selectmen discussed which act to follow, and ultimately decided that both versions of the TMA are applicable.

The revised TMA contains several revisions, including outlining the town budget process, but the key change that affects the town manager office is who is eligible to apply for the position. The new version of the Act removes a prohibition against town employees or volunteer board members from applying for the job.

The selectmen were waiting for the revised TMA, which was approved by the April 2013 Town Meeting and sent to the state legislature, and had a state house hearing in July, to be signed into law before moving forward. Since the TMA is close to becoming law, the board decided that both the old and new versions could be used as guidelines for the town manager search.

"We can move forward under both versions without conflict," said selectmen chair Fred Koed.

The selectmen hired the UMass Collins Center to conduct the town manager search. The Center drafted a town profile that contains background information on Cohasset and details the town manager position. Both versions of the TMA are described in the profile.

The selectmen recently voted to authorize the Center to choose the final candidates to present to the board without the help of a town search committee. Eliminating the search committee saves the town $1500 off the price $12,500 to $14,000 of hiring the Center.

Since the new TMA has not become law just yet, the selectmen wanted to issue a caveat to the Center as they sift through candidate applications. The board voted unanimously to have the Center "clearly identify" the finalists that would not be eligible for the town manager position in the event that the new TMA does not pass.

The selectmen also agreed to cast a unanimous vote for the new town manager — provided that a qualified candidate is selected.

The board should commit to a unanimous vote, said selectman Karen Quigley. "The goal is to assure the candidates" that the selectmen are committed to working with whoever becomes the next town manager.

The idea, Koed explained, is to "follow up with a unanimous vote just to move forward when the time comes," even if the board only votes 3-1 or 3-2 on a final candidate.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said, "Whoever gets hired — that's the decision. We've gone back on decisions too many times in the past because we change our minds on things... We have to be supportive of whoever it is."

Both Kennedy and selectman Steve Gaumer admitted to being "worried about the pool" of candidates.

"Would you feel comfortable committing to a town manager when you know with your best judgment that person is not up to the task?" Gaumer asked the other board members.

Quigley said that she wouldn't vote for someone that she didn't think could do the job, and hoped the other selectmen were on the same page. "If there is a majority vote for a candidate, [it means] the board as a whole agrees they are viable candidates," said Quigley, adding, "There isn't a person at this desk that would vote for someone who is unable" to perform the town manager role.

UPDATE

Act moves to Senate

Law could be on governor's desk soon, Bradley says

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said Cohasset's amended Town Manager Act has been passed by the House and has moved over to the Senate this week.

Once the Senate passes the bill, it goes back to the house for enactment and then to Governor Deval Patrick for his signature, Bradley said.

Bradley said the bill is unchanged from the way it was voted at the Cohasset annual Town Meeting.

He explained that Cohasset Town Meeting approved it with language to make it effective immediately upon the governor's signature. The governor usually signs bills within 10 days of receiving them, he said.

The amended Town Manager Act was submitted to the State Legislature in May as a Home Rule Petition as voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting.

The petition became a bill with a docket number, H.3486, in June and had a State House hearing with the joint committee on July 23. Many Cohasset residents and officials, including two current selectmen, spoke on behalf of the bill and its merits, while a handful were there to oppose it. According to those in attendance, the majority of speakers were for the bill.

The bill details several amendments to Cohasset's Town Manager Act (TMA), including how the budget process is done and also the removal process for a town manager. The change that has garnered the most attention publicly, however, affects the eligibility of who can apply for the permanent town manager position.

The retooled TMA removes a prohibition for town employees and board members applying for the job; it also changes the cool-off period for selectmen, who are allowed to apply after they have vacated their position for 15 months.

Under the current Act, they only have to wait 12 months. Currently any town employees or board members must also wait a year before they can apply for the job.

CANDIDATES

The town, which has been without a permanent town manager since Michael Coughlin was fired in March 2012 by the then board of selectmen, recently hired the UMass Collins Center for $12,500 to $14,000 to launch a town manager search and come up with five finalists.

"So my question is: What can the board do between now and then to convince people that this is a great place to come to work?"

Selectman Diane Kennedy said her biggest fear is that qualified candidates will not want to come to Cohasset.

"I think right now we think we will get someone new and fresh in here and we will all be happy, the sun will come out, and we will all have jumped into a Mary Poppins painting," she said. "I don't think that will happen and I think that somebody, who has the capabilities to lead this town, is going to read us easily and not want to come here – that is my biggest fear."

The town, which has been without a permanent town manager since Michael Coughlin was fired in March 2012 by the then board of selectmen, recently hired the UMass Collins Center for $12,500 to $14,000 to launch a town manager search and come up with five finalists. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who has been serving for 18 months, has indicated he plans to apply for the permanent position.

Last Thursday's (Sept. 26) public meeting was held at the Lightkeepers Residence, and purposely not at Town Hall. Nutting explained he does not conduct workshops at town halls because he likes to get the boards he consults with outside their normal location to get the thinking going.

Nutting said the goal is to get the best Town Manager possible and one that will spend five or 10 years in the post because that is how long it takes to get organizations moving in the right direction.

Selectmen talked about working harder to get along with one another, being more collegial, as well as defining concrete achievable objectives and a set of rules for the board and the new town manager to follow.

While Nutting said he did not disagree with their points, he stressed that healthy debate is a good thing. "It is not about disagreeing," he said. "It is about how you act after you disagree."

He noted the board has a Code of Civil Discourse. "Let me take a wild guess – that maybe this is not being implemented."

"How can the board at this point, whether it's through a statement, your actions or through practice, turn the corner on civil discourse?" Nutting asked. "It is OK to disagree but if you are on the end of a 4-1 vote, do you haunt people for the next three months, criticize others at the coffee shop? Or is this a team and you say, 'you know what I had a bite of the apple, it did not come out my way – so on to the next issue.'"

He stressed that the board needs to come together in a short period of time, at least on the teamwork issue, in order to get as many people as possible applying for town manager.

Nutting urged the board to read the Code of Civil Discourse that is on the printed agenda before every meeting.

He also said selectmen commit now that they will pledge to work with whoever gets appointed as town manager and set established goals. He suggested the board send a copy of that commitment to the Collins Center so all the applicants are aware of their commitment.

Nutting said if the vote to appoint the new town manager is 3-2, then the next motion of the board should be to make the vote unanimous as a symbolic gesture to show the community and the person hired.

Other topics

Other topics tackled last Thursday included improving the lines of communication between selectmen and the town manager; respecting the chain of command; not beating someone up in public; allowing the town manager to run the day-to-day operations of the town; and keeping meetings timely and people on point.

Nutting said the relationship between the board and town manager is about trust. "The board has to have implicit trust in the town manager and the town manager has to trust the board. The best way to do that is through great communication. You are going to have conflict, that is inherent, but it is how you deal with that conflict – you should do it quietly, do not blast a person in the public meeting."

"You are at a critical phase here," Nutting said. He said the tone of the board that sets the stage for the entire community goes beyond meetings.

"You are either a team 24/7 or you are not," he said. "This does not mean you always have to agree but you should not throw people you disagree with under the bus the next day...It takes a lot of practice."

He said if the board can commit to teamwork and are willing to make the appointment of a new town manager unanimous – then they can, at the very least, start selling the community and maybe get a few more applicants for the permanent post.

In preparation for last Thursday's workshop, selectmen completed a questionnaire enumerating what they see as their most important jobs, major accomplishments, how to be more effective, and short- and long-term goals.

After a break, the second half of the workshop centered on establishing goals and making sure there is an action plan.

Horrified at the length of their regular meetings that often run three to four hours, Nutting spent some time urging the board to designate one meeting a month for a specific topic that cannot be covered adequately in a regular selectmen's meeting. These topics would have a timeline, and action plan:

Such as the following:

- How to handle human resources and the personnel bylaws that could include hiring a part-time staffer or sharing HR services with the school department or another town.
- Controlling legal costs that include the rules in terms of access to town counsel.
- Communication plan including updating the town's webpage on a regular basis.
- Community strategic plan and how that ties into budgets including the possibility of an interactive workshop that would include people representing a broad base of the community.
- Renovations to Town Hall, whether that is a $6 million or $2 million project.

Milanoski explained in a telephone interview this week that in early June he suggested to the board that they needed to establish fiscal 2014 goals and objectives and that bringing a professional in to facilitate might help them accomplish that. He said the board liked the idea. Several possibilities were looked at and Nutting was chosen because of his experience as both a selectman and town manager.

Selectmen to ask for intersection redesign

Beechwood, Norman Todd deemed too narrow

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen are asking a developer to reconsider the new intersection layout at Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road before further construction takes place. The board was responding to neighborhood concerns over the intersection's safety.

The selectmen held a site visit at the intersection on Friday, Sept. 27 that only a few of the board members were able to attend. However, those that ventured to the site had some concerns over the narrowness of the intersection.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she had "difficulty making a left turn there."

Selectman Karen Quigley thought the intersection has an "odd angle."

"There did seem to be a teeny bit of a bottleneck," said Quigley, adding that she "had the same experience" Gjesteby did when trying to make a turn. "You have to inch out to see traffic."

Neighbors' concerns also included construction noise from the Toll Brothers' development project. The company is building a subdivision of 41 single-family homes to be called The Estates of Cohasset.

The narrower intersection also makes it difficult for churchgoers at the Vedanta Centre to park on Sundays, according to the board. Those who park along the edge of Beechwood on Sundays "are not going to be able to park there," said selectmen chair Fred Koed. "There's kind of a loss because of the curb... I don't know if the engineer was aware of that at the time."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she was concerned about asking Toll Brothers to change the intersection design when construction is not yet complete.

"Every new road design or change is going to feel different or awkward," said Kennedy, adding that the intersection is not finished and that she would "hate to question an engineer" before construction is complete.

Gjesteby disagreed. "If we wait till it's completed, it's harder to correct it," she said of the intersection. She added that there should be "more of a curb there."

Koed said that this is a policy matter for the board to decide on moving forward, and that there was a larger discussion on whether the town should add bike lanes. Kennedy wondered if the "genesis" of that idea would start with the Planning Board, not the selectmen.

"I think it's a town-wide conversation," said Koed.

Quigley wondered if the public safety departments or schools had done a "dry run" with their vehicles at the intersection. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the developer met with public safety when the project was being designed.

Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey, who was in the audience, said that "all intersections are reviewed by the fire department to ensure their largest vehicle" can fit. While Ivimey said he recused himself from the Toll Brothers project discussions at previous Planning meetings, "I can't imagine the planning board didn't require that level of detail when approving this intersection."

Milanoski said that the police department could conduct a speed study at the intersection and look at the posted speed limit, and make sure the limit is enforced.

Bike paths, said Milanoski, could be explored as part of the state highway department's corridor study of Route 3A.

He also suggested removing a tree at the intersection to improve visibility when turning left. Jane Norton, Norman Todd Road, indicated that the tree in reference may be on her property and wanted to ensure that not too much was cut away. Koed said the tree they referred to is "in the public way" but that they would clarify the property lines.

The acting town manager, who has experience designing and developing town infrastructure projects, assured the selectmen on the intersection designs.

"While I understand and accept [that the intersection] seemed to be a little narrower than what I thought it would be, the site measurement and design" is as it was approved, Milanoski explained. However, if the board adapts a right-of-way at an intersection, "you technically have liability... if an accident happens there," said Milanoski.

Ivimey cautioned the selectmen that if they want changes, they should speak up now.

"If there's a possibility of asking the Toll Brothers to do new work, it wouldn't be a good idea to wait till [construction] is finished," said Ivimey. "I would think they'd be more inclined to work with you now rather than wait till that portion of the project is finished."

The Planning Board chair added that a wider street is "not necessarily a good thing; narrow streets tend to make people slow down and be careful."

Milanoski said he would authorize the town's Director of Project Development and Planning, Brian Joyce, to meet with the Toll Brothers and see if they are willing to take another look at the intersection, perhaps a different engineering analysis, with the caveat that the selectmen would "fast-track" an approval when the time comes.

Keeping housing authorities controlled locally is the goal

Alternative legislation to Governor's bill supported

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

"We are familiar with the unique needs of our community, and we recognize our responsibility to provide services that enhance the quality of life for our residents and for the entire town."
Taffy Nothnagle, Cohasset Housing Authority

Taffy Nothnagle, chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority, had a receptive audience when she asked the Board of Selectmen to support legislation that would keep control of local housing authorities at the local level.

Nothnagle explained that public housing officials, like the CHA, are supporting proposed legislation that would be an alternative to a bill filed by Gov. Deval Patrick to consolidate the state's 240 local housing authorities into six regional authorities.

Under the Patrick bill, the six regional authorities would take over ownership, financial and operational management of all public housing in the Commonwealth, according to the governor's office.

The CHA, which is governed by five board members, four of whom are elected and one who is a state appointee, owns and manages 64 units for the elderly and 12 for adults with special needs. The property is located behind the police station off Elm Street.

Nothnagle said the housing authority is open to reforms such as collaborative efforts among local housing authorities, streamlining the application and waiting list process, and improving accountability in the public housing system.

But the governor's bill goes too far, she said.

In a letter to the House chairman and the Senate chairman on the Joint Committee on Housing, Nothnagle stated, "The Cohasset Housing Authority believes it would be unwise and unnecessary to do away with local housing authorities and replace them with six regional agencies.

"Not only would this distance decision-making from the residents of local housing units, but it would diminish rather than increase accountability. At present the CHA is accountable to the citizens of Cohasset through its elected board members. We are familiar with the unique needs of our community, and we recognize our responsibility to provide services that enhance the quality of life for our residents and for the entire town. It makes no sense to dismantle a system that has served our town well for many years."

Time is of the essence as the legislation that the CHA is supporting is scheduled for hearings this month.

Nothnagle stressed to the selectmen that under the governor's bill, the CHA would lose rights to the property that would be controlled by a regional board that could turn around and sell it.

At their Sept. 24 meeting, selectmen voted 5-0 to support the alternative legislation to the governor's. The board opted to write its own letter to the chairs of the Joint Committee on Housing. The Sept. 30 letter was signed by chairman Fred Koed and vice chairman Diane Kennedy on behalf of the board.

At the meeting, Koed told Nothnagle: "I really believe it makes a big difference for a community to have a local board where they can attend meetings on site," he said.

sets the direction that our defense takes. Ms. Quigley and Ms. Gjesteby have been part of Koed's voting bloc since the election. Exactly where are their loyalties? How can we believe Mr. Koed, Ms. Quigley and Ms. Gjesteby will act in the best interest of the town when the Coughlin lawsuit goes to court?

As a defendant in that action, I have waived attorney client privilege because I believe the more documents get into the public domain, the weaker Mr. Coughlin's case. Has that same issue been raised at the board level? If so, what was decided? Are we prosecuting the action against Mr. Coughlin as aggressively as we can?

Then there is the issue of "election fraud," something about which Mr. Koed speaks with great passion but frequently confuses with free speech, which means he can't tell real fraud when it occurs. During the most recent selectman's campaign, Tanna Kasperowicz, an ally of Karen Quigley and a local blogger, solicited at least one candidate to accept a campaign donation from Gerd Ordelheide, the owner of the Red Lion. The solicitation, especially from a conduit, creates a host of issues. Since the BOS regulates the Red Lion through the annual issuance of its liquor license, it would create a conflict of interest for selectman or selectmen candidates to receive campaign funds from a regulated entity. It would also be a violation of the law if the contribution exceeded the legal limit. Did any candidate accept Ms. Kasperowicz's offer on behalf of Mr. Ordelheide? Does Mr. Koed care? Why not immediately ask all candidates to turn over all bank records, including the movements of monies into and out of campaign accounts?

By now the alliances should be obvious to everyone reading, making the motivations behind recent events at town hall all the clearer. As a group, Ms. Quigley, Ms. Gjesteby and Mr. Koed have voted against things (like the Bill Quigley appointment) that have had widespread support in town. Clearly, acting as a 3-2 voting block they have the ability to implement an agenda that is antithetical to the best interest of the town. One could argue they already have. So I do agree with Mr. Koed on one thing: we should take the politics out of our government. We can start with him.

Brig St. John commemoration Oct. 6

This year represents the 164th anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Div. 9, Plymouth, will host its annual commemoration of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Sunday, Oct. 6, at St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset. The event will commence at 1 p.m. with Mass in the Church Center, followed by a reception and a short speaking program in the Parish Hall featuring Dr. Bill O'Connell, Irish historian, AOH Plymouth, Div. 9, which will then be followed by a wreath-laying ceremony at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

This year represents the 164th anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John, on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor. The ship was bound for Boston from Ireland in September 1849 and encountered a tremendous storm, which blew her off course to the deadly Grampus Ledge. Nearly 100 Irish men, women and children were lost.

This commemoration remembers not only the victims of this tragedy, but also the tremendous bravery and compassion of the citizens of Cohasset who tried to rescue as many as possible and who helped those who were rescued. All are welcome to join us as we remember the victims and the heroes of this tragic event.

New co-chairs for Alt. Energy board

The Alternative Energy Committee has two new co-chairs.

Members Shaun Selha and Marie Caristi-MacDonald will be sharing chairperson responsibilities.

Selha is a professional in the energy industry at SourceOne, while Caristi-MacDonald is a former town employee.

The board was co-chaired in the past by Tanya Bodell and John Herth. Bodell was elected as chair in the spring but announced last month that she would be leaving the board to serve on the town's Advisory Committee.

With only five active members, the AEC is seeking new members. Anyone interested in energy can volunteer to join the committee. The committee is overseeing a solar panels project for the Middle-High School roof that is currently on hold, but is exploring other energy-saving initiatives for the town, such as LED lighting and electric vehicles.

Those interested in serving on the committee should send a letter of interest to the Selectmen's office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at tconnors@cohassetma.org.

COLLEGE XC

McKenna at St. Michaels

Saint Michael's College men's cross country junior Peter McKenna (Cohasset, Mass./Brooks School) was named to the Northeast-10 Conference Weekly Honor Roll for the week ending on Sunday, Sept. 29, earning his second weekly honor of the fall.

McKenna placed sixth among 71 runners during the Vermont Intercollegiate Championship on Saturday, with his time of 27:33 coming within one second of the fifth-place finisher. McKenna trimmed his season-best time and college personal record by 63 seconds.

The captain, who is in his second year of college running, helped Saint Michael's take third among eight teams at the state meet. McKenna has been the Purple Knights' top finisher at all three races this fall, breaking into the top 10 each of the last two weeks

Approching second pass

Girls head into second half of season

The Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset High School coach Deb Beal has been around long enough to know what she can expect from a team and how to make proper adjustments for success.

"As we approach the second half of the season I think we have a much better idea of what we need to prepare for to maybe be able to edge a few of those teams that we had "close encounters" with," said Beal. "We do although have to begin with East Bridgewater who beat us 8-1 in our season opener."

Beal thinks her squad is improving.

"I think we have made great strides since game one and I'm hopeful we can do the simple things a little better and quicker and our outcome will be a bit more satisfactory," she said. "We learned some hard lessons throughout the first half of the season and I'm confident we can only build off of them.

"We had three very tight games that I feel we were capable of winning but unfortunately we were not able to capitalize on some opportunities and pull out the win."

Cohasset tied Carver, Norwell and Hull in matches that were exciting and full of great soccer.

"Where we struggle the most is obviously with scoring," Beal said. "If we had a "go to player" that could regularly finish I think you'd see us play with a bit more confidence. As we have progressed through the season and we have experimented with many players in the offensive positions my hope is that someone or some two will blossom into a scorer

The football players at Cohasset High School had the easy job.

All they had to do was run and pass the ball, capitalize on the visitors' turnovers, and walk off with a 42-12 South Shore League Small victory over Hull on Friday night at Alumni Field.

The Cohasset cheerleaders had the tough job. They had to do a push-up for every point their Skippers scored, compounded each time for a total of 70 push-ups by the time Cohasset had built a 28-0 lead just 9 seconds into the

The Cohasset boys soccer team found itself in a little trouble at the beginning of the season when the team fell to 1-3 after four games.

Things are different now.

Since that slow start, Cohasset has won six consecutive games, all shutouts.

Most recently, Cohasset beat Mashpee 8-0 on Tuesday on the road.

"We had six straight shutouts," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "We've really come together after the tough early start. We've found an offensive rhythm.

In Cohassset's 8-0 win at Mashpee, Ryan McKeon scored as well as Joe Buckley, who also added a pair of assists.

McKeon has scored five goals in his last two games.

Still, Willis said the defense has become a force.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 4: Tough competition on the field, little movement in top six

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

One month of the 2013 regular season is in the books. It was a relatively uneventful week in the rankings, with only one change on both the boys' and girls' sides this week, including a debut for the boys and a switching of positions for the girls.

Despite the lack of movement in the top six, it certainly didn't mean the action on the field was poor. In fact, it was quite the opposite, allowing most teams to retain their positions following some hard-fought battles.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Monday, Sept. 23 through Sunday, Sept. 29.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – It's not like the Lakers need home field advantage to have an edge on their opponents. Refusing to relinquish the top spot yet again, the Lakers played three games last week, all at home, outscoring their opponents, 26-2, this included a two-touchdown win over Middleboro, 14-0, a 7-1 victory vs. Hanover, and a 5-1 win over Bridgewater-Raynham. The Lakers came into this week at 7-0-1, winners of seven straight.

2. Hingham – Riding a five-game winning streak through this past weekend, the Harbormen retain the No. 2 spot. They picked up a 5-2 win over Whitman-Hanson and a 3-2 victory over a streaking Scituate side.

3. Braintree – A 1-2 week is almost a guarantee for a team to drop in the rankings, but when a team faces what the Wamps ran into last week, there's no question Braintree holds down No. 3 for back-to-back weeks. The Wamps fell to Franklin, which only has one loss on the season, and first-place and unbeaten Needham, 3-1. They ended the week with a decisive, 4-1 victory against Xaverian.

4. Duxbury – A perfect week for the Dragons extended their winning streak to three games. They took wins over Quincy, 4-0 at home, and North Quincy, 3-0 on the road, to improve to 6-2, proving their bump in the road two weeks ago is a distant memory.

5. Carver – What can you say about the Crusaders? Nothing negative, that's for sure. Wins over Rockland and Pope John II upped their record to 8-0. They remain the South Shore League title contenders until someone decides to knock them off their pedestal.

6. Cohasset – A new entry into this week's rankings, their 2013 debut in the top six, the Skippers have won five straight coming into the week. They haven't allowed a goal during that span. Last week, they breezed past Randolph and Monomoy to move to 6-3 on the season.

On the bubble: Abington, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate

Week three rankings:
1. Silver Lake, 2. Hingham, 3. Braintree, 4. Duxbury, 5. Carver, 6. Pembroke

Girls

1. Scituate – Taking their seven-game winning streak into this week, the in-form Sailors appear on their way to a Patriot League title. Yes, yes, it's far too early to speculate, but this team has given plenty of reason to believe they are favorites until the end. Last week, they disposed of North Quincy and a very dangerous Hingham side to remain unbeaten.

2. Duxbury – The Dragons tore through the city of Quincy last week, knocking out Quincy, 7-0, before hammering North Quincy, 6-0. The 6-1-1 Dragons, winners of four of their last five as of Monday, have a tough go ahead of them. They opened this week at Whitman-Hanson. They travel to Scituate next week for a rematch of an early season 2-2 draw against the Sailors.

3. Hingham – Much like the Braintree boys, the Hingham girls went 1-2 last week, a deceiving one at that. Hingham leapfrogs Rockland in the rankings after 1-0 losses to both Whitman-Hanson and Scituate. Hingham ended the week with a 3-2 win over a surging Plymouth North team.

4. Rockland – The Bulldogs fall one spot to No. 4 after a 1-1 week. They opened with a 3-2 defeat at home to Carver, their first loss of the season, but then bounced back with a 4-2 win at Mashpee to improve to 7-1.

5. Norwell – The Clippers split last week, first taking a 4-0 win at home against Abington before dropping a 3-1 game to first-place East Bridgewater. The battle from here on out is for second place, that is unless at least two South Shore League teams knock off EB. Second place is a slugfest with at least four contenders.

6. Marshfield – The Rams had a light week, but despite a six-day layoff, they cruised past a weak Dennis-Yarmouth team. The Rams dropped D-Y, 8-0, at home to move their record to 5-3-1, with losses coming to Scituate, Weymouth, and Norwell, all top teams.

On the bubble: Braintree, Carver, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Silver Lake

Week three rankings:
1. Scituate, 2. Duxbury, 3. Rockland, 4. Hingham, 5. Norwell, 6. Marshfield

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

and carry the title of leading scorer."

The defense has led the way so far.

"Defensively we are very strong, we have a core of kids who play a lot of soccer and are quite experienced," Beal said. "Sophomores Meg and Emily Rosano share the three back defensive duties with sophomore Kate Gibbons. In my opinion they are the toughest and most skilled defensive line in the league. Many other South Shore League coaches have pointed out how talented and quick they are."

Building up from them controlling the middle third of the field is junior captain Emmy McGoldrick, sophomore outside midfielders Shea Kearney and Kerry Dunn and sophomore stopper Julia Richardson.

"Our offensive third is the challenging one," Beal said. "There is a lot of talent and desire up there we just have been struggling to figure it out. Senior captains Micaela Durkin and Callie Shanley are working hard to build some momentum while seniors Katherine Naughton and Maggie Littlejohn team with juniors Jacqueline Hart, Clara Baumgarten, and sophomores Lily McCarthy and Megan Fitzgerald to try to create some chemistry that will result in goal scoring," Beal said. "Senior captain Bri Crough in the goaltender position has continued to train hard and provide us with some great saves. She has been working closely with sophomores Lauren McManus and Rachel Karlberg mentoring them to take over her position next fall."

New varsity additions to this season Carly Gundersen, Isabel McCarthy, Caleigh Nolan and Madison Hagearty have been working hard and developing their skills while adjusting to the faster paced varsity game.

"Seems amazing the second half of the season is beginning, the season really does fly by," Beal said. "What we need to focus on from this point on is that each and every half of soccer we play is very important. We have set some team goals and in order to achieve them we must first decide on them, we then commit to them and then we can ultimately achieve them. The kids work hard and play hard but its a quick season and not focusing on what we want to accomplish doesn't lead to satisfactory outcomes. I am pleased with their ability to rebound and regroup and my anticipation is that we will see a much more composed and patient team on the back nine of the season."

injured Federle.

The Skippers have two losses in the South Shore League. Willis hopes there's time to catch up with unbeaten Carver.

The two teams play again.

"There are a lot of good teams in the South Shore," Willis said. "We've got quite a stretch coming up. The next five games we play are teams that beat us or played close games. We have East Bridgewater, Abington, Carver, Archbishop Williams, Norwell in a row."

In their first meting, Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 1-0, while Carver and Abington beat them.

"These next five games will see if we're a second place team or not," Willis said. "We'll see what we can do."

second quarter.

There was no need for the cheerleaders to do any more, although it appeared they could have kept their impressive exercise going.

Impressive, too, were the Skippers. The big second-quarter cushion prompted Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw to go to some of his reserves early in that second quarter.

Although the starters came back in after Hull pulled within 28-6 on junior Matt Frost's 64-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage in the second half, Cohasset reserves filtered back in during the fourth quarter.

Cohasset is off to a 3-0 start, 1-0 in the South Shore League Small-School Division. Hull is 1-2 (0-1).

When the smoke from the concession stand's grill had cleared at game's end, junior running back Cole Kissick had run for three touchdowns – a 2-yarder that made it 14-0 late in the first quarter, a 12-yarder that raised the ante to 28-0 in the second, and a 40-yard beauty that pull Hull in a 42-6 hole late in the third period.

Kissick finished the game with 123 yards on 13 carries.

Senior quarterback Chris Haggerty was 6 for 9 for 66 yards and two touchdown passes – a 30-yard strike to senior Rocco Laugelle on the Skippers' first series, only 2:28 into the game. Haggerty's second TD pass came with 7 seconds left in the opening quarter, a 23-yard bolt to senior Terence Doonan. That touchdown was precipitated by the recovery of an onsides kick by sophomore Nick Hall at the 23.

Hall recovered a Hull fumble on the next kickoff, setting up Kissick's second TD at the start of the second quarter.

Henry Butenschoen was 6 for 6 on extra points.

A 1-yard touchdown run by Ryan Gillis gave Cohasset a 34-6 lead in the third quarter, and Kissick's third TD finished the scoring with no time left in that quarter.

Hull's other touchdown came with 4:51 left in the game, a 43-yard pass from sophomore starting quarterback Joe Dubovy to senior Michael Warren.

BASKETBALL

N.E. Colonials tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club is accepting applications from Cohasset players for the program's April 2014 Ambassadors Tour to the Netherlands.

This boys basketball team will accept ten players (going into grades 10 and 11) for its ten-day spring tour. New England Colonials teams have been traveling the world to play basketball since 1981 and the program has an international reputation for excellence. The team will visit and play in Amsterdam, Leeuwarden, Utrecht and The Hague while in the Netherlands.

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club was founded in 1980 and is a nonprofit, volunteer-run program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world. The team does not hold tryouts. All applicants must be in good academic standing and capable of handling a high level of competitive play and the demands of overseas travel.

For additional information, please contact Scott Bryson at 508-734-5660 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol.com. Interested parents and players may learn more about the Colonials' program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net.

Cohasset resident Stevens running for cancer care

The Cohasset Mariner

On October 13, Jeffrey Stevens, of Cohasset, will be running in the 13th annual B.A.A. Half Marathon® presented by Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund, as a member of the official Dana-Farber team.

Each of the more than 650 Dana-Farber team members will raise awareness and at least $500 to support adult and pediatric cancer care and research at Dana-Farber. Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund have partnered with the B.A.A. in the half marathon for eleven years. During this time, runners on the Dana-Farber team have raised more than $3.5 million to fuel lifesaving discoveries. To support a runner in the B.A.A. Half Marathon, go to www.RunDanaFarber.org.

"As the Dana-Farber runners dedicate themselves to running the B.A.A. Half Marathon each fall, they embrace both the personal challenge of this race and the opportunity to join the larger race to conquer cancer by raising critical funds for the Jimmy Fund," says Jack Fultz, Dana-Farber's training advisor and 1976 Boston Marathon® men's champion.

The 13.1-mile rolling course is an out-and-back loop that runs along the Emerald Necklace park system. It will begin and end in White Stadium in Boston's Franklin Park. The event attracts a field of more than 7,000 runners, including world-class athletes. The race is one of three annual fundraising events that are part of the longstanding partnership between the Boston Athletic Association and Dana-Farber. The Boston Marathon® Jimmy Fund Walk is the only walk sanctioned to take place along the historic Boston Marathon® route and the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge (DFMC) includes a team of Dana-Farber runners who participate in the Boston Marathon® each April.

Dana-Farber's B.A.A. Half Marathon team is one of many ways runners can support the lifesaving mission of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Participants can run on an official Dana-Farber team, or run in any race, of any distance, in any city, while raising funds for Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund.

For more information visit RunDanaFarber.org. If you have registered to run the B.A.A. Half Marathon and would like to fundraise for Dana-Farber, please call the Dana-Farber Running Programs office at (617) 632-1970 or (800) 551-7036, or send an email to dfrunners@dfci.harvard.edu.

To the wire

By Mark Ducharme

The battle of the last two undefeated teams in the Classic Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League went down to the wire between the Maple Leafs and the Rangers.

The Leafs got an empty-net goal by Joe McCafferty with 10 seconds left as they stay undefeated with a 4-2 win. Mike Maher and Dave Evans both of Marshfield and Jeff Gauthier were the other goal scorers for the Leafs who never trailed in the game.

Jeff Uva had a goal and an assist and John Sances scored the goals for the Rangers.

Bob McCabe of Pembroke scored a goal and assisted on another as the Canadiens pulled out a 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Bruins.

Glen Harnisch and Jim Donnelly both of Marshfield and Tim McCrystal added a goal each for the Canadiens. Marhsfield's Tom Lema and Clem Fillion both had two assists each.

Peter Fallon of Hanover and Patrick Sherry scored the goals for the Bruins.

John Guilderson scored three goals while Scituate's Mike Evensen and Tom Piepenbrink both added a goal and an assist in the Red Wings 6-2 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks. Steve Perkinsscvored the other goal for the Wings.

Mike Murray of Norwell and Tony Rota scored the goals for Black Hawks.

Hank Mosca of Pembroke scored with 26 seconds left to tie the game and Art Riccio scored the only goal of the shootout as the Sharks rallied for 4-3 Legends Div. win over the Saints.

Tim Cruz and Richard Petrosino both of Marshfield added a goal each and Riccio had two assists for the Sharks.

Jonathan Graham, Hanover's Tom Shaughnessy and Pembroke's John MacLellan scored the goals for the Saints.

Marshfield's John Hernon broke a 3-3 tie with 3:02 left in the game to give the Crusaders a 4-3 win over the Toros in a Legends Div. game. Jim Donovan, Ed Burke and Ron Read all of Marhsfield also scored for the Crusaders.

Paul Brinkman, Mike Martin of Pembroke and Dennis Yates scored for the Toros.

Ken Wingate of Pembroke and Paul Smyth both scored a goal each in the last five minutes as the Stingers stayed undefeated as they rallied for a 2-2 tie with the Whalers in a Legends Div. matchup.

Hingham's Mark Tedeschi scored both of the Whalers goals in the second period.

ASO

Season opens with 'New World' Symphony

Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, led by music director Jin Kim, will open its 17th season on Saturday, Oct. 12, 7:30 p.m., at the Center for the Arts, Thayer Academy in Braintree. The opening night program will include Dvorak's Symphony No. 9, "The New World," Webern's "Passacaglia" and Beethoven's Piano Concerto, No. 4, featuring pianist Misha Namirovsky. Namirovsky dazzled ASO guests at the recent Musical Views event in Cohasset.

"Misha is a superb pianist who distinguished himself at the 2013 World Piano Competition. I am very much looking forward to sharing his talents with our audiences," said Kim. "Beethoven's fourth piano concerto is unusual in that it begins with solo piano followed by the orchestra. It is a wonderful piece to showcase Misha's musical sensibilities."

"The New World Symphony" is familiar to most, highlighted by its hauntingly beautiful "Going Home" melody. The piece was written in 1892-3 shortly after composer Antonin Dvorak arrived in the United States. "The 'new world' theme is appropriate for the ASO's opening celebration over Columbus Day weekend," said executive director Diane Kennedy. "In fact, the 'new' motif resonates throughout the concert season, as we explore new audiences and outreach initiatives that allow us to share the ASO's terrific group of talented professional musicians with a wider audience."

This year, the ASO has introduced a separate price point for audience members between the age of 20 and 30, as well as adult, senior and youth price points. "Our dedicated family of concert-goers knows well the musical quality of the orchestra. They are the ASO's best ambassadors. We are always seeking new opportunities to get the word out and are working with a number of South Shore schools, businesses and organizations to bring more people to the concerts – we definitely subscribe to the 'if you bring them, they will come back' philosophy," Kennedy said.

For more information on the orchestra, information on group tickets, corporate sponsorship packages, or individual concert/program tickets, call the ASO offices at 781-331-3600 or visit the ASO website at: atlantic-symphony.org. Tickets are priced between $20 and $40.

'Mr. Postman' plays percussion

Peter Lindfors wears two hats

By Michael Reilly
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of the Massachusetts Cultural Council's Local Cultural Council (LCC) program, which is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, humanities, and sciences annually. Applications for the coming year are due October 15.

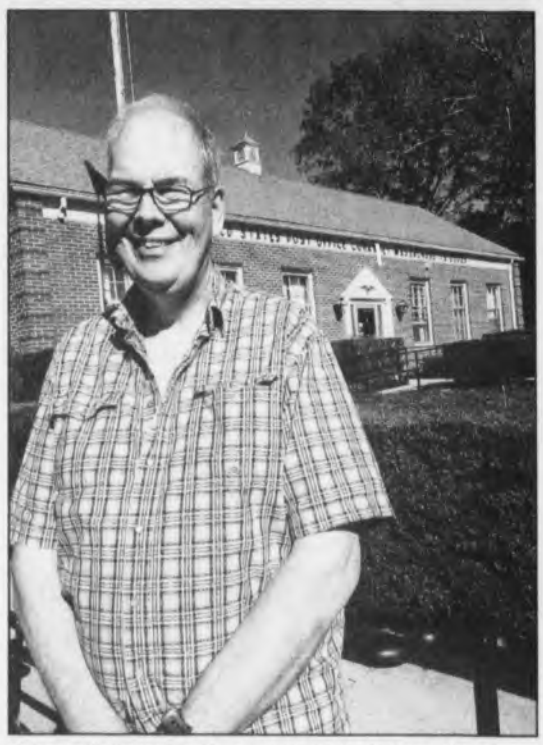
One regular Cohasset Cultural Council grant recipient has been local musical group "The Rusty Skippers." Peter Lindfors, a member of the band, recently spoke about his group while on lunch break from his job at the Cohasset Post Office.

Lindfors is a fixture behind the counter at the post office and is always ready with a joke or a helpful bit of advice on postage or packaging, and he's a whiz with zip codes.

It's less known that Lindfors is also a passionate and dedicated drummer. He plays in a number of different bands around the South Shore, including the Rusty Skippers, with whom he has been playing for over seven years.

Who are the Rusty Skippers?

According to Lindfors, "The Rusty Skippers are a group of amateur musicians who want to take up their instruments again. Some folks played in high school, some folks played in high school and college. Basically, we're a wind ensemble with percussion. So we have brass, woodwinds and percussion instruments. Occasionally we add a vocalist. A wind ensemble is not an orchestra. There are no string instruments in our group. We have sax, trumpet, clarinet, flutes as well as percussion."



How many Skippers are there?

"We have anywhere from 13 or 15 people at a rehearsal to approximately 30 at a concert," said Lindfors. "It varies, but basically when we play a concert, we have 25 to 30 members playing."

The Rusty Skippers just finished their Summer Concert Series last weekend at a church in Weymouth. Now they will be gearing up for their Christmas concert series. On the first Saturday of December, they'll be playing on the Common at the First Parish Meeting House church.

"Sometimes we play with a chorus. We'll play three or four Christmas concerts," said Lindfors. "We play marches. We play medleys, orchestral concertos, movements and what not. We mix it up. It's almost like the Boston Pops. They play popular music and orchestral pieces that are well known; songs folks recognize."

How do the Rusty Skippers use the funds they receive from the Cultural Council?

"Mostly to purchase sheet music," said Lindfors. "That's where it goes mostly. The members don't get paid; it's a not for profit group."

Steve Biagini is the director of the ensemble and also Director of Instrumental Music at Cohasset's Deer Hill School.

According to Lindfors, Biagini "does it all. He purchases the music. He fills out the application for the funding and he does it all for free. He's a volunteer; it's all volunteer. I think he's been doing it for 15 years, maybe longer."

Lindfors added, "The sheet music isn't cheap and you have to buy 40 copies of every piece we do, and we might have 40 or 50 pieces. They also bought a small PA system that we use for the vocalists."

Betts Howes Murray, the Communications Director for the band, said that Biagini has been leading the band since 1996. The ages of Rusty Skippers members ranges from college students to folks in their eighties.

Murray explained that The Rusty Skippers Band prepares two programs each year for a series of concerts. The band plays annually at the Cohasset Memorial Day Parade, Veterans Park concert, Relay for Life, South Shore Arts Festival, Cohasset Day, as well concerts for the towns of Cohasset, Marshfield, Hanover, and in churches around the South Shore.

"The highlight of the holiday season is the annual Pops Concert at First Parish Cohasset," said Murray. "For the past two years, the band has had the wonderful opportunity to perform at the Jane C. Carr Amphitheater at the South Shore Conservatory, a venue that makes the band sound its very best. The band is a joy to us! We love making and sharing music!"

Lindfors said that his favorite part of being in the Skippers is "just being able to play." He still plays professionally in other groups such as a classic rock band called Line Drive.

"I also play in a country band called Something to Talk About and I play in another rock band called Night School. That band only does about two gigs per year," said Lindfors. "I play with another band that only plays one gig a year. It's fun.

However, "The best thing about the Rusty Skippers is that I love playing in an ensemble," Lindfors added. "For me, it is the ultimate ensemble because we don't take it super, super, serious. And that's the fun part. It's all about having fun and we make music. We're not perfect. We're not always in tune. We don't always articulate perfectly."

Lindfors has been at the Cohasset Post Office for 10 years, and 25 years total in the U.S. Postal Service.

"I can't believe I've been here this long!" said Lindfors.

When reminded of how well known he is in town, he responded, "I love the people here. People ask, 'Cohasset, aren't they a bunch of snobs?' and I say, 'absolutely not.' The people here are great, if you're nice to them, they respond in kind," said Lindfors.

"I was laid up for a good part of August and I really missed the customers, 'cause I have a great rapport with the customers," he continued. "If someone comes in and can't fill something out, I'll do it for them. I don't mind. If I go into Stop & Shop, I can't get out of there quickly. I see somebody in every aisle and they say 'Can I ask you a postal question?' and I say 'Yeah, shoot,' you know, it's fun. I don't mind helping people."

COHASSET CULTURAL COUNCIL

Grant applications are being accepted

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Mike Reilly, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset; including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,250 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Arts Center Arts Festival, St. Stephens Carillon recitals, Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Cohasset Dramatic Club, Rusty Skippers Community Band, and individuals such as Richard Clarke for his "And Now Mark Twain," project.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Susan Keene at 781-923-0024 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.aspx. The page for Cohasset is www.mass-culture.org/cohasset. Application forms will also be available at Town Hall.

Pumpkin decorating contest coming!

Here's what's happening at the Cohasset Farmers Market next week.

The Pumpkin Decorating Contest is returning to the Cohasset Farmers Market!

Mark your calendars — next Thursday, Oct. 10 at 4 p.m. is the annual Pumpkin Decorating Contest. Everyone is welcome to enter.

Small pumpkins will be available to purchase for decorating at the Pumpkin Table. Colored markers will be provided, or you can decorate your pumpkin at home and bring it to the market. Let your creative juices flow to adorn and/or carve your pumpkin with any manner of expressive genius! Prizes will be awarded.

If your pumpkin is of the edible variety, be sure to make something delicious with it. Any recipe using winter squash can be prepared with edible pumpkin. If you missed the market's winter squash recipes for Butter Roasted Butternut Squash and Toasted Winter Squash Seeds in last week's issue, just go to www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com. Or try a delicious recipe for Pumpkin Soup with Honey and Cloves to tickle your taste buds (see sidebar for recipe).

Last month of the market

Thursday, Oct. 17 is the last day of the Farmers Market, but this year's season is expected to end with a flourish.

A beautiful, bountiful Harvest Basket will be raffled; then, taste a luscious Harvest Vegetable Casserole prepared with fresh produce from our local farmers. Come say goodbye to all our wonderful vendors. You might just want to pick up a few gifts for the holidays! See you at the Market!

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6 p.m. through Oct. 17. For more info, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

Pumpkin Soup with Honey and Cloves

Serves eight.

Ingredients:

- 2 tablespoon (1/4 stick) butter
- Large carrots, chopped
- Celery stalks, chopped
- Large onion, chopped
- 2-pound pumpkin peeled, seeded, chopped (about 6 cups)
- Cups (or more) chicken stock or canned low-salt broth
- Whole cloves
- 1/2 cup whipping cream
- 2 tablespoons honey

Preparation:

Melt butter in Dutch oven over medium-high heat. Add carrots, celery and onion; sauté until tender, about 8 minutes.

Add pumpkin, 6 cups stock and cloves. Cover and simmer until pumpkin is very tender, about 25 minutes.

Discard cloves. Purée soup in batches in blender.

Return to Dutch oven. Stir in cream and honey. Bring to simmer. Season to taste with salt and pepper (Can be made one day ahead. Chill. Bring to simmer before serving, thinning with more stock, if desired).

Swirl a little cream decoratively into each bowl of soup for an elegant presentation.

RACE FOR THE CURE

Komen MA hopes to top $440K

By Ed Baker
ebaker@wickedlocal.com

Nearly 2,500 people of all ages raised funds in the Race for the Cure against breast cancer on Sunday, Sept. 29 and organizers of the event are still tallying the donations, according to Ronni Cohen-Boyer, executive director of the Massachusetts Affiliate of the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure.

"Our goal was to top $440,000," she said.

According to Cohen-Boyer, the number of participants in the race was somewhat less than last year's event and competition from various races by non-profit groups could have siphoned off some runners.

"A lot of non-profits are doing similar types of events," she said.

The Race for the Cure is Komen's largest fundraiser of the year and donations are used for medical research and patient support services.

Cohen-Boyer said fundraising for Komen by Boston race organizers would continue throughout October.

"We are hoping to raise $440,000," she said. "We are not there yet, but we will continue with some fundraising through the fall."

Up to 75 percent of the net funds raised locally stay in the state to support local community health and education programs. The other 25 percent funds Komen's national research programs.

The foundation recently announced that $4.7 million in funding would go to researchers at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Harvard Medical School.

Weymouth resident Ginny Boddie, 59, a four-year-breast cancer survivor, said prior to the race she was participating in the event to give back to those who helped her get the best medical care.

"When I was diagnosed, I had a lumpectomy and it did not work," said Boddie, a director of regulations and corporate compliance at Manet Community Health Center in Quincy.

Boddie said her doctors recommended performing a mastectomy.

"I said that if you do that, you should remove both breasts and it was a good choice because after the surgery, they performed a procedure and said they had detected cancer in my right breast," she said.

Boddie said she was also motivated to take part in Race for the Cure because her late mother battled breast cancer

"She was diagnosed at age 60," Boddie said. "She had another bout of cancer at age 85."

Norwell resident Suzanne Higgins, 42, said she has been participating in the Race for the Cure during the past several years to raise funds in memory of her friend Sharon Gallagher, who died of breast cancer.

"Sharon was sick in 2008 and I thought I would support her by taking part in the race," Higgins said. "Sadly, she passed away, but I still do the race every year. I feel for her family and children and this is something I can do to keep her memory alive."

Higgins said running in memory of Sharon won't bring her back, but it will help families who are coping with the disease.

"I'll be running in a race in Arizona in November," she said.

Higgins said she has participated in various Komen races during the past several years and the events are a physical challenge to complete.

"You see people from all walks of life and people who are struggling with cancer," she said.

Scituate resident Joseph McNally, a Clean Harbors vice-president, said he got involved in Race for the Cure because his mother successfully battled breast cancer.

"She eventually succumbed to another form of cancer," he said. "My wife's best friend died of it (breast cancer)."

McNally said a friend convinced him to join a Bank of America team in the Komen Race.

"It is a worthy cause," he said. "I ran in the Falmouth (Komen) race last year."

Cohen-Boyer said the proceeds from the race also help fund support services for financially strapped patients who are facing hardships with buying basic necessities like food because of medical costs.

"Some parents have to make choices about putting their kids' needs before paying medical expenses," she said.

The Race for the Cure event in Boston has been occurring since 1993.

"It started with a group from New Balance and they have been partnering with the National Susan G. Komen Foundation." Cohen-Boyer said. "They wanted to have a local race. It has been promoted over the years and held in different locales."

FACING FORWARD

Finding comfort in support groups

By Jessica Trufant
The Patriot Ledger

When Jean Leavitt was diagnosed with breast cancer, she felt scared and overwhelmed, and she needed to talk to her husband about it constantly.

He was great, Leavitt said, but eventually he did not know what else to say.

Leavitt, who then lived in Florida, formed a support group so women with breast cancer would have others to turn to who truly understood their struggles.

"I tried to do everything all on my own, but at some point, something had to give," she said. "That support group got me back on my feet."

Now, 17 years later, Leavitt, who lives in Weymouth, is a facilitator at South Shore Hospital's breast cancer support group, Facing Forward. She runs the group with Marshfield resident Barbara Ellis, a social worker at the Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in Weymouth, which operates in affiliation with the hospital.

"It's not a 'cry in your beer' type thing. We give them tools to empower and educate themselves," said Leavitt. "The women can relate to each other and share things they know will stay in the room. The intimate relationships, you can't duplicate them anywhere else."

Support from groups, family members and friends are critical for those facing a cancer diagnosis.

Research gathered by the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation shows that support can reduce anxiety and depression, and improve mood and self-image for cancer patients.

Julie Salinger, a clinical social worker with Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, said humans have a desire to feel understood, which is why support groups can be so therapeutic.

"Isolation is a huge problem for people with cancer, and at support groups there's a commonality and sense of comfort that everyone gets it," Salinger said. "Often people feel more comfortable talking about scary things in the absence of family, at least at first."

Nearly every cancer treatment center offers support groups, where patients share information about breast cancer, talk about personal experiences and look after each other's well being.

"You don't have to solve the problem, you just need to let them know they're understood and you're there for whatever they need."
Barbara Ellis

The Facing Forward group focuses on topics like relationships, body image and nutrition, and specialists often visit to speak and answer questions.

For family and friends, giving support can mean being there to listen, offering a hug, helping with chores and accompany patients to appointments.

There are no set guidelines for how to best support those with breast cancer, Salinger said, and there is no scientific proof that support will improve the odds for survival.

But family, friends and social groups can have a great impact on quality of life for patients and survivors.

"The goal of any treatment is to keep you alive, and if you're going to be alive, you might as well be living a good life, and that's where support comes in," Salinger said.

Loved ones offer the best support by following the patient's lead, Salinger said.

"Be willing to go up and down with them. Sometimes patients want to talk about it and sometimes they don't, and it's not consistent and it's not linear," she said.

Family members also help most when they have support for themselves, Salinger said, as minimizing their own needs can lead to burnout.

"It's like the airline instructions. You put your own oxygen mask on before you put on your kid's because you want to make sure you can breath first," she said.

The best way loved ones offer support, Ellis said, is simply to listen.

"You don't have to solve the problem, you just need to let them know they're understood and you're there for whatever they need," she said.

"Say, 'I'm thinking about you, I care about you and I'm here for you,'" Leavitt added. "That's all you can do."

Sharing 'Survival Lessons'

By Kathie Ragsdale
kragsdale@wickedlocal.com

Alice Hoffman discovered the lump on her breast the same day she had appeared on The Oprah Winfrey Show to celebrate the choice of her novel "Here on Earth" as an Oprah Book Club selection.

One minute she was smiling on camera before a viewing audience of millions; hours later, she was alone in her shower, overcome with dread.

But the celebrated, best-selling author came to believe over time that the co-mingling of joy and sorrow, exhilaration and fear, that she experienced that day are part of what it means to be alive – and that we all have choices about how to respond to such events.

It is a message she now offers up to others in her latest book, a thin, 83-page volume that is her first work of nonfiction, "Survival Lessons."

It is meant not only for survivors of breast cancer, but for those who have experienced any type of trauma or loss in their lives.

"In many ways, I wrote 'Survival Lessons' to remind myself of the beauty of life, something that's all too easy to overlook during the crisis of illness or loss," she writes in the book's preface.

It took 15 years from the time of her diagnosis for her to produce it.

Sitting in a restaurant in her adopted town of Concord,

Hoffman, now 61, reflected on the reasons why.

Though she often spoke of her illness at fundraising events and with close friends, "I'm not a really public person," she said. Nor was the woman who had given voice to so many fictional characters accustomed to writing in a voice that was her own.

"It's really different," she said. "I think that's why it took me so long to write it."

In truth, Hoffman said, she wrote the book for herself. She wanted to hold on to the wisdom it contains.

"When you're diagnosed, everything important kind of rises to the surface. It's a very pure time, like in the light," she explained in a softened voice. "When you get better, you get back to normal life... Even though I'm a survivor, I still experience other kinds of trauma. I still need those lessons."

The book's chapters elaborate on her lessons – everything from "choose your heroes" to "choose to accept sorrow" to "choose to forgive" – and include an unexpected smattering of recipes.

Recipes?

"When you're cooking, you're almost hyper-focused on what you're doing. It's like a zen activity, a way to remove yourself from your sorrow for a short period of time," Hoffman explained with a laugh.

Hoffman's advance from "Survival Lessons" is being donated to the Hoffman Breast Center at Mount Auburn Hospital, which she helped to create in gratitude for the breast cancer treatment she received there.

For 15 years, she has also organized an annual "Evening with Your Favorite Authors" event, which has generated some $2 million for the center, located in Cambridge. Renowned authors donate their time and the American Repertory Theater donates its space for the gathering. This year's event is Monday, Oct. 7, and features writers Jodi Picoult, Gregory Maguire, Ann Leary, Ann Hood and Lee Woodruff.

Hoffman, who has published 21 novels, three books of short fiction and eight books for children and young adults, says this will be the last of annual events and that she "invited people I really admire."

She still meets with the women in her breast cancer survivor group of 15 years' standing, urges women to get their mammograms – whatever the latest medical recommendation – and expresses admiration for women like actress Angelina Jolie, who underwent a preventive double mastectomy after doctors discovered she carried a faulty gene that left her with a high risk of getting breast cancer, and who went public with her story.

"The most gorgeous woman on the earth can have this and still be the most gorgeous woman on the earth," Hoffman said. "She has done a huge favor to all other women."

These days, Hoffman is working on a collection of prose for Rosie's Place, the Boston sanctuary for poor and homeless women, as part of a 40th anniversary project to which other writers are contributing.

She is also celebrating the news that rights to her novel "The Dovekeepers," about four women who outlast the horrors of Masada in the Judean desert, have been purchased for a television miniseries. The book is considered by many to be her masterpiece.

"It's like the ultimate survival story," Hoffman says. "People have amazing strength."

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

'Making Strides' kicks off Oct. 6

Join the American Cancer Society to finish the fight against breast cancer by participating in the 21st annual Making Strides Against Breast Cancer in Boston Sunday, Oct. 6. The event will honor and celebrate breast cancer survivors, educate the public about the importance of prevention and early detection, and raise funds to help the American Cancer Society do the most for people with breast cancer today to end the disease tomorrow. The 5-mile fundraising walk starts and ends at the DCR Hatch Shell. A 3-mile walk option is also available. There is no fee to register. Registration and rolling start are 8-10 a.m.

Making Strides walks in nearly 300 communities nationwide help to raise $60 million dollars for the American Cancer Society each year to save lives from breast cancer. The dollars raised fund groundbreaking research to find, prevent, treat, and cure breast cancer; ensure access to mammograms for women who need them; and provide free resources and support to the one in two newly diagnosed women who turn to the Society for help and support, including transportation and lodging during treatment.

Making Strides in Boston will also feature a unique opportunity for residents to enroll in the American Cancer Society's Cancer Prevention Study-3 (CPS-3). The national study will help researchers better understand the lifestyle, environmental, and genetic factors that cause or prevent cancer, and will further efforts to eliminate cancer as a major health concern for future generations.

CPS-3 enrollees must be between the ages of 30 and 65, must never have been diagnosed with cancer, and must be willing to make a long-term commitment to the study. Qualified participants can enroll between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the CPS-3 Tent, no appointment necessary. While initial enrollment takes just 20 to 30 minutes, the study is expected to produce benefits for decades to come. For more information or to learn how to become involved with CPS-3, visit cancer.org/cps3, email cps3@cancer org, or call toll-free 1-888-604-5888.

Flagship Sponsors of the 21st annual Making Strides in Boston include: Al Fresco All Natural; The Cumberland Gulf Group of Companies; MFS Investment Management, Inc.; Siemens; The TJX Companies, Inc. and WeGotSoccer. Exclusive Walker Challenge Sponsor is Hologic, Inc. Media partners are MAGIC 106.7 and 7News on 7NBC and CW56.

To sign-up, or for more information about Making Strides Against Breast Cancer of Boston, call your American Cancer Society at 1-800-227-2345, email strides_boston@cancer.org, or visit MakingStridesWalk.org/bostonma.

RESEARCH

following initial surgical treatment," says Dr. Katherina Zabicki Calvillo, associate director of the Breast Center, Dana Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

The latest clinical trials are only a click on a website away: clinicaltrials.gov is recommended by advocates and physicians as the best centralized source, maintained by the National Institutes of Health. And the websites of many community hospitals have links to clinical trials they are participating in.

"Physicians in the community have point people in the academic centers, and we go out to attend tumor boards at the community level," Calvillo said. "People can always come into Boston for second opinions and then go back out to their community for ongoing clinical work."

Dr. Eric P. Winer, director of the Breast Oncology Program at the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, also traced significant changes over the past 12 years.

"We no longer think of breast cancer as one disease, but as a family of four or five distinct types of diseases, each with a different personality," he said. "We can have a much more detailed understanding of the underlying biology. Our ability to apply that knowledge to the clinical trials we have underway has advanced incredibly."

Oncologists are also learning more about why the same types of cancer act so much more or less aggressively in different people.

A range of factors, Winer said, are thought to influence why one woman will deal better, from a biological standpoint, with a cancer and its response to treatment – why her disease does not recur or is not as aggressive if it does recur, after the initial treatment.

That has sparked renewed interest in the immune system. "Something in our immune system has allowed us to create the cancer (the unregulated growth of cells) and something allows some people, with treatment, to enhance their ability to contain that cancer."

The new genetic code information is helping doctors target which types of cancer will respond to which chemotherapy.

"The problem with drugs that are thought to prevent cancer can be you end up having a lot of people taking a drug to prevent something that never does develop anyway," Winer said.

A steady source of research funding for Massachusetts medical centers and other institutions has been Susan G. Komen for the Cure. Ronni Cohen-Boyar, executive director of Komen MA and a breast cancer survivor, said that this year, $4.7 million in new funding will go to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Harvard Medical School to research on environmental factors that influence breast cancer development. Other Komen research grants in Massachusetts are looking at gene mutations, treatments and preventing recurrence.

"The most exciting work going on now is the move towards personalized treatment – getting at the root cause of each individual tumor, what is causing it to occur, why some tumors are receptive and some resistant, to chemo therapy, who needs treatment, at what point, when we are over treating versus when we can get to the early stages," she said.

The Massachusetts Breast Cancer Coalition recently announced a new video series, MBCC Research Updates, designed to present the facts about environmental health and breast cancer prevention. Each short video features an interview with a researcher, medical professional, university professor, breast cancer activist, or other prominent figure in the field.

Funds go to local outreach

$10.1 million distributed to community-based programs

By Sue Scheible
The Patriot Ledger

When Barnstable County was identified as having the highest breast cancer death rate in the state for women over age 40, the Community Health Center of Cape Cod rose to the challenge.

The assessment came from Susan G. Komen for the Cure Massachusetts. It found that in certain regions of the state, low-income, uninsured women needed to know about mammograms and other preventive care and to be offered help getting treatment.

The center, based in Mashpee, proposed a plan: train more community health workers and medical assistants, especially those who speak Portuguese, to find and connect with patients eligible for mammograms. The staff would ask if they are getting the scans and provide help with other medical care as needed.

This year, the center was awarded a $40,000 community health grant from Komen MA. Health workers reviewed records of 15,00 patients and identified 3,600 eligible for mammograms. Front-line health workers have been trained to contact each woman and offer assistance.

During the past 30 years, Komen MA has distributed some $10.1 million to community-based outreach. The money helps provide education, screenings, treatment, financial aid and social and emotional support. That represents 75 percent, of the money raised by Komen MA. The other 25 percent supports Komen's national awards and research grants program.

Seven other Massachusetts community health programs are receiving the latest round of 2013-14 funding. They include Community Savings Inc. of Boston, Joseph Smith Community Health Center in Boston, the Breast Center at Milford Regional Medical Center, the YWCA of Greater Lawrence, the YWCA of Southeastern Massachusetts in New Bedford, Holyoke Health Center in Holyoke and the Woman's Imaging Center at Berkshire Medical Center in Pittsfield.

What's new in research and treatment options?

Research into the causes, prevention and treatment of breast cancer is underway in many medical centers. Here is what some of the cutting edge research is looking at as it may affect the risk of breast cancer.

Causes

- Environmental: exposure to toxins and other potential influences on immune system.
- Lifestyle factors: the effects of weight gain or loss, exercise, and diet on cancer development.
- Genetic variations: testing for BRCA1 and BRCA2 gene mutations. Also how common gene variations may affect risk, whether a single gene variant or several together.

Prevention

- Drugs such as Fenretinide and retenoids, drugs related to Vitamin A. Tamoxifen is already know to reduce risk.
- To better select women who benefit from adjuvant therapy, studies to link specific gene patterns to the more aggressive cancers.
- Newer imaging tests such as molecular breast imaging, when a radioactive tracer is injected into the blood. The tracer attaches to cancer cells. This is being studied to find out if it will be useful.
- Lab tests to detect cancer cells that have broken off from a tumor and are circulating in the blood.
- 3D mammography. Three views help doctors see problem breast areas more clearly.

Treatment

- Breast conserving surgery or oncoplastic surgery. Combines cancer surgery with breast surgery.
- Breast reconstruction surgery. For women who have a mastectomy. Uses free-flap procedures.
- A new look at breast implants.
- Radiation therapy has advanced. Accelerated partial breast irradiation may be as effective and more convenient than standard radiation, which can take weeks.
- Chemotherapy drugs that target cancers caused by BRCA gene mutations, called PARP inhibitors, have shown promise.
- Targeted therapies use drugs that work with gene changes in cells that cause cancer.
- Drugs that target blood vessels that nourish cancer cells. Earlier anti-angiogenesis drugs including Avastin did not prove helpful, but several other new anti-genesis drugs are being tested in clinical trials.
- Afinitor is a targeted therapy drug that seems to help hormone therapy drugs work better.
- Other potential targets for breast cancer drugs are being identified. Bone strengthening drugs being considered include bisphosphonates and also Vitamin D.
